Marines Set To Operate Out Of Camp Dawson

The 24th Marine Expeditionary Unit, one of the Corps' three seagoing strike forces based in Camp Lejeune, N.C., will begin to operate from Camp Dawson in Preston County, home of the West Virginia Army National Guard.

They are part of a 1,700-person Marine Corps strike force that is beginning three weeks of intensive training in preparation for an overseas deployment.

In groups of 150 to 200, members will raid abandoned building in Morgantown, W.Va., to simulate situations they may encounter during deployment.

This training is called Truex, Training in an Urban Environment Exercise.

"This allows Marines to work with people safely, and work in and around buildings," noted Gunnery Sergeant Perry L. Vinson.

These exercises are done all over the Eastern Seaboard and Midwest, said Vinson.

Vinson and his staff rented a fleet of 40 vehicles from Enterprise in Oakland to help transport the Marines to and from the camp.

Pesticide App. Exam Scheduled

The Maryland Private Pesticide Applicator's Examination will be given on Thursday, May 13, at Garrett College, McHenry, in the Ag. Building at 9 a.m. Those interested who need to obtain study materials (Cost $14.00) should write to the Garrett County Extension Office, 1916 Maryland Highway, Suite A, Mtn. Lake Park, MD 21550.

Corn Planting Progress Noted

Despite a few showers last week, Maryland farmers had 4.7 days suitable for field work which they used to advance planting activities. Corn planting advanced to 33 percent complete, nearly doubling the progress from the previous week. Corn, green peas, and tomato planting progress is ahead of schedule. While planting progress is close to average for many crops, dry weather is needed to stay on schedule.

As the first cutting of hay is soon to begin, hay supplies are 46 percent adequate, 39 percent short, and 15 percent very short. Pasture condition is 23 percent excellent, 54 percent good, 17 percent fair, 4 percent poor, and 2 percent very poor.

Small grains are in mostly good condition with winter wheat rated 14 percent excellent, 64 percent good, 19 percent fair, and 3 percent poor. Barley condition is 18 percent excellent, 63 percent good, 16 percent fair, and 3 percent poor.

TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM EXPLAINED

Under the new Trade Adjustment Assistance Program (TAA), the USDA provides technical assistance and cash benefits to eligible producers of raw agricultural commodities. Certain fisherman and aquaculture producers may also qualify.

To receive assistance under TAA, producers must first petition the Secretary of Agriculture. If the secretary determines that producer prices in the most recent marketing year were less than 80 percent of the average prices in the preceding five marketing years, and that increases in imports of like or directly competitive commodities contributed importantly to the decline in prices, producers will be eligible for assistance.

The Trade Act of 2002 established the TAA and authorized an appropriation of not more than $90 million for each fiscal year 2003 through 2007 to help producers adjust to competition from imports.

A group of agricultural commodity producers or qualified fishermen in the United States, or their authorized representatives, may file a petition for TAA. The petitioners may file on behalf of all producers in the United States, or they may file solely on behalf of producers in an impacted area of one or more states. If the secretary determines that the eligibility requirements have been satisfied, the producers covered by the petition are certified as eligible for TAA.

The petition Form FSA-930 is available on the Internet at: http://www.fas.usda.gov/itp/taa/resource.htm or www.sc.egov.usda.gov. The petition can also be requested by telephone at 202-720-2916; or by writing to: USDA, Foreign Agricultural Service, Trade Adjustment Assistance, STOP 1021, 1400 Independence Avenue, SW, Washington, DC 20250-1021, or by e-mail at: trade.adjustment@fas.usda.gov.

After petitions are approved by USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS), producers may apply for TAA benefits at their county office of USDA's Farm Service Agency. Producers may also request advice from their county FSA office regarding the completion and submission of applications.

Applications may be submitted in person, by fax, or electronically if applicants first complete certain identification and authorization forms at the county FSA office.

The TAA application Form FSA-229, Application for Trade Adjustment Assistance for Individual Producers, is available at www.sc.egov.usda.gov and county FSA offices.

Additional information on the Trade Adjustment Assistance Program is available from the Farm Service Agency web site at www.fsa.usda.gov and the Foreign Agricultural Service web site at www.fas.usda.gov. Producers may telephone the Preston County Farm Service Agency at 304-329-1923, fax 304-329-3056, or visit the FSA office located in the Corner Mall of the Kingwood Plaza.

Pa. Couple Visit Southeastern Europe; Meet TriState Relief Sale Beneficiaries

by Doug & Harriet Berg

Members of Springs Mennonite Church in Springs, Pa., the Bergs live in Hidden Valley, Pa., and are on the board of the TriState Relief Sale, an annual benefit auction which raises funds for the Mennonite Central Committee, based in Akron, Pa. The volunteer organization uses the proceeds to help victims of hunger, disease, and war throughout the world. Last month, the Bergs visited southeastern Europe, in the war-torn areas of Croatia, Bosina-Herzegovina, and Serbia.

The purpose of our trip was to view first hand the needs of the people who are victims of the war of 1992-1995 and to report to the volunteers how the funds of Mennonite Central Committee are used.

Millions of people of Croatia, Bosnia-Herzegovina, and Serbia have either been displaced (forced to flee from their homes to safe havens), become refugees (left to live in other countries), or killed.

The countries comprise various religious communities – Christian Orthodox, Catholic, Islamic, Jewish, and Protestant.

Nationalists used the different religions to build up hatred among the people and incited them to war to enlarge the countries' borders and give power to their leaders. The scars of war are still very evident.

The needs of the people are great. The refugees in camps have no income – unemployment is 50 percent or greater. People are returning to their homes – homes that have been mostly destroyed and personal items confiscated.

The wounds of war are also great, and people distrust each other.

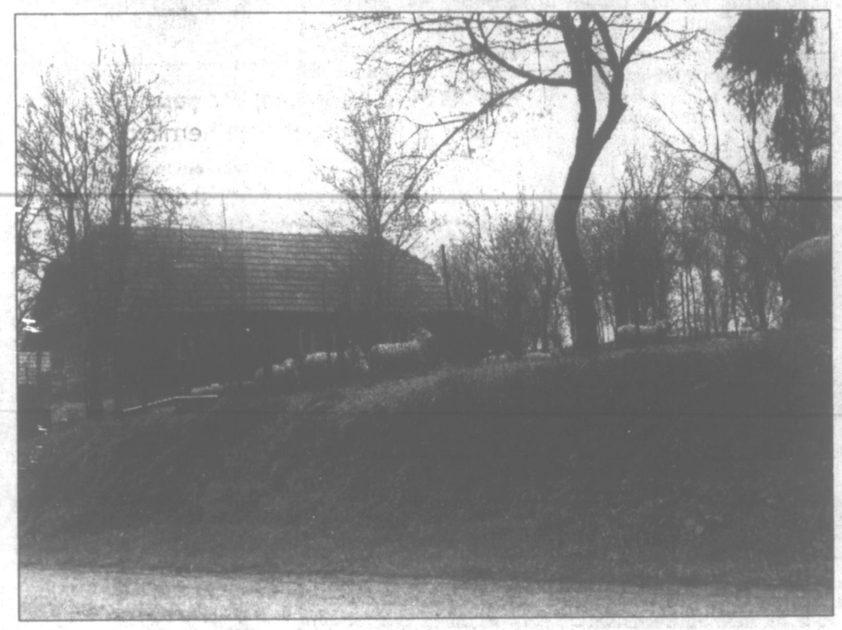
We visited the three different countries and spoke with local Mennonite Central Committee representatives and other non-profit organizations, which we are partnering with to distribute aid and to help meet the needs of the war victims.

We visited refugees and returning refugees in their homes and talked with them, listening to their stories. They were very appreciative of the love which was sent to them: blankets, food, kits that are assembled by volunteers and include such things as hygiene items, school supplies, and infant items.

Mothers told us, "It was a special joy to have new things to be able to give to our children." Nearly $11 million of aid has been sent to that region since 1993 from the Mennonite Central Committee.

During the war, people fled their homes on tractors, or horse-drawn carts, or they walked. They had to leave their homes immediately for safety. Their homes and property were blown up behind them.

SEEING FIRST HAND HOW FUNDS ARE USED – Harriet and Doug Berg, Hidden Valley, Pa., recently visited the war-torn areas of Croatia, Bosnia-Herzegovina, and Serbia. They wanted to see for themselves how some of the proceeds from the local TriState Relief Sale, an annual auction which raises funds for the Mennonite Central Committee, were spent. See story for details. Pictured above are the Bergs on the far left and far right. Between them are 16-year-old Vehabovic Mersiha (her last name is spelled first) and her mother Scherzada. The photo was taken at Putovici, a refugee camp near the city of Zenica in Bosnia. The women had just received kits filled with personal hygiene items. Blankets, food, infant items, and school kits are also distributed to refugees by Mennonite Central Committee representatives. In the photo at the far right are children receiving clothing in Bosnia. Pictured below is a farm in Croatia. The sheep were raised on another farm that was supported by the MCC and were then given to local farmers.



We spoke with one family whose sister was left behind because she was in a farm outbuilding and did not know what was happening. She was finally able to get to safety and was reunited with her family.

As we shared meals with the local people, we realized how much we were alike. We all need the comfort and protection of safe and clean housing; we are proud of our children's accomplishments in school; we share the same aspirations for the future; and we all need help and kind words at some time in our lives for encouragement.

Many former refugees are now working with the non-profit organizations to distribute aid and home health care and are providing encouragement to their fellow countrymen. In their words: "The gifts [from the Mennonite Central Committee] meant so much in difficult times. The most important thing was the feeling that we were not left alone. We are now in a position where we can help others."

We attended Easter Sunday worship service in a local church and sang with them familiar hymns, even though the language was different. They have many of the same customs such as lovely painted Easter eggs, which they shared with us.

We stayed on a farm that the Mennonite Central Committee helps to support. Former refugees and displaced people operate the farm, raising sheep and chickens. These animals are then distributed to help people as they begin to farm again since either they are in a different location or their animals have died. Such animals are given with the request that young lambs and chicks produced from these animals would be returned to the farm, where further distribution could take place.

In some areas where seeds were distributed, portions of the new crop are returned to the soup kitchens to help feed others.

Funds raised by the TriState Relief Sale as well as comforters made by church congregations, meat canned by local volunteers, clothing donations, kits containing school supplies, hygiene items, and layette items gathered by local congregations have helped to meet the needs of the people in these countries.

The vegetation and terrain in that part of the world is very much like western Maryland, hills and rolling countryside. Springtime is similar as well. Lovely blooming flowers and fruit trees give hope in the desolation.

There is lots of rebuilding in the cities. People are trying to live a normal life, but it is difficult to make a living since most of the industry has closed down. Multiple generations of families are huddled into small quarters until they can rebuild their own homes.

We stayed several days in Sarajevo, Bosnia, in a Franciscan monastery. There we met Fra. Ivo Markovic, a very active leader in bringing people of different backgrounds together and to learn to respect each other again. He formed an inter-religious choir in 1996 named Pontanima, which means bridge and spirit.

By singing each other's songs, members of Pontanima attempt to better understand and respect each other. They have performed across the region, many times very fearful as they sing before groups which were previously at war. They recently received the prestigious Common Ground Award for outstanding work toward reconciliation in post-war Bosnia-Herzegovina. The Mennonite Central Committee has helped sponsor this organization through workers and funds.

We are not called to serve only those who are like us or even those who care for us. We are called to serve all people – the lovely and the unlovely, the friendly and the not-so-friendly.

The Bergs are also coordinators for the North American Mennonite Relief Sales, 46 sales in the United States and Canada, all sponsored by volunteers.

This year's TriState Relief Sale will be held Friday and Saturday, July 23 and 24, at the Garrett County Fairgrounds, McHenry. For more information, persons may call the Bergs at 814-445-6945 or e-mail them at daheberg2@aol.com, or visit the event's web site at tristatesale.org.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

Besides my duty as the correspondent from Bittinger, I am a member of the Bittinger Lutheran Parish and thus have a good reason to attend the Parish Joint Service at St. John's (or as we called it when I was growing up, "Over the Mountain" or the Meadow Mountain Church). St. John's services are held at 8:45 a.m., which is much earlier than those for the congregations at Emmanuel and Zion. Since I am an early riser it was no sweat for me to attend the early service, especially since my daughters were with their father this weekend as they went to visit Lloyd's parents in Silver Spring.

Margaret Wagner and Ellen Housley were glued to the television, as I was, to watch the Kentucky Derby, always held on the first Saturday in May. This year we feasted our eyes on a crop of the most beautiful athletes in the world – the 3-year-old thoroughbred horses. Margaret, Ellen, and I all hoped for the best for a 21-year-old young lady, already a top trainer with a real contender in this Derby. Then we had a beautiful Maryland horse, Tapit, on the hunt for the blanket of red roses.

Once again, we had an underdog who neither ran nor looked like one – a Pennsylvania-bred and based at not a top track in Philadelphia, plus a jockey who had an accident in the starting gate only last year when he fractured his skull. With a small-time trainer and jockey, "Smarty Jones" ran like a pro to take the roses.

His elderly owner in a wheelchair and on oxygen was, for the first time, a Derby winner. His colt happened to be born on the same day as his grandmother. I guess at least they are at least a hundred years apart, but that is where he got his name "Smarty Jones," which was the nickname of his grandmother when she was a little girl. "Smarty Jones" was the favorite and won it, which was a rare thing, especially in a year with at least five horses who have everything it takes to win. I can't be too disappointed for the young female trainer, as she has a whole lifetime to win her Derby, while the elderly and ailing owner of "Smarty Jones" probably will not have another chance to win the most glorious American racing prize.

It is true that the story of "Smarty Jones" would make a good movie, as many Derby winners continue to have enough good stories and characters to fill a very thick book – rich or poor, old or young, male or female, horses from the premium bred stud farms, plus a handful of backyard horses. I know of a dozen dramas involving the relationships between people and horses.

But aside from the Derby, my trip over the mountain was partly a sentimental journey for me. During my teens my father and I often attended St. John's to give us a bit earlier start to the horse shows, and the beautiful old stone church has not changed much in the last 25 years or so – the white walls with the old mellow stained glass windows or the wood ceiling like the old one at Emmanuel. I saw some former acquaintances, Marvin Beckman from my 4-H days, and Betty and Janna Naylor who I didn't know had a tie to St. John's. I forgot about the fundraising breakfast for Gary O'Brien held in the newly remodeled church basement.

The breakfast smelled very good, but I was eager to escape human company to go back about 40 years in time. Across the pond from the church was one of the most important meetings of my life. When I was a 10-year-old pony girl dying to get a horse of my own, I looked at a 2-month-old chestnut foal beside John Beachy's number one mare, "Babe." It was love at first sight, as he put his front feet in gear to get closer to me, which he repeated many times in his Fair stall when I visited my dream horse. I knew from the first moment he was my horse. No other horse would do for me.

In spite of the advice of knowledgeable horse people who told my Daddy that he should get me an already-broken young horse for an inexperienced young girl, "Little Joe" and I knew something no one could know – that we belonged together. The next Christmas he was mine. It was hard for me to wait for him to get old enough to ride, but the next summer at last I got to mount him. There was no bucking or any need to break him because he was happy to have me on his back, and from then on he only had one idea in his head, and that was to please me. If I could let him know what I wanted him to do he just did it. It was not a very hard training task. Actually, we wanted the same thing – to wander through the woods, run as fast as the wind, and later jump anything we encountered.

This Sunday morning was exactly like that other May morning in the early 1960s, being sunny with soft blue sky over rolling green hills. The only missing thing was him.

Never since the dreadful day in 1991 when he died have I not missed him with all my heart. Even 30 years together was not enough. The only way I can experience again that joy is in my dreams. I often dream about riding him and always awake with a heavy heart.

I guess even with this light rain it is a relief to my goldfinches after the snow and cold they endured the last week. Anyway, they are busy at my bird feeder. I heard before church service that the hummingbirds already have returned to the Glendale Road area. A pair of them already have visited Bob and Lois Watson. They also have some Baltimore orioles. So, people north of Meadow Mountain have started to get their hummingbird feeders out, because if the birds stop by and find no meal for them, they often look farther for their summer home. I believe it is still pretty early for their return to Bittinger area, as most years they do not get here until late May, if not after Memorial Day, and they stay around here until Labor Day or so, or when we get our first frost. Of course, there is a rare surprise of frosty nip or possible snow in the summer months (not unknown around here). This April is just about the warmest that snow that I can remember, except in 1980 and 1981 when I actually sunbathed to get a nice tan for whatever, but that reason is out of my life now.

It looks like a turnaround year for our beloved Pittsburgh Pirates. As Sheila Southerly remembered when we were kids, we thought we were very lucky to get to go to one Pirates game during the summer. It was our social life height, that and our big event of 4-H years – camp and the county fair. Nowadays our kids are so busy they can hardly catch their breath between the activities mandatory for a successful young person. It is too bad they do not have the time or interest in just being kids. But in any case, our Bucs are on a lengthy away win streak. For the first time in many years they are over the 500 mark.

Speaking of baseball, I learned some exciting news that Daniel Vagnetti will head over to Italy to play semi-pro baseball. His team is close to Rob's family hometown, so he will have that safety net to rely on with plenty of family.

Once again being unable to sleep past 5:30 a.m. it finally paid off. Turning on TV my satellite was turned to a channel that I am not used to watching and it paid off big time for me. One last costume project I worked on in New York in the Art Department of Brooks and Van Horne Costume involved a film of a novel by Peter Benchley (author of sea horror stories, like Jaws). This project starred Michael Caine in The Island which was about a bloodthirsty modern day pirate band who lived on a Caribbean island. It is not my typple of movie, so I never saw my work before this morning, but there was Michael Caine wearing a polo shirt that I designed. Actually I had to design three matching shirts exactly the same way so he could change into a fresh one after one got wet, etc. I was somewhat disappointed to not see a burlap cape/poncho that I did for him. After we finished ahead of the deadline we put on a kind of Academy Award party, paid for by our designer, Ann Rothe, and my cape won "Best Costume." It was a fun project.

Of course, all the crew wanted to go down to Aruba to help with the filming, but only a couple got to go and it turned out to be not so much fun for them. Instead they used real actors for the band of pirates. They placed a classified ad in Miami newspapers for people who lost any body parts, like an eye, hand, etc., and mostly they got real life low-lifers (criminals, etc.). They used the little police station in Aruba to confine them to reduce possibility of their getting drunk or crazy. It was quite a task to get them dressed and ready to film. Plus, most of the cast and crew got some kind of tropical illness with high fevers, and they only had a limited ice supply to help bring down the fevers. You never know when what seems to be a disappointment turns into a real piece of good luck. Maybe my sudden illness saved me from some horrible thing or sickness.

Ruth DiPaolo was busy fishing recently in our trout streams and she had some good luck. She cleaned four nice trout and gave them to Margaret and Jim Wagner for their evening meal.

There is nothing Margaret likes to eat more than fresh fish. According to her doctor, she should eat lots of protein, so fresh fish is the best possible food for her.

The only fishing I ever did was with Cindy and Sally with our homemade poles. We caught a few blue gills in their pond. Of course, that type of fish is not a high-status catch. But still it was fun to watch the red and white bobbers start to bob, meaning we had something on our lines, which were just string. We used earthworms as bait, probably gathered while we did our weeding duties in our family gardens. Most of the time we just fished from shore instead of risking the disturbing of any ugly snake under the row boat. We didn't like snakes any more than my girls do. It still gives me creeps to remember when I pulled up a big clump of grass and mud only to reveal an ugly big gray snake underneath it. That wasn't quite as bad as when I grabbed a big handful of weeds in my garden and pulled out not just weeds, but a wiggly snake.

A Garrett College wildlife student is hunting in our woods today for wild turkeys.

I wish I had something I want to do today, something free and within my limited physical abilities. I look back on my childhood with longing. You don't need any money or gas in your car to hunt wildflowers, brush my pony, dam up the "crick," or build a branch and hemlock bough shelter in the woods. I long for, actually pine away, to visit my lovely little violet bog, which is 25 square feet of marsh, densely covered with the deepest purple violets, while the drier ground around it features white and yellow violets only a few yards from our farm patch of trilliums, and maybe a few jack-in-the-pulpits, all safe from the ravages of logging. Maybe I could even find a rare pink lady slipper by the creek. I missed the critical time to teach my girls about that kind of recreational activities while I was in the hospital. It is too late now because they wouldn't want to get their manicured hands dirty.

Another spring activity that used to keep me out of trouble was to pick rocks from the newly plowed fields. Sometimes I got lucky and found some treasure in the newly turned ground, like an arrowhead or some excellent fossil, old coins, or horse shoes from the days when our fields were farmed by my grandfather and his team of work horses. I can't imagine my daughters' will to eat crayfish. They do not believe in foraging for food. I find a handful of fiddlehead ferns along a back road, which is a highly prized wild food to people in the know about that subject. I don't even want to drive past the wet place I know they are growing now because I want to get to them. I don't want any more frustration in my life these days. Anyway, the road that goes there is probably too wet to be safe to drive on without a serious risk of getting stuck. You can go just about anywhere if you have a good horse under you, especially like my horse who could jump over any fence or fallen tree blocking your way or a deep ditch or deep streams. There was nowhere we couldn't go if you didn't mind getting a little muddy at worst. That was true freedom. I long to feel free again. No motor vehicle can go anywhere or go as fast in the backcountry as a horse.

Beulah Moon entertained her sisters at a luncheon last Thursday. The guests were Ferne Beachy, Ruby Orendorf of LaVale, and Jo Ellen Graham of St. Albans, W.Va.

It sounds like Beulah had quite a trip to South Korea last month besides enjoying her new great-grandson and family. Her grandson James is a helicopter pilot serving in South Korea. Of course, her great-grandson was adorable. He recovered from a period of shyness with his great-grandmother and just could not get

AIR CONDITIONER MAINTENANCE

Q – In the mail, I received a flyer offering me an "air conditioner inspection and tune-up" for $14.95. I only have a small window air conditioner in my apartment. Do you think it's worth it?

A – Well, you're off to a very good start by paying attention to your air conditioner in early May. Waiting until July to see if it works efficiently is an invitation to find out the hard way – and at a time when there are no repairmen available.

The important thing at this time of year is to distinguish between what you can do yourself and what you need a professional to do. Cleaning the unit can be done by anyone, and that's the key to keeping an air conditioner working well, year after year.

Nearly all window air conditioners contain a filter. That may be a thick black sheet of material that looks very similar to sponge rubber; sometimes it's a thin plate of mesh that slides out like the lint filter in a clothes dryer. Again without knowing any details, there is usually a pair of spring-clips on the front of the unit, which allow you to open a grating or door and take out the filter material. All you have to do is rinse it out very thoroughly, washing away all the dirt that collected there last summer; then dry it out. With the front still open, take a vacuum hose with a crevice tool on it and vacuum around the spaces you can reach. Then put the filter material back in. No need to call a repairman for that.

After cleaning and replacing the filter, the next thing to do is turn the air conditioner on full blast (even in early spring) for about 10 minutes and see if it delivers cold air into the room. Even if it's not mounted in the window frame yet, you can do this test with the unit just sitting out in the middle of the room. If it produces cold air and doesn't make a lot of noise, you're probably good for the summer.

There are basically only two things that can go wrong with a window air conditioner, and both of them are expensive: a) The only "moving part" is the compressor, which contains an electric motor, and if that goes bad, replacing it is a major, time-consuming task. You'll certainly hear it if it's faulty. b) If the refrigerant (commonly called Freon) leaks out, you won't get much cold air out of the unit. Specialized equipment is needed to replenish lost refrigerant, and the leak has to be found and sealed for the repair to last. Again, time-consuming and therefore expensive.

Nowadays, a lot of window air conditioners are cheap enough that they aren't worth repairing. If the unit costs $120 in the first place, runs for 6 years and then dies, you can throw it away and buy a new one – it's like paying $20/year. A repair that costs $100 just doesn't make any sense at all.

The flyer you got in the mail is what's called a "loss leader." No repairman in the world can make a trip to your apartment and do anything at all for $14.95. The time that elapses just driving back and forth is worth more than that. So maybe the repairman comes out, cleans your filter, and pronounces the unit okay. If that's all that happens, fine; you've got peace of mind. But clearly there is a temptation for the repairman to find something wrong and recommend expensive repairs. Chances are, that's not a good deal for you.

Although the economics of window air conditioners says "forget it," the case of a whole-house air conditioner is different. When the system costs thousands of dollars, repairs make sense.

But even here, there are things you can do yourself. Take a garden hose to the big unit sitting out in the back yard and remove all the dirt, leaves, and twigs that have gathered during the winter. The water won't hurt it; it's no worse than a hard rain. Clip away shrubs and branches so as to give it breathing room. If there is a filter, clean it. Inside your home, near the furnace, many air conditioners have a "sight glass" that shows the liquid refrigerant on its way through the system. If there are many bubbles visible in the sight glass, it means you're low on refrigerant. Refilling it is a job for a repairman.

It's also a good idea to put a few drops of oil in the bearings of the motors in the compressor and fan, but you may not be able to locate the exact points. That's where an inspection/tune-up in the springtime can be valuable. Simple routine maintenance once a year can prevent costly failures later, which (by Murphy's law) would probably come exactly at the hottest days of July and August.

Vendors Invited To Take Part In July 4th Events

The Garrett County Chamber of Commerce is looking for local organizations to participate in the "Old Fashioned Family Fourth" celebration slated for Sunday, July 4, at the Garrett County Fairgrounds. An array of family-oriented events and entertainment will be offered from 1 to 8 p.m., followed by fireworks from atop Marsh Mountain later that evening, according to Karen Reckner, special events coordinator.

As in years past, parking for the fireworks will be available in the north lot of the fairgrounds. Through cooperation with the Garrett County fair board, the chamber will sponsor an afternoon of "fun and musical performances" within the fairground gates. Events for children, a petting zoo, an ice cream social, and a car show are currently on the agenda, Reckner said, plus a variety of food will be available.

"We encourage our local municipalities and businesses to be a part of this special celebration of our country's independence and our traditional values," she added.

Reckner suggested that organizations which currently have food booths at the Garrett County Fair can get a head start on fair planning and preview their specialties during this 4th of July celebration.

"Local organizations with activities planned for later in the year are invited to take part in this fun-filled day by setting up a display to promote an upcoming event," she said.

Persons interested in participating in the day's activities may contact Reckner by calling the chamber office at 301-387-4386 or 301-245-4400 or e-mailing karen@garrettchamber.com.

Oakland's Shoppe At Heritage Square To Open Saturday

This Saturday's (May 8) opening day activities for the Shoppe at Heritage Square, located in the 1884 B&O Railroad Station in Oakland, have been slated by the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce. The doors will open at 9 a.m., and chamber president Charlie Ross and Oakland mayor Asa McCain, along with other dignitaries, will conduct an official ribbon cutting ceremony at 10 a.m.

Throughout the day, participating artists will demonstrate their work. Refreshments will be provided, and the public may register to win door prizes.

Two free musical performances will take place. From 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., the Woodticks will take the stage. The trio is a traditional old-time string band that pulls its inspiration from the days of yesteryear. Their music is described a high-energy balance of fiddle, banjo, and guitar mixed together with soulful singing, and even a little humor.

From 12:30 to 1:30 p.m., the brother-sister duo Allegheny will perform. Allegheny plays a mixture of traditional acoustic music, such as old-time and blues, contemporary songs and tunes, and several original compositions.

The Shoppe at Heritage Square is a retail venture that will feature the quality work of craftspeople and the products of farmers from Mountain Maryland. This additional local outlet will build on the opportunities that already exist for our regional artists. It will complement venues such as the Gallery of the Garrett County Arts Council and Spruce Forest Artisan Village.

As part of the opening weekend festivities, A Chamber Business After Hours is set for 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, May 7, for members of the business community to preview the Shoppe at Heritage Square. Dmitry Kubin Ostrogorsky will provide the musical entertainment for the evening. Ostrogorsky enlivens his guitar with Flamenco and classical themes. Born and trained in St. Petersburg, Mr. Ostrogorsky has performed throughout Russia and now lives in Garrett County. Doors open at 6 p.m. The cost is $6 per person.

The Shoppe at Heritage Square and Visitors Center will be open seven days per week from 9 am to 5 p.m., with extended Friday hours in the summer. For more information, persons may contact the Chamber of Commerce at 301-387-4386 or 301-245-4400.

Mtn. Top Truck Driving Classes Slated By GC

Garrett College's new Mountaintop Truck Driving Institute will begin its first class on Monday, May 24, according to Continuing Education and Training Division dean Lowell Bender. The course will continue for 10 weeks and will include 320 hours of instruction (equating to 16 credits).

The professional truck driving curriculum is designed to qualify students for entry level positions as drivers in over-the-road or local driving vehicles. The training will focus on basic information about trucks, truck driving, and the trucking industry, as well as fundamentals of operating trucks and tractor trailers. The curriculum will have three components: the classroom, the yard where students will learn about trucks, and the "hands on" over-the-road experience.

To qualify for enrollment, students should have a high school diploma or a GED. Persons who are not high school graduates and foreign applicants may be accepted if they pass a nationally recognized "ability to benefit" test. All students must hold a current driver's license and a commercial driving license learners' permit, possess an acceptable driving record from the Motor Vehicle Administration, or be at least 21 years of age. Classes at the institute will meet four days a week Monday through Thursday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. (including breaks). Students are required to attend at least 80 percent of the hours offered in each course, except driving hours, where 90 percent is required. At the end of each course each student's grade point average is calculated, and a minimum overall GPA of 70 percent is required for graduation.

To accommodate persons who are presently employed and who want the truck driving training, weekend sessions are being scheduled, the first session to start Saturday, June 5. Classes will meet on Saturdays and Sundays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. (including breaks) for 20 weeks.

The Mountaintop Truck Driving Institute is directed by Bud Poland, who directed the Diesel Institute in Grantsville for the past 20 years. The instructors will also be former faculty members of the Diesel Institute.

Financial aid services and career placement services of the college will be available to students enrolled in the institute. Students may register for either the credit option or the non-credit option. Those who register for credit may be eligible to receive Title IV Pell assistance or student loans.

"Because of the outstanding demand for qualified truck drivers during the past 20 years and the growth of the trucking industry, we expect the demand to last through another 20 years," Poland said, as he noted that the outlook for future job opportunities is favorable. "The trucking companies who have worked with the Diesel Institute in the past will be ready to hire our graduates."

The Mountaintop Truck Driving Institute is located three miles east of Grantsville along Route 40. Persons interested in information about tuition and fees may call Carol Newman at 301-387-3088.

Real Estate Facts by...
Lana Roby

TWO KINDS OF PROPERTY

It is important to understand the difference between personal property and real estate, whether selling or buying a home. Real estate is described as "the land and any improvements permanently affixed to the land." Everything else is described as "personal" property.

In a more practical sense, real estate is the land, structures such as a home or detached garage, planted trees and shrubs, built-in appliances, drapery rods attached to the walls, and electric garage door openers.

Items of personal property would include furniture, curtains and drapes hung from rods, portable gas grills, swing sets not planted in concrete, potted plants, fireplace tools, or a free-standing microwave oven.

A simple test to determine whether an item is personal or real property is to ask yourself whether the item is permanently attached to the real estate, i.e. nailed down.

When buying or selling a home, the purchase agreement covers only the real estate being conveyed. If items of personal property are to be included, they must be mentioned specifically in the agreement.

When selling a home, ask your real estate agent to specifically exclude valuable items of personal property in the listing agreement. This may preclude a misunderstanding later over which items stay, and which do not. When buying, if you are unsure about whether items of personal property are included, ask for clarification.

CREATING PET FOOD ADS AT NMS – Northern Middle School's sixth, seventh, and eighth grade students of Lisa Carr have been busy with various pre-reading activities in preparation for comprehending the novel, The Trouble with Tuck. They learned something about the life of the author, Theodore Taylor, and had discussions about what it is like to own and care for a pet. "The best thing," remarked students Shawn Kisner and Trevor Patton, "was inventing our own pet food and making an ad to sell it to people with the same kind of pet." Some students concentrated on traditional pets like cats, dogs, horses, and rabbits, but others focused on some less common pets, such as iguanas, snakes, sharks, tigers, frogs, and even bears. Students invented a pet food, determined the ingredients, designed the packaging, and developed a television commercial. Pictured above, in the front, from the left, are Rachel Birkby, Jeremy Dom, John Cosner, and Eric Phillips. In the middle are Justin Friend, Christy Orner, Aaron Ashby, Cara Bauermaster, and Brian Sebold. In the back are Shawn Kisner, Trevor Patton, Charlie Cornelius, and Erin McBride.

BITTINGER

enough of her and her love. They attended Easter Sunday service at the largest Christian church in the world. Twelve thousand worshippers were there, and Beulah had an earpiece that translated the service from Korean into English. She was astonished how modern it was, with the many skyscrapers and people in modern Western clothes.

They also visited the open-air street markets. All ground not built on was planted in all kind of crops.

They have fresh strawberries the year around. Sounds like a wonderful experience for Beulah. She had plenty of things to share with her sisters last week. I bet she never dreamed during the war in 1950 that she would someday visit family there and find such a pleasant place.

I thought that maybe I had made a mistake about the 12,000 people at church, so I called her back and she confirmed that figure. The service was translated into seven different languages. That must be one big church. More like a stadium.

Let's hope the conflict in Iraq ends up like Korea a few decades from now, a place where the Muslims would merge with the Western world, ending up a place of peace and plenty where brotherhood reigns. What a great blessing that would be. It seems unlikely, but I guess all is possible. No one would believe during the Cold War that someday Russia and America would have more in common than in conflict.

The Bittinger 4-H Club held its May meeting one week early because of a special Mother's Day project at Country Gardens Expressions Greenhouse on Sang Run Road. They will bring planters and fill them with flowers.

Donna Glotfelty spent several days recently with her son Tom in Detroit and accompanied him on his scheduled flights with Spirit Airlines to New York, Myrtle Beach, and Florida. While in New York they attended a Broadway stage play.

Linda Oester and Karmen Carey cared for their grandmother Ida while Donna was away.

The Maryland Bureau of Mines has applied to construct an Acid Mine Drainage treatment system to improve water quality and overall wetland habitat in the Laurel Run and North Branch Potomac watersheds. The project will permanently impact 33,257 square feet of emergent wetland, 55,536 square feet of buffer and 280 linear feet of stream. The project is proposed on Laurel Run (Use III). The wetlands to be impacted are highly degraded due to the acid mine discharge. The project will result in wetland restoration of multiple acres due to the water quality improvements resulting from the project. LOCAL UNITED WAY RECOGNIZED – The United Way of Garrett County was recognized by USA Weekend magazine for its first Day of Caring and Sharing in 2003. The event organized more than 100 volunteers to help local agencies with a wide variety of projects, from cleaning to construction. Pictured are Jeannette Fitzwater, Bob Stephens, and Kelly Johnson, board members for the United Way of Garrett County, with the award. The next Day of Caring and Sharing will be held Oct. 23. For more information or to volunteer for the event, persons may call 301-359-9697 or visit www.garrettunitedway.org.

Volunteers Sought For Saturday's May Bird Count

The annual countywide May Bird Count, sponsored by the Maryland Ornithological Society (MOS), will take place in Garrett County this Saturday, May 8, during the entire 24-hour period (midnight Friday to midnight Saturday).

Volunteer counters, who may choose to count at a feeder or any other location, should call local May Count coordinator Fran Pope at 301-334-4908 as soon as possible for instructions and to obtain a form. Participants also need to inform Pope of where they will be counting in order to assure the best coverage of the county and avoid duplication of effort.

"Some of the species observed at this time of year will have already begun their breeding season," Pope noted. "Once again, we are asking birders to record data that can be used for the Breeding Bird Atlas project, a 5-year effort of the MOS, which is determining the presence and distribution of birds breeding in Maryland. The MOS Web site at www.MDBirds.org has more information on the atlas project.

This year's May Count participants will be asked to take a few extra moments to note bird behavior they observe which might indicate breeding status. Pope will furnish each participant with a list of these behaviors, what they mean and how to code them.

Results of the May Bird Count will appear in Maryland Birdlife, a publication of the Maryland Ornithological Society.

Memorial Svc., Dinner Slated By Hospice

Hospice of Garrett County has set its annual Memorial Service for Sunday, May 16, at the Bittinger fire hall. The event will begin with a 5 p.m. covered dish dinner, followed by a 6 p.m. worship service where Rev. Alan Birkby of the Harvest Baptist Church, Grantsville, will deliver the pastoral message.

The Memorial Service is held to honor and remember deceased Hospice patients, Hospice volunteers, and Hospice board members, according to a spokesperson. Family members and friends of departed loved ones are welcome to attend.

Persons are asked to call the Hospice office at 301-334-5151, or in the Grantsville area at 800-521-5252, to provide organizers with the number of family members that will be attending.

In the community, Hedrick has served as past president of the LaVale Civic Improvement Association and a member of the Sikeston, Mo., Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Club. He devotes much of his spare time to helping the Boy Scouts of America, from which he received the Silver Beaver Award for distinguished service. Choose The Right Oil To Get The Most Out Of Your Car

Most people don't know what kind of motor oil a car needs for it to run at its optimum level. When our car needs it, we refill it with a quart of oil, but not much thought goes into knowing what kind is best for our vehicle.

However, there are differences in lubricants and choosing the right oil can impact how well our car runs. Selecting the right oil is often the quickest, easiest and cheapest way to improve our car's performance and reliability. With so many choices available, how do we distinguish between them?

Two components determine how well oil will impact your car's performance. One factor is the base oil, and the other is the combination of chemicals that are added to the base oil.

BASE OILS

The two types of base oil are mineral-based and synthetic. Mineral oil is refined crude oil that has molecules of all shapes and sizes. Synthetic oil has molecules that are all the same size and shape; consequently, synthetic oil has a lower coefficient of friction and performs better than mineral oils. There's been a sizable growth in the use of synthetic oil over the years and it's often the factory fill in many new cars.

ADDITIVES

Regardless of the base oil used, chemicals must be added to give it what it needs to do its job. A variety of chemical "additives" are used to improve the performance of base oil. Typical additives that may be added to a base oil include detergents to reduce the formation of residue, defoamants to deter the absorption of air, anti-wear agents, antioxidants and others. Although additives are only 15 to 25 percent of the finished product, they often impact a lubricant's performance more than the base oil.

One of the biggest technological advances in lubrication comes through advancements in chemical additives. These breakthroughs have been developed by a handful of companies that specialize in developing high-performance lubricants, as opposed to major oil companies whose primary focus is refining and selling crude oil by-products.

For instance, by combining high-grade synthetic base oil with their proprietary additive chemistry, Royal Purple, Ltd. has developed lubricants that outperform both mineral-based oils and conventional synthetic-based oils. These oils have been proven in independent tests to increase horsepower up to 3 percent, reduce emissions by up to 20 percent, and improve fuel economy up to 5 percent, compared to other oils. Additionally, their oil has been shown to have superior film strength which reduces engine wear. It also has a longer service life which saves time and money, and helps the environment by reducing the number of oil changes that are needed.

WHAT TO CHOOSE

The easiest way to choose an oil is to use the good, better, best model.

Good – Mineral-based oils. The cheapest, most widely available oils that provide minimum levels of performance and protection.

Better – Synthetic oils. More expensive than mineral base oils, synthetics have a longer service life and offer some improvements in performance and protection.

Best – High-Performance synthetic oils. The most technologically advanced oils, high-performance synthetic oils are comparable in price to conventional synthetic oils but provide significantly improved performance and protection.

Still confused? For a beat-up old junker, stick with a 99-cent mineral-based motor oil. To get the best performance out of a car, truck or RV, or to protect a car that's important to you, upgrade to a high-performance synthetic oil.

Read This Before Handing Over The Keys To The Teen Driver

Moms are the ones who usually cart kids around from school to Scouts to baseball. More often than not, these women take responsibility for the repair and maintenance of their vehicles. But what happens when the kids grow out of the backseat and into the driver's seat? Who's looking after their vehicles?

Automotive preventive maintenance and repair knowledge is like algebra, says the Car Care Council. We're not born knowing it, it has to be learned. Teach your young drivers the basics about their cars before they get the keys. If you don't know much about automotive maintenance/repair, do yourself a favor and learn it along with your kids. Here are a few tips:

Explain that all cars, new and old, need regular attention. Make sure your teenager knows and follows the maintenance schedule for his/her car. In addition to making a car safe to drive, preventive maintenance can save thousands of dollars during a lifetime of driving.

Don't overlook the owner's manual. This is full of information about the car that your young driver may never know unless he/she is familiar with this automotive bible.

Make it fun. There are myriad sites on the Internet that are fascinating for young and old drivers, alike. Some have Q & A sections. Let your teen send his/her tough questions to the professionals.

It's probably been a while since your teens went on a field trip. Take them with you to the repair facility, the tire store, the body shop and wherever you have automotive work performed. Get them accustomed to the automotive world – its people, places, jargon and prices.

There are hundreds of books available on this subject. Many are written specifically for non-technical audiences; some are even humorous. Buy a few and make them required reading for the licensing process.

Make a plan. What happens if the car breaks down, he/she has a wreck, or the car gets stolen? What if no adults are home to receive the panic call? Whether you want your teenager to call your family repair facility or Aunt Sadie, provide some instruction and put important phone numbers in the glove compartment.

For many parents, driving age is the final frontier. Certainly it is an important rite of passage for teenagers. Don't let your child pass into this stage of his/her life without being prepared. Take the time and the necessary materials to make your young driver feel competent and secure.

Oxygen Sensors Improve Car's Fuel Efficiency

Oxygen sensors are critical for keeping gas mileage up and exhaust emissions down in today's cars, light trucks and vans. Oxygen sensors measure the amount of oxygen remaining in the exhaust after the combustion process, and send a small voltage signal back to the vehicle's engine management computer, which in turn adjusts the air/fuel mix.

"Among all the sensors in the various electronic control systems for today's engines, the oxygen sensor is the most critical for producing the optimum air/fuel mixture of 14.7-to-1, otherwise known as 'stoichiometric,'" notes Chuck Ruth, director of Product Management, Engine Management Products for Robert Bosch's Automotive Aftermarket Division. "Other sensors can keep the engine running when the oxygen sensor needs replacement, but the computer can only 'guess' at the air-fuel mixture without a properly functioning oxygen sensor."

Bosch developed the first automotive oxygen sensor for a 1976 Volvo, based on a gas-tight ceramic electrolyte "thimble," which projects into the exhaust stream. A high reading of 0.9 volts indicates excess fuel in the exhaust, while a low reading of 0.2 volts indicates too much oxygen, or not enough fuel.

Research indicates that as many as one out of every seven vehicles on the road needs a new oxygen sensor. If all those sensors were replaced, it would reduce automotive emissions dramatically, save an estimated 3 billion gallons of fuel every year, and improve driving pleasure and efficiency for millions of motorists, Ruth says.

The first oxygen sensors relied on heat from the exhaust to reach operating temperature, and are now known as "unheated thimble" oxygen sensors. Because the warm-up cycle of an engine produces the most exhaust emissions, Bosch developed the "heated thimble oxygen sensor," which uses electrical heating to bring the sensor up to operating temperature in less than a minute. The heated thimble sensor has since become the standard for most automobiles and light trucks around the world.

More stringent exhaust emission requirements in the mid-1990s led to the development of "heated planar sensors," which deliver a reading within 12 seconds after an engine is started, and feature a flat, ceramic-zirconia element projecting into the exhaust stream. First introduced on the 1998 Volkswagen Beetle, planar sensors now account for almost 50 percent of oxygen sensors installed in new vehicles in the United States. Further advancements have led to the development of the "heated wide-band oxygen sensor," which allows even greater refinements in the fuel/air mixture and more efficient vehicles.

Bosch supplies all four kinds of oxygen sensors: unheated thimble, heated thimble, heated planar and wide-band. "It's important to recognize that as sensor design and manufacturing technology continues to advance, replacement sensors will often reflect those advancements and may outperform and outlast the original," says Ruth. "As sensor technology advances, driving efficiency advances with it."

Comprehensive Pre-Trip Checkup Can Pay Off

Tow truck operators in resort areas or along Interstate highways see all too many travelers forced to return home ahead of schedule. Car trouble, usually due to neglected preventive maintenance, brings an abrupt end to vacation plans.

The situation usually means more than just a repair bill. It can involve towing charges, lodging and possibly a rental car. Add to that the cost of extra phone calls, meals and general inconvenience, and the ordeal becomes expensive.

This scenario usually can be avoided with a pre-vacation inspection performed by a qualified automotive technician. This "physical" for your automobile should address the following systems: cooling, braking, emission control, steering/suspension, fuel, and electrical and ignition.

In addition, the tech should evaluate engine performance, tires/wheels, AC/heater/defroster, instruments/gauges, windshield wipers, horns/lights/mirrors, seat belts and the car's body, inside and out.

Not only can a pre-trip inspection help reduce chances of costly and possibly dangerous road trouble, it also provides an opportunity to have repairs made at home, with one's own technician who knows the vehicle. Especially important, it provides peace of mind.

While no inspection can guarantee a car's performance, it's comforting to know proper precautions were taken.

Check For Visual Problems Before Blaming The Alternator

Think your alternator is letting you down? Several signs can tip you off to charging system troubles. A battery charging warning light may be blinking. Your headlights are getting dimmer and dimmer every evening. Or your engine is either refusing to crank for starting or cranking ever so slowly. Any of these signals could indicate a problem with your car's charging system and it should be looked at by you or your mechanic.

Technicians at Robert Bosch, a leading manufacturer of alternators, suggest that before you condemn the alternator, you should make some visual checks of the battery, alternator and electrical connections for signs of trouble. "Think about the charging system of the modern car as a complete circuit, or circle, formed by wires and alternator charging system components," says Fred Padgett, product manager, Rotating Electrical Products for Robert Bosch Corporation. "In the circuit, when driven by the engine, the alternator produces electricity using magnetic force. The battery stores this produced electricity in the form of chemical energy."

Here's a checklist of potential problems to look for:

Are the battery cable connections tight? Try to twist the cable clamps on the battery post – loose connections can prevent charging. Next, remove the cell caps and check for sufficient fluid in the battery cells. Low fluid levels in any cells may signal battery failure.

Examine the alternator. Is the drive belt connected to the pulley? Is it tight? As a general rule, you should not be able to rotate the alternator drive pulley by hand within the drive belt. If you can, it is likely that the alternator drive pulley slips within the belt and the alternator cannot properly produce electricity.

Talk to your mechanic. If all connections and the alternator drive belt appear to be correctly installed, but you still have dim headlights and slow cranking or no headlights and no cranking, it may be time for you or your mechanic to replace either the alternator or the battery, or both.

Bosch recommends letting your mechanic determine if the problem is really the alternator, and if you need to replace it. If replacing the alternator, make sure that the battery is recharged or replaced if it is totally discharged or dead. Here's why: The alternator needs electricity to operate – a completely discharged battery will not operate an alternator.

Also, don't use an alternator to recharge a discharged battery. When installing an alternator, the battery should be fully recharged before vehicle use. In many cases, depending upon how thoroughly discharged the battery is, it can take four to eight hours. Many technicians and DI-Yers stuff the replacement alternator in and begin charging the dead battery with it. In some cases with weather extremes, the battery never gets fully charged. In many cases, the alternator is asked to do a job it was not designed to do, which can lead to premature failure.

When is it time to upgrade? A quality alternator will perform at least as well as the unit it is replacing and, in some cases, even better. Every new and remanufactured replacement alternator from Bosch is 100 percent full-load tested and backed by a 24-hour emergency roadside assistance plan. If any Bosch alternator fails within two years of the date of purchase, Bosch will provide a free jump-start or tow from a qualified roadside service provider.

But why did the alternator fail in the first place? Was it perhaps overloaded with too many accessories and amp-hungry options? If your vehicle is loaded with electrical options, make sure the replacement alternator is a quality unit that is built to last. (This may be the ideal time to upgrade the electrical system for greater capacity.)

Bosch alternators, whether new or remanufactured, feature robust, high tolerance bearings, a superior-duty diode rectifier plate and overall design and construction that allows them to generate amperage mile after mile, under tough driving conditions. Internal insulation and excellent airflow make them replacements that will provide years of good service. Bosch replacement alternators are designed as direct replacements for original equipment units and "bolt right in," using the original wiring and bracketry.

Bosch has the answer for those overloaded automotive circuits as well. Enhanced capacity alternators make excellent upgrades for vehicles which use more electrical options than their original alternators can handle. These include heavy-duty alternators that replace IAR alternators installed on Ford V-8s from 1984-1995, and produce a steady 90 amps; performance-oriented alternators that replace the Delco CS alternators installed in Corvettes, Camaros, Firebirds and many Chevrolet/GMC trucks and produce an honest 100 amps; high output, high capacity alternators for a variety of sport compact vehicles, including Chevrolet trucks ranging from S-10s to Suburbans from 1985-2000 and most Ford Ranger trucks, as well as many popular "tuner" vehicles; and 150 amp alternators for Dodge trucks equipped with the Hemi engine.

Wasted Gas... It's A Drop In The Bucket

Loose gas caps, under inflated tires, faulty thermostats, worn spark plugs, malfunctioning engine controls, poor wheel alignment and the list goes on. These are among the conditions that daily cost consumers millions of dollars in wasted fuel.

"Something as innocuous as an improperly tightened gas cap, for example, or one that's missing or defective, might seem a minor factor," said Rich White of the Car Care Council. "But consider that 17 percent of the vehicles on U.S. highways have either misused or missing gas caps, causing 147,000,000 gallons of gas per year to vaporize into the atmosphere (source: Service Tech Magazine, September 2000).

"To the maxim 'waste not, want not,' we need to add 'be car care aware,' because most drivers are unaware of the economic consequences of neglected maintenance."

White said the nearly 150 million gallons of gas out of the filler cap are literally a drop in the bucket of waste.

"Among the six worst offenders are under inflated tires and incorrect wheel alignment, conditions which increase rolling resistance. Like driving with the parking brake not fully released, it can cost a mile or two per gallon on a car that normally delivers 20 miles per gallon.

Among other gas guzzlers," said White, "are dirty oil, a mile per gallon; a slipping automatic transmission, another mile per gallon and as much as two mpg for a cooling system thermostat that causes the engine to run too cold.

"Finally, there could be a malfunction of one or more components in the fuel, ignition or emission control

Keep That New Car Look With The Right Wax

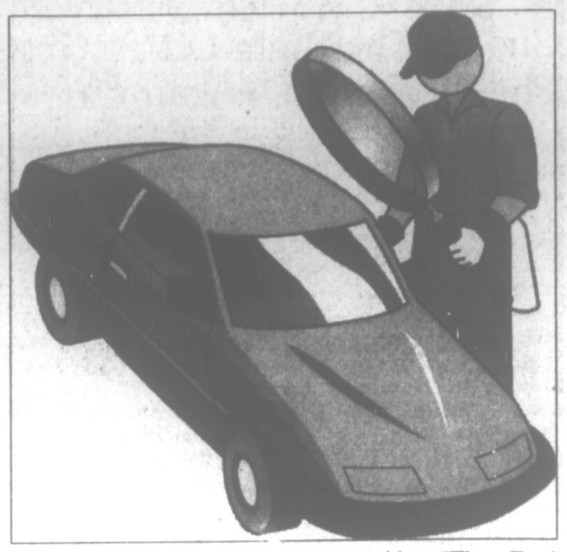
There is no mistaking the appeal of a shiny new car. That fresh-from-the-showroom look turns heads and garners nods of approval. Yet pollution, weather, scratches and a host of other pesky problems can leave your car's exterior looking dull and less appealing. Perhaps you'd think that waxing can help restore shine to your car. Well, not if you don't use the right product.

Many commonly used waxes can actually dull a new car's mirror finish. They use a combination of wax or silicone and a harsh abrasive polish which causes tiny scratches. The scratches can deflect light, ruin new paint and create an overall reduction in shine.

Your new car should not be exposed to these abrasives – a washing and a follow-up with an abrasive-free wax may be all you need to once again get that sparkling, fresh-from-the-dealership shine.

The most effective waxes are made with imported Carnauba wax. Carnauba is found on a select group of palm trees that grow mainly in Brazil. The first car waxes were composed of this ingredient and were abrasive-free. As the costs of gathering and importing this natural wax skyrocketed, chem-ists created less expensive "wax-less" substitutes. Abrasives were then added to these new products. They were billed as the "lazy man's one-step car polish." Unfortunately, they've never been able to equal the extreme high gloss and lasting power of pure Carnauba wax. The progression from Carnauba to man-made synthetics occurred over many years. So, only astute consumers realized they were getting less shine for their money.

Today it is difficult to find an abrasive-free car wax with the best grades of Carnauba. One company that markets a blend of Carnauba waxes is the Malm Chemical Corp. Their Carnauba wax contains no cleansers, polishes, abrasives or anything that can scratch paint. A quarter-pint of the concentrated liquid Carnauba will cover more cars than a full pint of most store-bought waxes.



Readers of this newspaper can obtain a quarter-pint bottle for $7.99 plus $2 for shipping (U.S. funds) – a 45-percent discount off the regular cost of $17.95. You'll also receive a free 11-page guide, "The Truth About Car Waxes." It has tips on the proper way to care for your car's finish. This offer is limited to one bottle per customer and will soon expire. The wax is backed by a strong guarantee: If you don't think it outshines anything you've ever used on your car, return it for a full refund of your $9.99.

Truck Bed Liner Makes Protecting Your Investment Easy, Affordable

Pick-up trucks continue to be one of the most versatile and popular vehicles on American roadways. One reason is that automakers have kept them up with consumers' tastes by arming them with more performance features and luxurious appointments. This has increased the average price and motivated owners to keep them longer. Thus, today's upscale pick-up truck drivers see them as a valuable investment that warrants preventative maintenance and protective treatments, such as a bed liner.

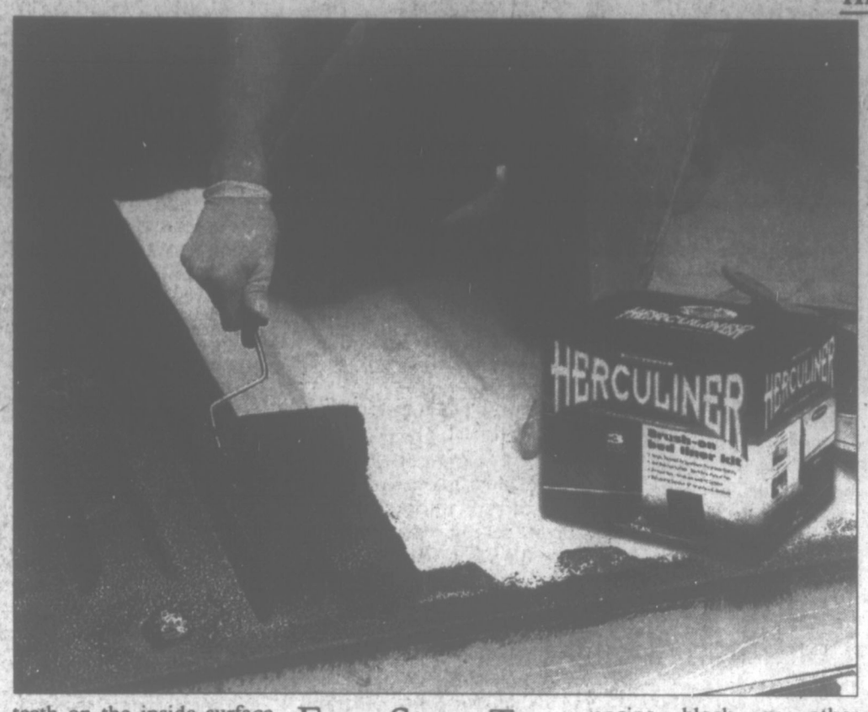
"While many pick-up truck buyers immediately invest in protection for their truck beds, a lot of people don't realize the value a tough, durable bed liner makes over the life of the vehicle," says Lynn Repak, brand manager for Herculiner®, America's #1 do-it-yourself roll-on bed liner.

Unlike plastic drop-in liners, permanently sprayed or rolled-on bed liners bond directly to the metal of the truck, sealing the surface and eliminating rust and corrosion. Because the liner actually forms to the contours of the truck, it also provides a layer of sound proofing versus drop-ins, which often are not an exact fit and then rattle, squeak, and increase wind vibration noise. Most importantly, the polyurethane formula found in Herculiner and most dealer-installed products provides a flexible, impact-absorbent and skid-resistant surface. Less expensive roll-on products often are made of vinyl polymers or epoxy bases, which tend to be more brittle and crack under continuous pressure.

"The good news is that those who decide to add a bed liner later on can get the quality and durability of polyurethane in a do-it-yourself installation kit at their local auto parts store for less than a $100," Repak said. Herculiner is sold in a ready-to-use kit with two rollers, a paintbrush, a scuff pad and a gallon of bed liner coating. Plus, it contains rubber granules for tough, skid-resistant protection, so it need only be stirred and applied without worry of mixing in other additives or hardeners. It's a simple application process, and cures within a few hours. Alternatively, Herculiner is also available through spray-on dealers throughout the country, for those interested in having their liner professionally installed.

According to Repak, polyurethane coatings also have many other alternative uses beyond bed liner protection. "Whether you want to protect the undercoating and wheel wells of the vehicle, add more skid resistance to truck steps for safer footing, or protect the running boards or grill guards from rocks and gravel, you'll find Herculiner to be an effective tool in adding protection and skid resistance in a variety of areas," she explained. "In fact, it can be used to coat wood, metal, concrete, plastic, or fiberglass, so the possibility of usages are endless."

To find out where you can find Herculiner Brush-on Bed Liner kits or a nearby dealer to install the spray-on bed liner and UV topcoat, visit www.herculiner.com or call 1-877-HERCULINER (437-2854).



It Is All In The Timing

With automotive engines as with many aspects of daily life, timing is critical. One vehicle component often overlooked during routine maintenance is the engine timing belt. If it fails, the engine will stop and the car will coast to a stop. The lucky motorist will only have the inconvenience of being stranded on the side of the road until the car can be towed to a repair facility to have the timing belt replaced. On the other hand, the engine might suffer severe, if not catastrophic, damage to its internal components.

This potential disaster can be avoided easily and relatively inexpensively by replacing the timing belt within the required replacement interval.

Timing belts resemble an engine accessory serpentine belt in appearance, only they typically have square teeth on the inside surface. They usually are constructed of rubber reinforced with nylon. The timing belt transfers the rotation of the crankshaft to the camshaft. The rotating camshaft activates the valves, which provide air and fuel to the cylinders and expel combustion gases to the exhaust system.

The valves and pistons are constantly moving up and down at very high speeds. When the pistons are down, the valves are open; when the piston is at the top of its travel, the valves are closed. Some engines don't allow clearance between a valve at its lowest point and a piston at its highest. The timing belt, therefore, is the critical link to ensure that these components don't collide. If collision occurs, damage to the valves, pistons, cylinder head and cylinder walls can result. This can be an expensive repair.

Timing belts usually are protected from foreign objects by a cover, making visual inspection impossible.

Many domestic vehicles built within the last several years and the majority of imports are equipped with a timing belt. Other engines rely on a timing chain rather than a belt. Refer to your owner's manual or take your car to a repair facility if you are unsure. The owner's manual maintenance schedule is a source of timing belt replacement intervals, typically every 60,000 to 90,000 miles.

Timing belt replacement usually requires removal of the engine drive belt that operates the alternator, water pump, power steering pump and air conditioner. Consider replacing this belt, or multiple belts, when having a new timing belt installed.

Easy Steps To Remember If In An Accident

If you're ever in an accident, here's a list of 11 easy steps to remember as compiled by the National Safety Council:

- Stop your vehicle if it is clear, safe and legal.
- Move the vehicle out of the traveled roadway, if it is clear, safe and legal. (In some states it is against the law to move the vehicle from the place where the accident occurred. Check the ordinance in your area.)
- Turn off the ignitions of the cars involved.
- Make a first aid check of all persons involved in the accident.
- Call the police and, if necessary, emergency medical services.
- Mark the scene of the accident with flares or retroreflective triangles.
- Gather the names of all persons in the motor vehicles and people who witnessed the accident.
- Make a quick diagram of where the vehicle occupants were seated and indicate the vehicles' direction of travel and lane. Also note the date, time and weather conditions.
- Ask to see the other driver's license and write down the number.
- Exchange insurance company information. DO NOT discuss "fault" or make statements about the accident to anyone but the police.
- Get a copy of the police report of the accident from the local precinct.

Boosting Your Battery With Cables Is Easy

In the world of automotive emergencies, motorists need to learn certain procedures for "safety's sake." Two of the most valuable lessons, changing a tire and hooking up jumper cables, are best learned before an emergency arises, according to the Car Care Council.

The process of boosting a battery is especially important in cold weather. Jumper cables or cables on a portable battery booster should be connected properly to avoid sparks, which can cause an explosion of the hydrogen gas emitting from a battery. Beyond this, an incorrect hook-up can damage critical, and expensive, electronic components.

The procedure is simple:

Connect the positive (+) clamp to the positive terminal of the healthy battery and the other positive clamp to the corresponding terminal of the dead battery.

Next, the negative (-), or ground, terminal on the good battery and, finally, the negative clamp to the engine block, frame or other grounded metal as far as possible from the battery. You want to avoid sparks in the vicinity of the explosive hydrogen gas that emits from the battery. Do not connect it to the ground terminal (negative).

When using a portable battery booster, the process is much the same.

Connect the positive clamp of the booster cable to the positive clamp of the dead battery. Then connect the negative cable to the engine block or other grounded metal away from the battery.

The Council offers an additional suggestion: If you are buying jumper cables or a portable battery booster, buy the best quality you can afford. Look for well-insulated clamps and 8-gauge wire. (Note: the lower the wire gauge number, the heavier the gauge.) Under the heavy electrical load of boost starting, lightweight cables may not be able to deliver enough current to start some engines. In fact, they have been known to melt in the user's hand.

If your battery is three years old or older and you haven't had it checked, it's a good preventive measure to do so, suggests the Council.

Wasted Gas

systems, especially critical in cold weather driving. The fuel penalty for just one misfiring spark plug is two or three miles per gallon.

"Combining all of these discrepancies into one vehicle, the cost of wasted fuel easily could exceed recent increases in pump prices," said White. "It's what being car care aware is all about."

Are Dirty Cabin Air Filters Preventing You From Breathing Easily In Your Car?

During the hot summer months, contaminants, such as pollen, dust, mold spores and smog, can easily enter a vehicle's passenger compartment through the air conditioning, heating and ventilation systems, making the air in the car six times dirtier than the air outside, cautions the Car Care Council.

Motorists can protect themselves and their passengers from these containments by replacing the vehicle's cabin air filter annually or more often in areas with heavy containments, or whenever heating or cooling efficiency is reduced. Cabin air filters clean the incoming air and remove allergens – especially beneficial to people who suffer from allergies.

If your vehicle is model year 2000 or newer, there's a good chance it is equipped with a cabin air filter.

"There are about 30 million vehicles in North America that currently have cabin air filters," said Rich White, executive director of the Car Care Council. "However, most people have never heard of a cabin air filter or don't know if their vehicle is equipped with one. Vehicle owners should refer to their owners' manuals for this information."

If the cabin air filter is not replaced, it can cause musty odors in the vehicle, and over time, the heater and air conditioner may become damaged by corrosion. A dirty or clogged cabin air filter can also cause containments to become so concentrated in the cabin that passengers actually breathe in more fumes and particles when riding in the car compared to walking down the street.

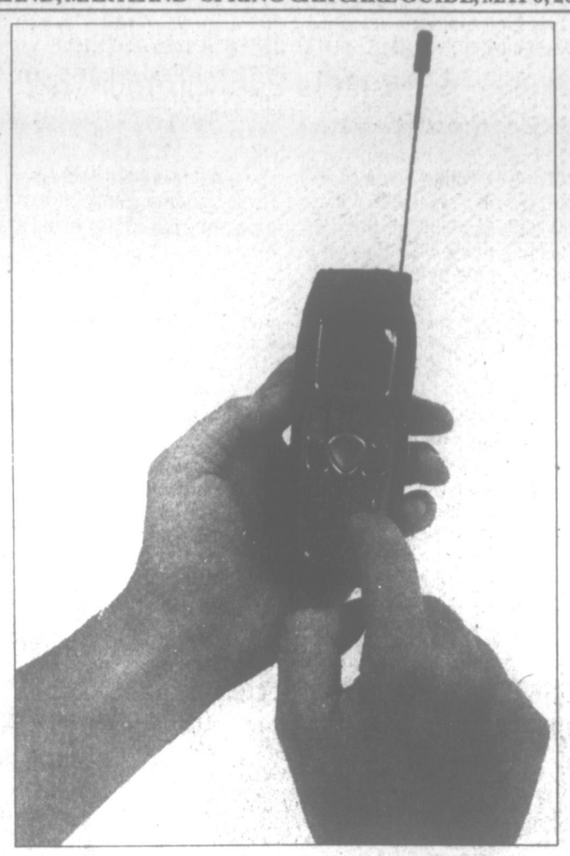
Stay Connected Even While On The Roadways

It's hard to imagine life in the pre-cellular era. Cell phones offer so many benefits, from finding that blind date at a restaurant to enabling you to chat while you walk. When it comes to cars, they are especially helpful when you get lost en route to a family function or are stuck on the side of the road with a flat tire.

With so many plans on the market, choosing a provider and plan can be overwhelming, not to mention headache-inducing. AT&T, T-Mobile, Cingular Wireless, Sprint and Verizon are just a few cellular companies that all offer packages at varying price points and daytime and weekend minute options. Making the choice will take some time and research. To get you started, here are a few simple questions to ask yourself to help determine what's right for you.

Q: What will you be using it for?

A: By figuring this out first, you'll be able to determine how many minutes you'll need per month. If your phone is simply going to be for emergencies, save money and get the minimal number of minutes. But if you think sitting alone in traffic for three hours is a good time to call everyone in your phone book, you'll need a more inclusive package. Remember that phones are for more than talking these days. They can also be used for text messaging, surfing the Web or e-mailing. Think about how often you will be using those functions and what kind of plan will get you the most for your money. The more you know about how you'll be using your phone and how often, the easier it will be to pick a plan.



Q: Who will you be calling?

A: If you're only making local calls, you don't need to spring for long distance but if there's any chance you'll be calling the opposite coast, a long distance plan is a necessity. Many companies offer inexpensive nationwide coverage but take on high amounts for long distance phone calls made on a local plan.

Q: How many people in your family need a cell phone?

A: Family plans are gaining in popularity. They can often save you money in the long run, but again, you need to be careful when picking your plan. Instead of each phone getting an individualized number of minutes, family phones share airtime. Just make sure that you get enough minutes to cover everyone in your family. Family plans are a good option if you want to give your parents or grandparents a phone to keep in their car. They probably wouldn't purchase a phone for themselves, but by putting them on your family plan, they can have a phone to take with them on the road in the case of an emergency. And you'll feel better knowing they have one.

Q: Which company provides my home phone service?

A: Many companies offer deals if you use them for both land line and mobile service and sometimes even high speed Internet access (or DSL). Though you might be spending more on your cell phone, you might be saving with this package deal. Check with each provider to see if they offer any such plans.

Q: Which plans do my friends have and are they generally satisfied?

A: Asking around and word of mouth are probably the best ways to do research. Sure, you should do some price and plan comparisons on your own, but that won't tell you about service quality or hidden fees. If your next door neighbor has a hard time getting a signal, you probably will too. That can lead to extra charges, not to mention frustration and defeating the purpose of having a cell phone to begin with. Also, by talking with someone with similar cell phone needs, you'll get a better idea of how many minutes you'll need each month and how much they will cost.

Learn How To Lengthen Your Tires' Lifetime

Like most of us, we buy a set of tires, have them put on our car and then forget about them until our next inspection rolls around or until we notice they need air or we get a flat. We should be checking our vehicle's tires more often to make sure they are fit for the road and to ensure their longevity. Here is a checklist, courtesy of Shell, on what you can do to make sure you get the longest life out of them.

PRESSURE

One-fourth of all cars and one-third of all light trucks have at least one substantially underinflated tire. These tires can cause blowouts and tire failure, which can cause serious accidents. And appearances can be deceiving – a tire can lose up to half of its air pressure without appearing flat. Overinflation, on the other hand, puts unnecessary stress on tires, which can result in irregular tread wear. Check tire inflation with an accurate gauge, which can be found in any auto parts store and most service stations.

ALIGNMENT

Improper alignment of your car's steering mechanisms – including the front and rear tires and the steering wheel – can reduce the lifespan of your tires by thousands of miles. Have a tire dealer check the alignment if you notice:

- Excessive or uneven tire wear;
- The steering wheel "pulling" to the right or the left;
- A feeling of "looseness" or "wandering;"
- Steering wheel vibration;
- The steering wheel is not centered when the car is moving straight ahead.

ROTATION

If you fail to rotate your tires, the front tires may last 10,000 to 20,000 miles, while the rear tires will last 50,000 to 80,000 miles. To achieve more uniform wear, experts recommend that you rotate your tires every 6,000 miles. Refer to your vehicle's owner's manual for correct pattern rotation. Common patterns include straight forward and straight back or crisscrossed.

TREAD

Advanced and unusual wear can reduce the ability of tread to grip the road in adverse conditions – especially on wet roads. When checking tires, look for uneven wear, high and low areas, bubbling or excessively smooth areas, as well as cuts or foreign objects.

Tires must be replaced when tread has worn down to 1/16 of an inch. If you don't have a measurement device, use a penny to check tread depth. Insert a penny with the head pointed down into the tread groove. If you can see all of Lincoln's head, your tires need to be replaced.

When shopping for new tires, it's best to replace all four at the same time – if you have been rotating your tires as recommended. You should also think about the type of driving you do most often – highways, rural back roads or the like – and choose tires that are right for you.

Make Any Car Pregnant-Friendly

Just as new parents childproof their homes with outlet caps to prevent fingers from getting caught in electrical sockets or safety gates to prevent tumbles down stairs, they must play it safe with their cars, too. "New attention is being paid to styling, safety, interior space and performance in the automobile industry," says Brian Chee, an automotive expert from Autobytel Inc, an online car resource. That's good news for families who are expecting and parents – they can expect more from new cars.

For pregnant drivers, there are a few extras to look for when buying a new car or add to the car(s) you already own. They include:

Adjustable foot pedals: They allow you to sit back 3 inches from the wheel.

A tilting steering wheel: A pregnant belly can obstruct your turning capabilities or cause you to sit back further than is prudent, so a tilting wheel is important once you reach the third trimester. Tilting steering wheels are standard on newer models, but if you're driving an older car, inspect its steering gear.

Airbags: "The airbag has been toned down since it first came out," says Brendan Tobin, an independent consultant who trains workers in the automotive industry on how and why their products work. If you are concerned about an airbag's impact, look for a car with dual-stage airbags which have sensors that determine whether to send out a single- or dual-stage reaction, tempering the explosivity of the airbag.

Safety belt specs: The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) notes that during an accident, safety belts redistribute impact to the stronger parts of your body and slow your body's movement. They recommend that pregnant drivers place the lap belt under the belly and across the hips, with the shoulder strap across the center of the chest.

If you're looking to modify a car that you already own, you can try the dealership where you bought your car or talk to your car's manufacturing company about specifics. But if you want to research on your own, here are a few places where you can get what you need to make your car pregnancy- and baby-friendly.

Tilt steering wheel: www.buy-steering.com

POST-PREGNANCY CARS

After pregnancy, there's a whole new set of road rules. When kids arrive, safety and comfort are still top priorities. Here are a few things to look for:

Test the tailgate or trunk. Pay attention to whether you're comfortable toting a stroller, toys and baby gear.

Ask about childproof features. Back-door locks and window-lock options will keep child's hands from opening doors while the car is in motion or fingers from getting caught in automatic windows. These features are often standard on newer "family" cars like SUVs and station wagons.

Eye some entertainment. Systems like VisuaLogic's headrest monitors for movie-watching or Eclipse's multi-talented entertainer (with a touch control display that allows you to choose where the audio should play, as in "rear left only") can keep your passengers – and the driver – content on the road.

SAFETY IS CRUCIAL, especially when driving for two.

Change A Tire – Yourself

More likely than not, you will find yourself with a flat tire no matter how careful you are. What if the flat occurs when you are by yourself and have no one else to help you? You can always call an automobile club like AAA that offers road-side assistance, if you are enrolled in one. But if not, you are on your own.

These simple steps from Shell, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety, the Federal Highway Administration and the National Safety Council will prevent you from panicking if you get a flat.

1. Pull off the road and stop in a safe place. Put the car in park on level ground if possible and apply the parking brake. If your car has a standard transmission, place the gear shift in reverse or first gear.
2. Retrieve the spare tire, jack and lug wrench. Remove hub caps with the lug wrench.
3. Loosen each lug nut one turn counterclockwise while the car is still on the ground.
4. Place the jack under the reinforced section of the car's body. (The location of these sections is listed in your owner's manual.) Jack up the car until the flat tire is several inches off the ground.
5. Remove the lug nuts and the wheel.
6. Place the spare tire on the axle and align the holes. Replace the lug nuts and screw each on lightly.
7. Lower the car, and remove the jack. Then use the wrench to firmly tighten each lug nut.
8. Have the flat tire repaired or replaced and reinstalled.

Rejuvenate Your Car With A Trip To The Area Spa

The spa industry is booming in America, and it's no wonder: More men and women have experienced the therapeutic results that deep cleansing, exfoliation and massage have on their skin, aching muscles and overall health. But most people don't realize that a visit to the "spa" is good for cars, too – especially in the spring.

"If there's one time of year to bring your car into the 'spa,' it's spring. Cars need rejuvenation just like we do," said Mark Thorsby, executive director of the International Carwash Association (ICA). "A good professional wash and detail will restore a dirty, tired-looking car back to showroom quality, or close to it."

Thorsby, also known as "Mr. Car Love" because of his passion for clean cars, says full-service car washes are indeed spas for cars since they offer the same types of services as regular spas: cleansing, exfoliation, rubbing and polishing. The harsh winter season can add layers of corrosive road salt to a car's exterior, including hard-to-reach places such as grills, wheel wells and the undercarriage. Mud and oil from slush and rain can discolor floor mats and rub into upholstery, he says.

Here's what a 'car spa' entails:

•It starts with a complete hand wash, rinse and dry.

Similar to the rejuvenating skin treatments applied during facials, cars also need exfoliation to remove unwanted dirt and grime from their exteriors.

•Next comes polishing, which smoothes the paint surface while eliminating any contaminants such as pollen residue, road salt or bird droppings. Think of it as an aromatherapy massage that relieves stress and makes a car's "skin" shine.

•Next comes waxing, an essential step that protects cars from the harmful effects of the environment, including acid rain and UV rays.

•A full interior cleaning follows, including thorough window washing and carpet vacuuming and shampooing.

•Finally, the wheels and engine get a professional scrub. In some cases, the oil and other necessary components that make cars run are checked, too.

Costs for professional detailing services vary depending on how thoroughly a car needs to be cleaned, but on average, expect to pay around $100. "Car owners who have never experienced a detail before can't believe how good their car looks when it's done. I hear the same two comments all the time: 'My car looks like new' or 'Is that my car?'" Thorsby says.

The ICA also recommends car owners wash their cars professionally at least once or twice a year – or more often, depending on where they live and drive – to preserve their cars' value. Auto experts such as the "Kelley Blue Book" agree that cars in excellent condition and appearance can be valued as much as $1,500 higher than those in good or fair condition.

"While you can always replace a damaged or worn out auto part, it's almost impossible to send your car in for a complete makeover once the rust and corrosion set in," warns Thorsby. "Professional car washes are the easiest way to maintain your car's appearance. They take anywhere from five to 15 minutes, and cost just a couple hundred dollars a year."

Another reason to get cars washed regularly: According to an ICA survey conducted last year among 1,000 car owners, 84 percent feel an emotional connection to their cars and even view them as family members. One in four car owners give their car a name, and 22 percent keep photos of their car. Despite these affections, more than 50 percent of American car drivers wash their cars less than once a month, and 16 percent never wash their cars – translating to 73 million grimy automobiles in the US.

An online resource for car washing facts and tips – including a Car Wash Wizard that forecasts a car's cleaning needs by its location – can be found at www.carlove.org.

Get Tuned In To The Sounds Of The Car Stereos

Road trip season is approaching, and no highway outing is complete without a killer stereo to blast your favorite tunes. With continued advancements in car stereos and audio technology, this spring may be a good time to upgrade. Building a car stereo system is a balance of tech gadgetry, audio engineering and physics. With so many options on the market, the task of choosing the right car stereo can be daunting. Get tuned in with this primer on the basic components:

HEAD UNIT

What we most often think of as the "car stereo" is called the head unit – the knobs and buttons that connect you to the rest of the system. Choice here mostly comes down to user friendliness and personal preference. Look for controls that are easy to see and use, and think about how you will use them while driving. If you have a CD player, make sure it reads all disc formats, including CD-R and CD-RW.

Many head units offer the ability to play minidisks, MP3s and even DVDs. Satellite radio is also gaining popularity with its sports programs and commercial-free radio for cars and homes. Sirius Satellite Radio Inc. is currently the market leader, with more than 260,000 subscribers at the end of 2003. (Note that these features require separate equipment and subscription fees.)

SPEAKERS

The speakers are what move the sound to your ears. Many factors ultimately determine what kind of speakers you need, but there are a few general guidelines. Look for speakers with a high sensitivity rating, which means that the speaker will play louder using the same power as a speaker with a lower rating. For serious audiophiles, no car audio system is complete without subwoofers, which are like window-rattling speakers. Humans can hear higher-pitched sounds better than lower-pitched ones; for lower-range sound frequencies to be heard at the same level, they require more power and bigger speakers.

AMPLIFIERS

To achieve sound that can be felt as well as heard, an amplifier is an absolute necessity. Through a complex system of physics, amplifiers do exactly what their name implies – they amplify the power of the signal (measured in watts) going to the speakers. While amps are best known for generating head-turning power, they can also achieve a cleaner sound and increased clarity. However, be warned that it's easy to spend too much for too little. Consult a certified and reputable audio technician (and go for a trusted brand) before diving into this arena and investing your hard earned money.

If you are serious about quality sound while on the road, you'll discover that there really is a difference between a $200 and a $2,000 stereo system. But while the flashy gizmos may look appealing, you have to go with what's right for your vehicle, listening habits and budget. Need more information? As any serious road-tripper knows, your local auto parts store, dealership or electronics shop are always the best places to start before you hit the road.

Regular Maintenance Is Good For Your Car's Health And Warranty

Preventive maintenance is key to your car's performance – and it can mean savings down the road.

Today's family automobile is a sophisticated, computer controlled machine that requires less care and is more dependable than its predecessors. But to keep your car running efficiently, regularly scheduled maintenance is key to reliable performance and can mean savings down the road. Without regular maintenance, you can shorten the life of your vehicle and void its warranty.

NAPA AutoCare Centers recommend a five-point preventive maintenance program to keep your car running smoothly:

Oil Change – Unless your driving is mostly highway miles, today's engines will run better and last longer with clean oil every 3,000 miles or three months, including a filter change. A $30 oil change can save you from costly engine repairs later.

Brakes – An unusual noise or a gentle tug on the steering wheel when stopping are common warning signs that it's time to check the brakes. A good rule of thumb is to check the brakes at the 6,000- to 7,500-mile mark when tires should be rotated.

Coolant System – Thoroughly flush coolant systems and replace with the appropriate antifreeze at least every two years to minimize metal deterioration and to keep the system flowing. And be sure to use the correct water to coolant mix. Check the coolant reservoir monthly (and the windshield washer reservoir, too) and top off as needed.

Battery – As part of your car's regular maintenance, ask your technician to make sure the battery cover is in place and the battery is firmly anchored. Most important, clean the battery of corrosion, especially the electrical posts.

Check-Engine Light – An illuminated check-engine light on your dashboard is your car's early warning system that something is wrong. It could be as simple as a loose gas cap or spark plug wire, or a serious forewarning of a mechanical failure. Take your car to an ASE-certified technician as soon as possible to diagnose and fix the problem.

You can find ASE-Certified technicians who are trained to perform scheduled maintenance on many makes and models at more than 12,000 NAPA AutoCare Centers nationwide. They install quality NAPA parts and their work is backed by a 12 month/ 12,000 mile "Peace of Mind" warranty – all while keeping your vehicle's warranty intact. Call 1-800-LET-NAPA to find the NAPA AutoCare Center nearest you, or visit www.NAPAonline.com.

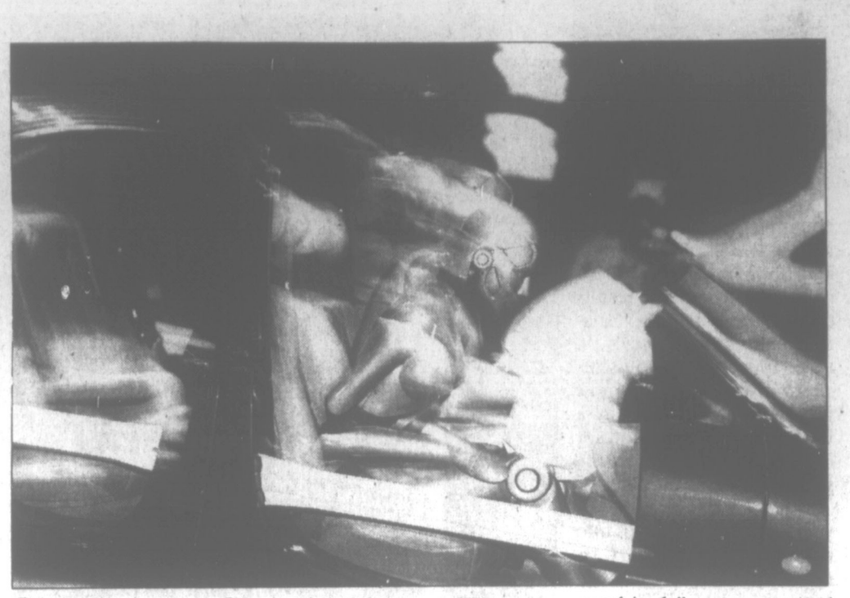
Cold Facts About A/C Refrigeration

How did we ever get along without air conditioning in our cars? It's a feature we take for granted until, suddenly, it's blowing hot air.

In the past few years, many owners have discovered that fixing an inoperative air conditioner can cost a few hundred dollars or more, depending upon the make and model of vehicle. The reason is that the old standby R-12 refrigerant, trade named DuPont Freon, has been replaced by R-134a. Touted as being environmentally safer than its predecessor, R-134a has been standard since '94.

If your older vehicle needs major repairs to the air conditioning system you can expect to replace refrigerant and the oil in the compressor in addition to the old components. You also may need to install a retrofit conversion. Do not allow anyone to mix refrigerants. They're not interchangeable. You cannot add R-134a to your older air conditioner without first flushing the system. Further, according to the Car Care Council, some substitutes are volatile mixtures of propane, butane and flammable hydrocarbons. Keep in mind the fact that if your vehicle is leaking refrigerant, you're damaging the ozone layer.

An annual inspection of the vehicle, including the air conditioning system, may help forestall costly repairs. Many automotive service shops offer AC inspection specials when warm weather arrives. Otherwise, ask your service center to evaluate your system before those hot and humid days of summer.



Consumers Should Know The Facts About Windshield Safety

When it comes to a windshield, there are facts about safety that every consumer should know.

"More than just keeping you dry and bug-free while driving, your windshield is extremely important in maintaining your safety every time you get behind the wheel," said Alan Boatwright, President of Greenwood Glass Co., and a member of the Leadership Council of PPG PROSTARS, a national alliance of independently owned auto glass repair and replacement specialists. "There are a number of things every vehicle owner should know, but most don't," he continued.

The windshield is a critical component of a vehicle's safety system.

Among its other functions, the windshield is a critical part of a vehicle's safety system. It is classified as a safety device and is part of every vehicle's structural safety system. In the event of an accident, the windshield enables the passenger side air bag to function properly and, in the event of a rollover, it minimizes roof collapse.

Boatwright said that, depending on the location and severity of windshield damage, repairing cracks and chips is a viable option that can restore the structural integrity of the windshield's glass. Because it's quick and relatively inexpensive, insurance companies will often not charge policyholders who have comprehensive coverage for a windshield repair. However, if a repair is done when a replacement is necessary or if the repair isn't done properly, car owners can be at a higher risk for severe injury.

An important factor in the safety of a repair is the training of the technician performing the work. "Quality auto glass work should only be done by trained, experienced, safety-oriented technicians. There are a lot of mistakes an untrained technician can make that would jeopardize the integrity of the repair," said Boatwright.

A large part of finding an experienced technician, he notes, is choosing a repair facility that stresses technician training. Vehicle owners have the right to choose the glass shop of their choice for repairs even if an insurance company pushes the owner toward a particular shop or network of shops, a practice widely known as steering.

"Steering is illegal and unethical," commented Boatwright. "Every vehicle owner has the right to choose the shop best qualified for the job."

And that includes mobile glass service. Boatwright notes that mobile service providers often do repairs and replacements outdoors and that unregulated moisture and temperature conditions can affect the quality of the repair or replacement. "If not properly cured and set, the adhesive holding the windshield in place might not function properly in an accident." He suggests contacting a service provider with both in-shop and mobile service so the best solution can be found.

Likewise, no vehicle should be driven after a windshield replacement until the windshield adhesive is fully cured. "Ask your auto glass technician what the safe drive-away time is. If the adhesive isn't cured, the force of the airbag deploying in an accident can blow out the windshield's glass," continued Boatwright.

LT. GOVERNOR VISITS RT. 40 – Maryland Lt. Gov. Michael Steele stopped by Rt. 40 Elementary School Friday for a visit, and received a green school hat from the fifth graders. He joked with them because the hat matched his outfit, and walked through the classes announcing, "I'm color coordinated." He talked freely with the students in each classroom during his afternoon visit. "The students really enjoyed his visit," said a school spokesperson. "He was great with the kids." WHITTEMORES IN INTERNATIONAL KAYAK CHAMPIONSHIPS – Jess and Chara Whittemore, husband and wife kayakers from Friendsville, have both qualified to compete in the Wildwater World Cup Championships. The international event will be held in Garmisch, Germany, on May 20 through 23. Chara will be vying in the K-1W division (kayak, one person, women) and Jess will be in K-1 (kayak, one person, men). Both Whittemores qualified for the event last month at the USA Wildwater Team Trials, held on the Gauley River in Richwood, W.Va. Chara came in first of four in the women's division, and Jess finished third in a field of seven. According to the USA Canoe/Kayak Team web site, the USA Team Trials is one of two highly important races on the domestic race calendar (the other being National Championships), and probably the most important, with athletes training specifically to qualify to compete in the World Championships and World Cup events held in Europe. Jess is a boat designer and builder who has paddled the Upper Youghiogheny literally thousands of times. Their results in the world event will be published as soon as they are available.

Two Residents Arrested By GC Task Force

Two Friendsville residents were arrested following a monthlong investigation that culminated in the execution of a search and seizure warrant on a Newton Savage Road residence near Friendsville, according to the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force.

Discovered in the search were materials associated with the manufacturing of methamphetamine, including suspected ephedrine, red phosphorous, iodine, and lye. Suspected powder methamphetamine, suspected marijuana, and marijuana plants were also recovered.

Darwin Dean Hunter, 36, was arrested and charged with manufacturing methamphetamine, attempted manufacture of methamphetamine, possession of methamphetamine, manufacturing marijuana, possession of marijuana, and maintaining a common nuisance.

Silvie Redman, 35, was also arrested and charged with possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

In addition, Hunter is being held on outstanding arrest warrants form the state of Arkansas for drug related offenses.

Because of the dangers associated with the manufacturing process of methamphetamine and unknown risks involved, task force investigators were assisted by the Maryland State Police, Special Tactical Assault Team Element (STATE), according to Sheriff Dick Sanders.

STATE team personnel were assisted by the Cumberland Emergency Response Team with entry to the residence. Other agencies assisting in the investigation and one-scene re-

Chamber Opens Station, Plans History Event

The Garrett County Chamber of Commerce officials are celebrating National Tourism Week (May 8-15) with progress on two major initiatives.

"This month, there are two major 'historic' achievements for heritage tourism in Garrett County," said Charlie Ross, president and CEO of the chamber. "The first was the opening of the Oakland Train Station. Seven days a week it will be available for county residents and visitors alike, equipped with the chamber's satellite information space."

The Victorian Queen Anne-style station now is host to the Shoppe at Heritage Square, a retail facility showcasing Garrett County artisan crafts and locally produced agricultural products.

The second initiative will be a 'living history' program commemorating the 250th anniversary of Colonel George Washington's Second Expedition through Garrett County, including his encounter with the French and Native Americans at Jumonville, and the building of Fort Necessity, as well as Washington's surrender there. This event

Three Juveniles Charged With School Incident

Three juveniles were arrested following an investigation of a destruction of property report at Kitzmiller Elementary School Friday evening, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

The case was referred to the Department of Juvenile Services for review.

In other police news, two people were injured in separate incidents involving ATVs.

Julius Nelson Bolyard of the Oakland area was treated for injuries he sustained from an ATV accident. No charges were filed in the Sunday evening incident.

Also that evening, a juvenile from the Oakland area was transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital for treatment of injuries from an ATV accident.

The juvenile was treated and released, and no charges were filed.

Work Begun For Cross-On-The-Hill Project In Oakland

The Mountaintop Ministerial Association's planned "Cross on the Hill" has begun. According to the association, more than $8,600 has been raised so far to erect a large cross which will be placed on the Oakland Overlook.

"The association wishes to express its heartfelt appreciation to the over 40 businesses, churches, and individuals who have contributed to this early fund-raising success," said Rev. Mel Menker of the association.

Land clearing begins this week as brush and a minimal amount of trees are being removed in order to provide access for construction equipment and a clear view of the cross.

Beitzel Corporation, designer and contractor, has finalized the design, and steel for the project has been purchased and ordered. Because of the dramatic increase in worldwide steel prices, noted the spokesperson, it was necessary to purchase the steel immediately.

"Adjustments in the construction of the base were necessary to accommodate the physical site on the Overlook and will actually create a more appealing appearance than originally thought," said Menker. "In spite of the increase in steel prices, the cost to construct the cross will still be within the original estimate of $15,000.

The balance of $10,000, to be raised over and above the construction cost, will of lighting, as well as the ongoing cost of electricity and maintenance, he added.

The estimated installation date is mid-August. The public dedication will follow the completion of the project. A date for this dedication will be announced in The Republican.

The campaign to raise the balance continues. Persons who would like to donate to the project, are asked to make checks payable to the Mountaintop Ministerial Association and mail them to the MTMA, c/o Rev. Mel Menker, P.O. Box 2333, Mtn. Lake Park, MD 21550.

For more information, persons may call Rev. Duane Frederick, president of MTMA, at 301-387-2763.

Additional personnel hired are Jessica Saturday, math resource teacher at Broad Ford Elementary School; Jason Watkins, technology education teacher at Southern High; Ryan Wolf, math teacher at Southern High; Kevin Hoover, custodian at Southern High; and Daniel Livengood, custodian for Northern High.

Approved for retirement was Wanda Hinebaugh, custodian for Southern High School.

OUR TOWN THEATRE PRESENTING PROOF – The next production at Our Town Theatre in Oakland will be the play Proof, slated for presentations on May 19-22 at 8 p.m. each evening. Jane Avery, director, said the play is about a troubled woman named Katherine, who has spent years of caring for her brilliant but unstable father, a famous mathematician. Now, following his death, she must deal with her own volatile emotions, the arrival of her estranged sister Claire, and the attentions of Hal, a former student and colleague of her father's who hopes to find valuable work in the 103 notebooks that her father left behind. "Over the long weekend that follows, a burgeoning romance and the discovery of a mysterious notebook draw Catherine into the most difficult problem of all: How much of her father's madness – or genius – will she inherit?" Avery said. The director warned that Proof contains rude language and is "not for the faint of heart" or for children under 18 years of age unless they are accompanied by a parent. Reservations may be made by calling the theatre at 301-334-5640, option 1. The cast is pictured above. Seated are John Wilson and Susan Bell, and standing are Fred Jacoby and Lynne Elmlinger.

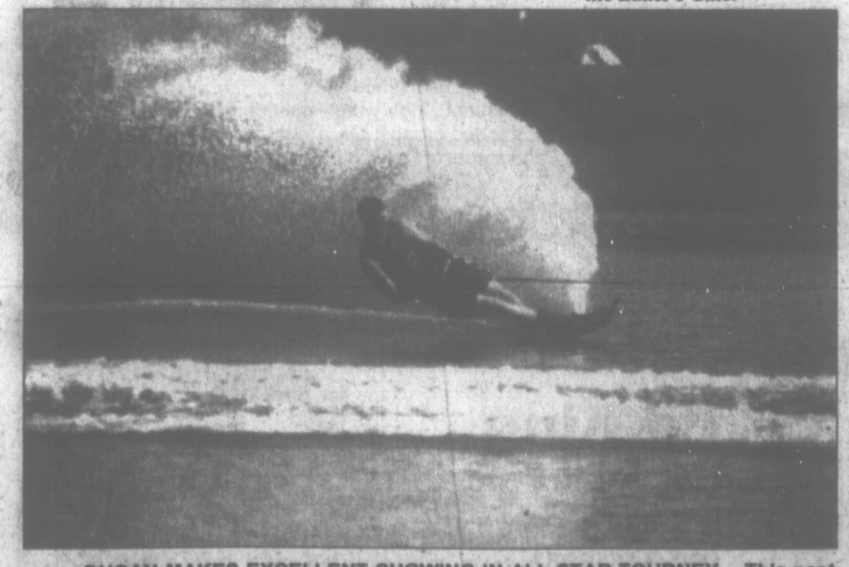
Further Charges Pending Against Local Area Man

Further charges are pending in regard to the investigation of an incident on Cash valley Road in the Pleasant Valley area Sunday evening, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

Anthony Gregory, 36, is currently charged with first-degree assault and second-degree assault.

Members of Garrett Bureau of Investigation are assisting in the investigation.

Gregory is currently detained in the Garrett County Detention Center awaiting an initial appearance before a District Court commissioner.



DUGAN MAKES EXCELLENT SHOWING IN ALL-STAR TOURNEY – This past weekend, the nation's best collegiate skiers dueled it out on the water in Chico, Calif., in one of the National Collegiate Water Ski Association's most prestigious tournaments, the All-Stars. Brad Dugan, a 2003 graduate of Southern Garrett High School and a dean's list student at Florida Southern College in Lakeland, Fla., was one of 10 skiers invited to represent the eastern region. He was also the first freshman to be invited to the All-Star tournament in the history of his college. As a freshman, Brad was hoping to place in the top 20 skiers. He competed against approximately 70 skiers from colleges across the nation. He scored two buoys at 35' off, with a boat speed of 36 mph. With this outstanding performance, Brad placed 7th in the tourney. The skier is sponsored by Bill's Marine and Railey Realty.

GRAND OPENING, AGAIN — The Oakland train station was surely opened in style some 120 years ago, and it was reopened last weekend with a celebration commemorating its restored appearance, and its additions of a visitors' center and a heritage marketplace. Now titled Heritage Square, the historic site will offer a Garrett County Chamber of Commerce office, as well as The Shoppe, a store featuring the handiwork of Mountain Maryland artisans and the farm produce of local growers. The building will be open seven days a week from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. (8 p.m. on Fridays) from Memorial Day through Labor Day. A number of dignitaries were on hand for the ribbon-cutting ceremony, held Saturday. Pictured in the foreground is Dave Bicker, a re-enactor from Grantsville, portraying a scout, trader, and spy of the frontier from the 18th century. In the second row, from left, are Senator John Hafer, Mayor Asa McCain (as he clips the ribbon), Delegate George Edwards, and Charlie Ross, CEO and president of the chamber. In the back, same order, are Tim Magrath from U.S. Senator Paul Sarbanes's office, Commissioners Fred Holliday and Dave Beard, and Duane Yoder, president of the Garrett County Community Action Committee. will take place on May 22 and 23 at the 4-H building near Bittinger.

Historic figures, including a Maryland provincial trooper and several frontiersmen from Wills Creek, will present a trading post of artifacts. Bob Bantz of Cumberland will describe his discovery of portions of the original Braddock Road. Also featured for the weekend will be a program by Robert Adamovich, historian, historical columnist, and lecturer.

"He portrays a maker of maps of the colonial frontier and will present himself in period-correct attire to set the mood for the explanation of the historical events that occurred in the time of the French and Indian War and early colonization," Ross said.

"'Heritage Tourism' means jobs celebrating the richness of something that no one can deny Garrett Countians – a place at the center of frontier history pre-dating the founding of our nation," Ross said.

The chamber president said his staff is proceeding with plans for the Braddock March of 1755, organizing the timeline, route, calendar, and sites.

"The actual portions of the Braddock Road will be marked with signs leading everyone from the interstate to the place where the men of history marched," he said.

Correction Noted

Last week's article about the new uniform water and sewer rates for sanitary district customers contained an error. Effective July 1, customers will pay $54 per quarter for a minimum of 6,000 gallons of water. If they use more, they will be charged an additional $6 per 1,000 gallons, not per quarter as the article stated. The Republican regrets the error.

Smith Honored With Lifetime Achievement

Cindy Smith, the Garrett County Sheriff's Office Community Service coordinator, was honored recently at a ceremony in Annapolis by the Mid Atlantic Association of Women in Law Enforcement with a "Lifetime Achievement Award."

Smith began her career in law enforcement in 1982, when she entered the 82nd Maryland State Police Trooper candidate class. Over the next 22 years, she achieved many noteworthy accomplishments, rising through the ranks to hold the No. 2 position of lieutenant colonel, in the Maryland State Police. She retired from the state police on Jan. 1, 2004.

While working for the state police, she completed the Northwestern University School of Police Staff and Command, the Police Executive Research Forum Senior Management Institute for Police, and the 192nd session of the FBI National Academy, and received her master's degree in management from the Johns Hopkins University.

She has also been recognized by the National Center for Women and Policing, having received its "Breaking the Glass Ceiling" award. She remains active in law enforcement and is a member of the Maryland Chiefs of Police Association, the FBI National Academy Associates, Northwestern University Alumni Association, and the Criminal Justice Information Advisory Board. During the Mid Atlantic Association of Women in Law Enforcement conference, she was elected to serve as the organization's president.

She said that she hopes what she has accomplished so far and her future efforts will serve to assist the women who follow her into a career in law enforcement.

Sheriff Sanders, who presented her with the award, said, "Cindy is a tremendous asset to the people in Garrett County, we are lucky to have her serving with us at the sheriff's office."

Bittersweet Event...

This week's announcement of the closing of the National Guard Armory in Oakland, with Saturday's removal of most of the U.S. Army "stuff" housed there, is somewhat of a bittersweet event.

There is a grand history of the 121st Engineer Battalion unit that was stationed there for many years, a unit that was not only a source of local pride among our military recruits and their families, but also a source of great assistance, particularly in times of difficulty. The then-Company C (later merging with Company B) personnel and equipment were called up on many occasions to assist with snow removal during major storms and clean-up work following floods, fires, and other mini-disasters.

The unit was also placed into action elsewhere, throughout the country, and sometimes overseas, where they provided a variety of assistance to persons in need. Many will remember their response to help restore calm and order in Baltimore during the riots of the 1960s.

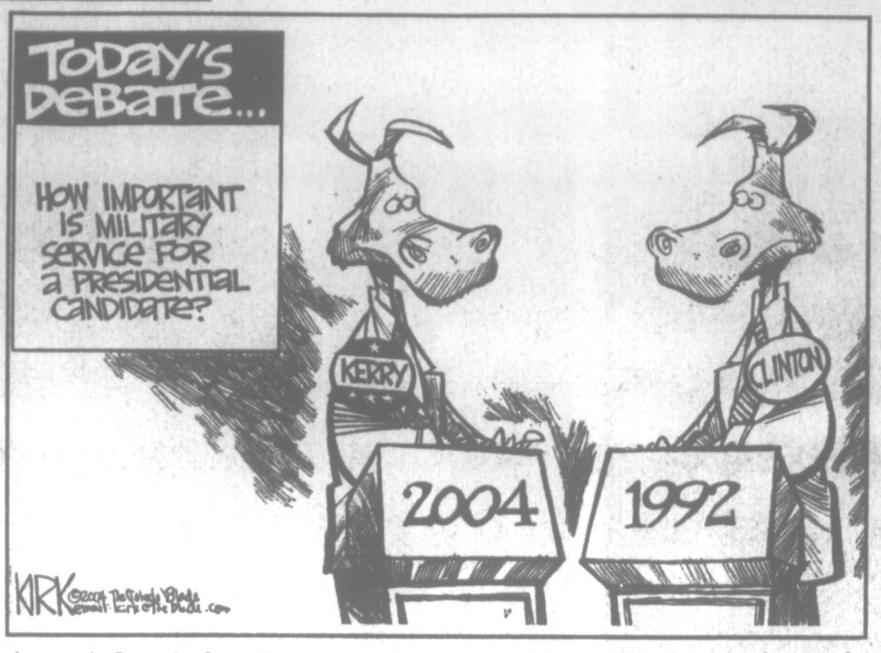
The Guard's expertise, manpower, and equipment was also used for the excavation/construction of several local athletic fields which are heavily used and enjoyed to this day.

The presence of the unit fostered recruitment of Garrett County's young people who may not have entertained the idea of joining the U.S. Army if that local connection did not exist. That experience helped mold many of them into fine, upstanding citizens of our county.

Charlie Company, as it was known for many years, will truly be missed.

The potentially sweet part of this story is that the armory building itself is still there, just waiting to be used for any number of worthy activities. Efforts are under way to turn the building over to the town of Oakland, and many good ideas are being discussed. Just one example is a youth or teen center, which has been the dream of many parents for decades. Garrett College, which already holds some classes there, could expand that "branch campus." If the uses ultimately fill up the present structure, there is room on the property to expand it.

The idea of having a board of directors is excellent, as it could consist of persons representing a variety of entities who can first brainstorm all the possibilities, and then come up with a workable plan for managing the facility. It could turn out to be a real gift horse to Oakland and the surrounding area.



Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Mr. Newhall, I am sorry my article turned your stomach. My father fought in WWII, as did many of my uncles. My wife's grandfather [illegible] gas as a medic in WWI. I am not sure what your point was. There are wars that make sense and those that don't. The Iraq war doesn't. We (you, me, and Congress) were told lies about why America should fight this war. We went into it alone and now we are stuck there until who knows when. How many more innocent Iraqis and U.S. soldiers must die? What is the end point? Please don't write back and tell me democracy for Iraq is the end point. You don't create democracy at gun point.

[illegible] sponse to my article implies I want young voters to vote for an anti-war candidate. I never said that. Your response also implies that I am anti-war. What does that make you? Pro-war!? (Borrowing from your "away schedule" analogy, I like the logo on my baseball cap better than yours.) As I said, and have said a number of times, I am against the war in Iraq. As for pulling "out of thin air" the notion that there is increased talk in Congress to reinstate the draft and even to require mandatory service, I point to two bills introduced on January 7, 2003. One is H.R. 163 and the other is Senate S. 89. Both can be found on www.congress.gov. Though these bills have not been passed and as yet, have little support, the rhetoric is growing. Don't take my word; read a national newspaper from late April this year.

As for world leaders who postponed action against Hitler, first off, you don't take military action against a country because you don't like the leader's ideology. If that were so, why did we never invade Spain in the 1936 or why not invade Cuba or North Korea tomorrow? Once Hitler began to invade European countries, the world did take action. The world minus the United States, that is. America refused to get involved until Pearl Harbor and until, four days later, Hitler declared war on the United States.

Finally, I apologize to all the young 18-22-year-old readers. I was remiss at not telling you how to register. You must be 18 by election day, but you must register 21 days before to be eligible to vote. You can go to the county board of elections [illegible] or you can download a registration form from www.elections.state.md.us/citizens/registration and mail it in. Just get out and vote. If you really like Bush, vote for him. If not, which I certainly can understand for a multitude of reasons, vote for someone else. I personally was hoping Oprah would run, but she isn't, so I'll vote for Kerry.

Robert Vagnetti

To the Editor:

May is designated as National Foster Care Month, a time when the spotlight shines on the children, teens, and foster families who make foster care work. The foster care "system" is only as good as the people who choose to be part of it. As more Americans begin to feel responsible and support the families in foster care, the system will become better and better.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank those who became involved in foster care in our area by supporting our organization and our families.

A special "thank you" to the following businesses for all their help:

Martin's Food Market, Oscars, Ponderosa, Chi Chi's, Hen House, Bob Evans, Harvey's Florists, Giuseppe's, Hill Top Restaurant, Uno's, Deep Creek Brewery, Silver Tree, Smiley's, Perkins, Frostburg Cinemas, Loves Grocery, Home Interior by Chee Chee, Georges Creek Florist, Moon-Glo Skating, Barbara's Hallmark, Hartley's Pizza, Dairy Queen, M&M Bakery, Baltimore Orioles, Enterprise Car Rental, and most importantly the 27 foster families in our program who are the real reason for our success.

There are countless opportunities for you to make a difference in the lives of the youth in foster care in your area. Consider sending notes of encouragement to our youth and families, donate a coupon for a free pizza or movie rental, or just take a few minutes to find out more about our agency by visiting our website, www.pressleyridge.org.

New foster families are desperately needed in our area. Remember that the children in foster care are not the responsibility of someone else. They are our future. Their well-being is dependent on the willingness of our entire community to care for and about them.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

There is some remarkable aspect about a church service on Mother's Day in that all the kids of our congregation we love almost as if they were our own. Little adorable Alanya Stanton as acolyte reminded me of my girls when they were little, and our lovely talented Leslie Buckel who sang "His Eye is on the Sparrow" is any mother's hope that her daughters would grow up like she has. Plus the pews were filled up with mother figures from my own childhood. Besides being my friends' mothers, they were also guides, authority figures, and someone to respect for me. Their attention, love, and watching eyes helped all of us in growing up – not to mention about 10 aunts as close and dear to me almost like a mother.

But no one could replace my mother in my esteem or in my heart. She was as beautiful and feminine as she was willing to tackle jobs most women would never do. Her work in the hayfields was as good as that of any man. She loved to drive the tractor, which I did not inherit from her. She was willing to help haul our horses to horse shows. I hated it when she had a part-time job at the Accident Stockyard on Mondays. I admire her being able to work in "the man's world," but I hated to come home without her waiting for us. Her high expectations for her children drove us to work harder and achieve many things.

I also was aware of her typing skills when she could type over 100 words a minute. I was a most hopeless student in my high school typing class, but I did get reasonably competent at it in my college years. Finally, I could really type when I was a reporter for The Republican. But I will never get as good at it as my mother, especially not with one hand. Even with the hunt and peck method you still need your left hand to use the shift button.

At last spring is in full bloom in Bittinger. Our lilac bushes are loaded with lavender, maroon and deep purple blossoms, and our apple trees are covered with white blossoms. A few years ago I described the old apple orchard beside Brenneman's Grove looking like bent-over old ladies with fairy lace caps and aprons, which delighted Margaret, who is doing very well after her third round of treatments. She was well enough to bring her three grandchildren to church on Sunday.

The tulip beds around Bittinger strike me with envy. I have only a few from a planting of bulbs discarded by Kennedy Center beds. I know our violets are in bloom and our trout lilies, which we used to call "cowslips." I don't know why we called them that, but they are also a spring beauty of Carolina Dodge.

Speaking of the Dodge family, Kevin, assisted by his little daughter Rhiannon, who is also in the third grade, were very busy on Saturday participating in the Audubon Society May bird count. I tried very hard to increase his score by getting lucky and finding the blue herons and the egrets around on the ponds on Peat Moss Road, but they would not show up and be counted. Yes, our humming birds are back and hungry. I believe it was Mike Hall who told me he saw them on the ground feeding on the tiny purple trumpet-shaped flowers. Although crows are not unusual around here, still I saw the most sleek and lovely specimen of that species on Saturday, and, of course, dozens of redwing blackbirds. My mourning doves are around now and their sad sounding call is as if she is asking, "Where is my mate and my children?" I can identify with that song, except I know where they are when they are not here.

It is terrible to realize that my baby Claire is almost grown up, busy with her high school graduation announcements and making herself up for her senior prom. She looked like a real-life Cinderella when her escort picked her up. Eric McFadden looked and behaved like any good Prince Charming. He gave me the campaign button that John Kerry gave him when he met him at Kerry's campaign headquarters in Washington, D.C. I will wear it happily and proudly.

Bittinger Lutheran Parish heard an introduction to the idea of our new mission, "Angel Bells," delivered by members who created it during the time usually devoted to the sermon. This coming Sunday at 1 p.m., the ideas will be flushed out at a soup and sandwich luncheon after church services. The idea is to share our God-given gifts to meet our neighbors' needs, whether home maintenance work or emotional and personal needs. It is a long tradition in our community to lend a helping hand to our neighbors. In the early days it was sheer necessity to survive. I only now know too well how hard it is to ask for help since I lost my ability to do just about everything for myself and my family, like earning a decent living and raising our own vegetables. Now I can't even dig by hand a small flowerbed for myself. I am not in any way competent in technology subjects or mechanical things. Now that I am without a man to help do those things. it is hard to ask for help from anyone, not even from my own family especially. It is a great relief if someone is willing to offer help.

It is kind of like the same feeling that the Iraqi people feel about America. Now at last western Maryland is getting national news coverage, not for our snow, but for the Cumberland home of the National Guard battalion that is allegedly connected to the abuse of the prisoners in Iraq. It is hard to see a happy ending for anyone from the Bush II war.

I happened to meet Elsie Wright, former classmate of Thelma Emory, at Shear Delight Hair Salon. She is visiting with family and friends in Garrett County, including her father at Cherry Hill, along with parents of 25 of Elsie and Thelma's classmates.

Although May is my favorite month, with the wildflowers in bloom, time for gardening, and pleasant warm weather, these days I have dreaded it since it is the month of my wedding and the final ending of my marriage. It is hard to focus on this column. However, I will begin a book about my 20-plus years with my horse "Little Joe."

What a difference it seems between Claire's prom and mine, because one of the most important dates happened in my equestrian career. The day following my prom, I had an all-day examination by a board and some pretty heavy judges who seemed stern and scary. They thoroughly grilled us as we were candidates for the coveted "B" rating in the Pony Club. If you put it in ordinary education terms, I guess it would be a bachelor's degree. Fewer than 10% of the candidates will earn it. Only one percent will earn the "A" rating.

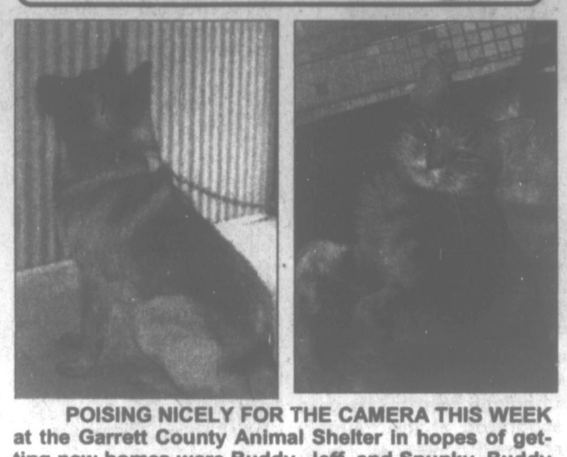
One of the panel of judges when I was competing for my "B" rating happened to be Jackie Kennedy's mother, Janet Auchincloss. She later confronted me and told me that I was the only rider that day she would recommend for an "A" rating. But I never pursued it because it took enough effort for just my "B." Besides knowing backward and forward about five books dealing with all aspects of horsemanship, the judges go over your horse and tack with white gloves, plus give you a riding test stiff enough to qualify for the Olympic Team. One thing we had to do was switch horses with another rider. When I saw the girl who drew Joey wearing spurs and carrying a riding crop to make sure he would jump, I cautioned her that she should not use them on him, but she didn't listen to me and she almost fell off backwards when she spurred him. He left the ground about 10 feet in front of the fence. But that is another story.

Going back to when I began, I still had some last-minute polish to do and would have to leave for Frederick by 5 a.m. So it was no all-night after-prom party for me.

My nephews' band White Noise performed at the after-prom party, as they did at the Southern after-prom party a few weeks ago.

A Mother's Day covered-dish dinner was served Sunday at the Ida Reckner home. Attending were William and Linda Oester, Salisbury, Pa., Julius and Karmen Carey, and Chris, Janelle, and Allison Carey, all of Frostburg; Tom Glotfelty, Detroit; Taylor and Tim Glotfelty, Laura Bach, Charee Reckner and Michaele Puliti, McHenry; Lisa and Amanda Platter, Smithsburg; and Donna Glotfelty. Taylor Glotfelty's graduation from West Virginia University, set for May 16, was also celebrated. Lillian Reckner was unable to attend because of recent knee surgery. Warren Oester is a patient at Memorial Hospital, Cumberland.

Adorable Adoptables



POISING NICELY FOR THE CAMERA THIS WEEK at the Garrett County Animal Shelter in hopes of getting new homes were Buddy, Jeff, and Spunky. Buddy is a 1-year-old male German shepherd mix who has been at the shelter for a very long time. If the shelter gets too crowded, he may not be kept there any longer. "Please come and meet him," said a Humane Society spokesperson. "He is so handsome." Also available for adoption is Jeff, an adult male tabby "of sorts." "He is so loving and misses his brother," she said. "Look how 'laid back' he is. He has been here for almost a month, so please come and see if he is the cat for you. The Humane Society may help with the cost of neutering him." Spunky, a 4-year-old male orange tabby, is neutered, litter trained, and good with kids. He was displaced from his home by a new kitten. The two tuxedos and Kalli from last week were taken to a "rescue" down state where they will be adopted into good homes. "Not all the cats will be that lucky," the spokesperson added. "There are new cats coming in every week and there is not room for all of them." For more information, persons may call the shelter at 301-334-3553. Adoptable pets can also be found on the Internet at Petfinder.com

"APRONS: ICONS OF THE AMERICAN HOME" was presented by Helen Harman at the April meeting of the Youghiogheny Glades Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Harman, pictured above, discussed how aprons were not only the service and utilitarian attire of the homemaker, but also the chef, waitress, cobbler, fisherman, blacksmith, and many other occupations. She brought samples of various kinds of aprons, from the "everyday" ones worn by the housewife to fancy, ruffled, novel, and crocheted ones. As she spoke about each and its use, a DAR member modeled the apron. Included in the demonstration was an unique apron which was designed to be worn with pants. Each member also brought an apron and told why it was special or sentimental to her. Harman is a retired teacher and is active in her church, community, and homemakers club.

STUDENTS OF THE MONTH HONORED AT KITZMILLER – Students of the Month for April were recently honored at Kitzmiller Elementary School. These students were chosen by their teachers for displaying the character traits of "respect" and "courtesy." In addition to further enhance the Character Education program at the school, one staff member who displays that trait is also chosen. Parents also attended the awards assembly. In the front, from the left, is kindergartner Samual Moyer, first grader Lydia Palmer, and second grader Olivia Berg. In the back are third grader Thomas Beeman, fourth grader Josh Nesselrodt, fifth graders Codie Browning, and Staff Person of the Month Bridget Miller.

Applications Increasing For Need-Based Aid

The Maryland Higher Education Commission has seen an increase in applications for financial aid from low- and moderate-income students for the 2004-2005 academic year, state financial aid officials reported. MHEC received 40,935 applications from students meeting eligibility criteria for financial aid. Of that number, 33,689 awards are being made.

"When Governor Robert L. Ehrlich Jr. proposed additional funding for college for low- and moderate-income students, we believe it encouraged more students and parents to apply," said Calvin W. Burnett, acting secretary of higher education. "This is exactly what we hoped to see."

Maryland's primary need-based financial aid programs are the Educational Assistance Grant (EAG) and the Guaranteed Access Grant (GAG). The EAG is open to current high school seniors and full-time, degree-seeking undergraduates. The minimum annual award is $400 and the maximum is $2,700.

The GAG is open to high school seniors who enroll at a Maryland two- or four-year college or university as a full-time, degree-seeking student. The total family income for a family of four, for example, may not exceed $23,920. The minimum annual award is $400 and the maximum award is $11,600.

This year, 32,661 EAG awards will be made, compared with 31,841 last year. More than 1,000 students will receive the GA Grant this year, up from 836 last year.

The Maryland Higher Education Commission is in the process of awarding over $87 million in financial aid to Maryland students through 23 financial aid programs. For more information about state financial aid programs, persons may visit www.mhec.state.md.us or call 410-260-4565 or 800-974-1024.

office. The class meets Oct. 30 through Dec. 9, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and one Saturday per month, 6 to 9:15 p.m., except Oct. 30 and Nov. 20: 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.; and Dec. 4: 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

After completion of these four courses, students may want to broaden their knowledge and expertise by taking the subsequent final three courses: Medical Coding Review, Introduction to Pharmacology, and Study of Disease Process, all in the next semester. Dates and times to these courses will be released in the near future.

Correct coding is an essential element in the financial security of all medical practices, a spokesperson said. Medical coders are responsible for accurately coding diagnoses, procedures, and supplies for each patient seen in the health care system. These codes are then forwarded to the insurance companies, or third-party payers, and are the basis for reimbursement.

Coding professionals work in a multitude of settings throughout the health care industry including hospitals, physicians' offices and clinics, long-term care facilities, insurance companies, government agencies, and home-care providers.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics, the demand for medical coders is projected to grow faster than the average for all occupations through 2010, and a shortage of coders is putting upward pressure on salaries of medical coders.

Financial assistance may be available to qualified applicants. Persons who would like additional information about these courses or to register may contact Terry Beachy, Grantsville Outreach Center coordinator, at 301-895-3368 or e-mail: tbeachy@garrettcollege.edu.

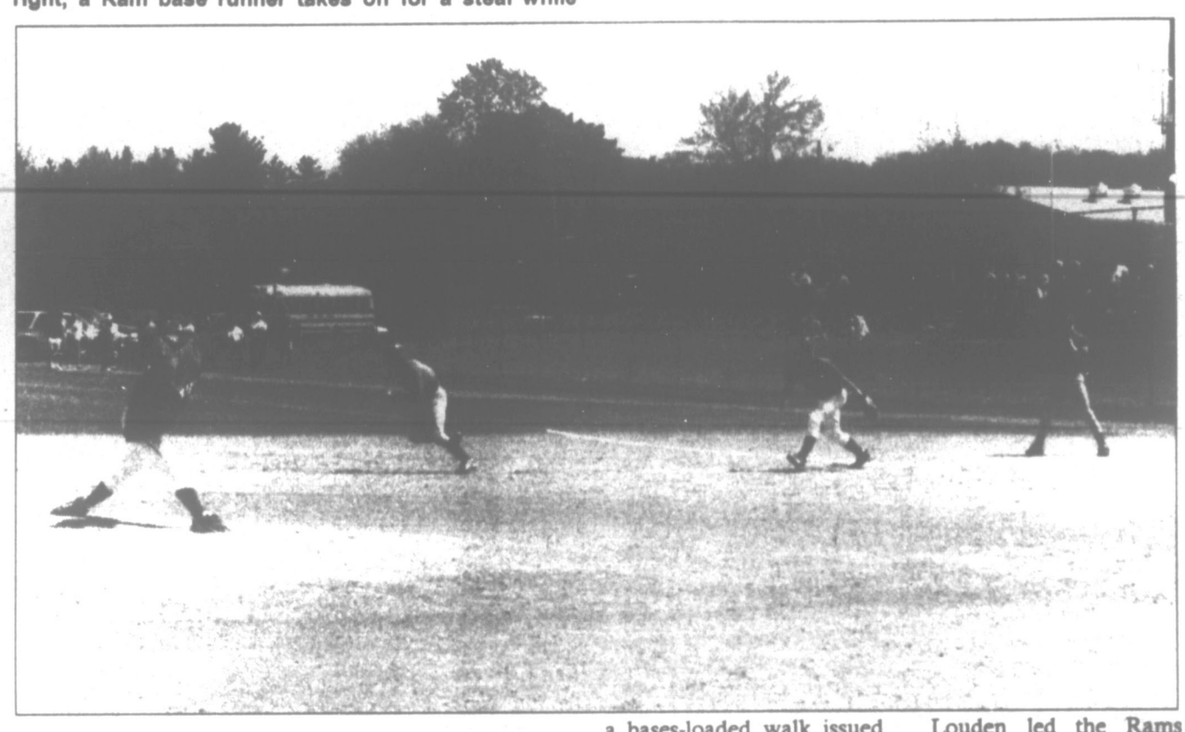
THERE WAS JUBILATION at Southern High School's home plate Saturday when Northern High School's Darrick Lowdermilk arrived there, having just put the ball over the left field fence for a three-run homer. The shot gave the Huskies the lead for good over the previously undefeated Rams, and they went on to record a huge 8-4 victory. In the photo below left, Southern first baseman Travis Friend delivers a successful sacrifice bunt to advance a teammate. Also in the photo is Husky catcher Chad Carr. The winning pitcher was lefty Torrey Poholsky, who tossed six innings and allowed just three hits. He is pictured above right trying to pick off Ram Aaron Louden, who dives safely back to first base. Below right, a Ram base runner takes off for a steal while Poholsky delivers to the plate. The win upped the Huskies' record to 13-5, and dropped the Rams to 15-1. The two teams will meet again in the regular-season closer for both. Photos by Don Sincell.



Huskies Halt Ram Streak At 15 With 8-4 Victory

The disappointment of a 12-6, Western Maryland Interscholastic League loss to host Fort Hill last Thursday was wiped out for the Northern High School boys' varsity baseball team and fans on Saturday when the Huskies came to Oakland and defeated the unbeaten, and seemingly unbeatable, Southern High Rams, 8-4, in another WMIL contest.

It was the first time in four years that the Huskies have defeated the Rams, and it was the first time Southern tasted defeat this season, after racking up 15 straight victories.

The split left the Huskies with a 13-5 overall mark and a 6-3 WMIL record.

The game against Fort Hill last Thursday was knotted at 5-5 after four complete innings, but the Sentinels added two runs in the bottom of the fifth and then put five more on the board in the sixth to virtually seal the victory.

Kenny Squires led Fort Hill's 11-hit effort with two doubles, and also had three RBI and a run scored. Travis Wilson also finished with two hits, a double and a single, to plate one run and score twice. Nick Noechel contributed an RBI double, and Todd Mullaney and Justin Munson each hit a run-producing single, all in the five-run sixth.

Pacing the Huskies at the plate was Preston Sisler with two singles for two RBI.

Neither team excelled defensively, as each committed six errors.

The win upped the Sentinels' overall record to 8-7 and their WMIL mark to 3-5.

In Saturday's game against Southern, Coach Phil Carr sent his ace, Torrey Poholsky, to the mound to face Ram ace Chris Smith, both of whom are lefthanders and both of whom have tossed no-hitters this year.

The Rams took a 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first on a two-run single by Aaron Louden.

The Huskies rallied in the top of the second, scoring three runs and taking the lead for good.

After an initial strike-out, Chad Carr and Danny Ellis both drew walks off Smith, who was having trouble finding the strike zone. Then Darrick Lowdermilk, not typically one of the Huskies' power hitters, blasted a 3-2 pitch that soared over the left field fence for a three-run homer.

Poholsky, who kept the Ram batters guessing through six complete innings, gave his team a 4-2 advantage in the top of the third by drawing a lead-off walk, advancing to second on a sacrifice by Eric Johnson, and coming home on a single by Derek Workman.

The Huskies did most of their damage to the Rams in the top of the fifth, when they scored four more runs to make it 8-2.

Preston Sisler, who singled after the first out, advanced to third on a single by Poholsky. Johnson then drew a walk to load the bases.

A sacrifice fly by Workman brought Sisler home, giving the Huskies a 5-2 lead. Carr then walked to load the bases again, and Danny Ellis followed with a two-run single.

An RBI single by Lowdermilk made it 8-2.

A throwing error on a grounder hit by Louden and a bases-loaded walk issued to Smith gave the Rams two runs in the bottom of the fifth, but that's as close as they would get.

Poholsky gave up three hits, walked eight, and struck out six in six innings.

Smith and reliever Scott Wildesen yielded a total of eight hits.

Lowdermilk finished with his home run and a single for four RBI.

Louden led the Rams offensively with two singles for two RBI, while Billy Reams hit a double.

Despite the league defeat, the Rams went on to win the WMIL title on Tuesday with a victory over visiting Westmar (see separate story), and the Rams and Huskies will meet again this evening at Northern in the final regular-season contest for both teams.

Rams Rebound To Record Wins Over Westmar, Keyser

After a stinging 8-4 defeat at the hands of county rivals the Northern Huskies, on Saturday (see other story), the once-beaten Southern High varsity baseball team regrouped and returned to its winning ways on Tuesday, handing visiting Westmar an 8-0 defeat to claim the 2004 Western Maryland Interscholastic League title. The Rams also crushed host Keyser yesterday, 19-4.

This is the fifth straight year that Coach Jim Bosley and the Rams have won the league title, and did so this season with a WMIL record of 8-1. They are 17-1 overall.

Scott Wildesen gave up just two hits in going the distance for the victory over Westmar, striking out nine and issuing three walks to up his personal mark to 7-0.

Curt Taylor led Southern's 11-hit attack with a three-run homer in the bottom of the sixth and two singles, driving home a total of four runs. Tyler Graham finished with a double and a single for two RBI, and Wildesen aided his own cause with two singles.

The only hits allowed by the junior hurler were two singles, one each by losing pitcher Trent Morris and Jon Broadwater.

The defeat dropped the Wildcats to 5-11 overall and 2-7 in the WMIL.

Aaron Louden was the winner on the mound yesterday at Keyser, as he pitched the first five innings, struck out nine batters, and walked two.

The game was called after six innings because of rain, with Corey Burrell pitching the final inning for the Rams.

Graham paced Southern's 13-hit performance, as he rapped two doubles and two singles to account for five RBI. Wildesen and Reams each contributed three singles, driving in three runs apiece, while Cory Bosley finished with two singles and three RBI.

Pacing the Golden Tornados offensively was Brian Wilson, who had a three-run homer and a single. Corey Szafran contributed a pair of singles.

The Rams will play at Northern this afternoon and try to avenge their only loss of the season before going into next week's playoffs.

Ram Jayvees Record Sweep Over Keyser

Tim Reams led the Ram offense in the first game with three singles, Anthony Schrock had an extra-base RBI, and Mark Bittinger smacked a pair of singles for two RBI.

Schrock was also the winning pitcher, as he scattered five hits and fanned seven batters in going the distance.

The only multiple-base hit for Keyser was a double by Dan Leatherman.

The Rams were in trouble in the second game, first trailing 3-1 after four innings, and losing by a 5-3 margin going into the bottom of the seventh.

A two-run double by Schrock tied the score at 3-3 in the fifth.

Keyser retook the lead at 4-3 on a leadoff solo homer by B.J. Halbritter in the top of the sixth, and then made it 5-3 in the top of the seventh when Chris Proletti doubled and scored on an error.

A two-run single by Shane Weaver in the bottom of the seventh tied the score at 5-5. After a walk, Justin Ratliff singled home Weaver to win the game.

Matt Davis led the Rams' offensive effort with a solo homer, a double, and two RBI.

Halbritter homered and singled for Keyser.

Bret DeWitt went the distance for the win.

The Rams were slated to play Westmar on Monday, but no results of that contest were reported.

Even though the Rams won the team title, the Northern boys took home the lion's share of first places with 10.

Nick Maxim, who has dominated the hurdles events in the entire area all season, won both the 110 high hurdles in 16.3 seconds and the 300 hurdles in 45.6 seconds, plus won the 400 dash with a time of 54.1 seconds.

Mike Payne won the triple jump with a distance of 32'2", Scott Pusateri took first in the 1,600 run with a time of 5:01.3, Tyler Warn won the 100 dash in 11.6 seconds, and Remington Friend won the long jump with a distance of 15'11".

Also earning first places were the Huskies' 400, 800, and 1,600 relay teams, with respective times of 49.9 seconds, 1:45.2, and 4:03.4.

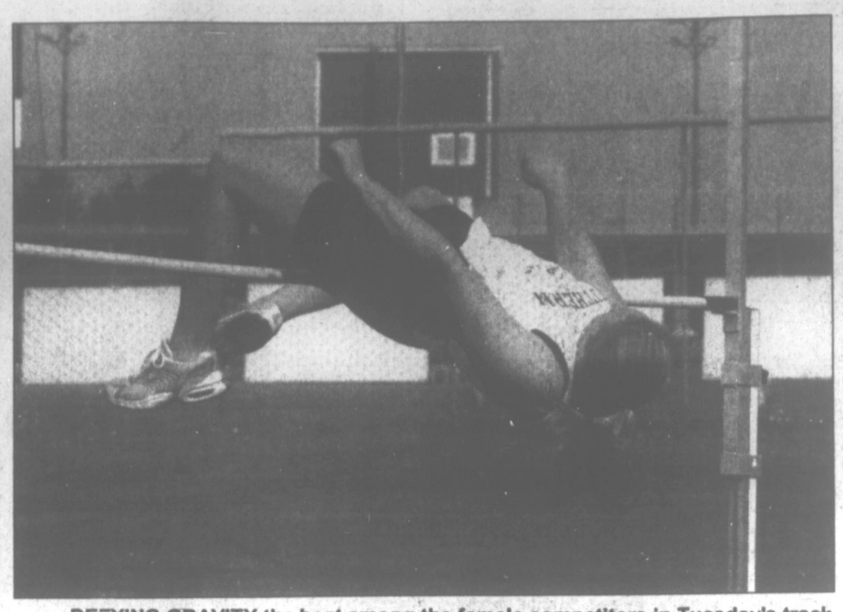
Nick Payne won second places in the long jump and high jump, and Tyler Warn was the runner-up in the 200 dash.

Southern girls' coach Steve Cosner noted that Westmar, Beall, and University did not bring complete teams to the match because of junior varsity meets and the West Virginia regionals that were taking place at the same time.

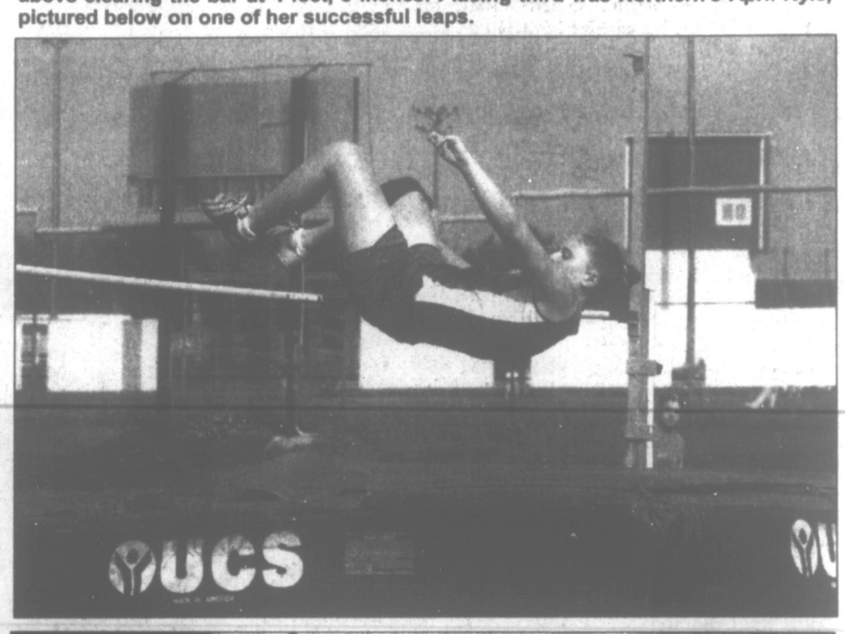
The Northern Huskies are slated to compete at Beall this evening at 6 p.m. Both the Rams and the Huskies will vie in the 1A West Region Championships, to be hosted by Smithsburg on Friday, May 21.

HANDING OFF THE BATON is one of the trickiest parts of a track relay, the efficiency of which often determines whether a team wins or loses. These photos were taken during a four-team meet hosted by Southern High School on Tuesday. Above, Southern's Kendra McLaughlin receives the handoff from teammate Natalie Domenick in the girls' 800-yard relay, which the SHS team won with a time of 1:54.4. Below, Northern's Remington Friend has just taken the baton from Michael Deem and is en route to a win for the Huskies in that event, recording a time of 1:45.2. Photos by John McEwen. The Southern girls' and boys' teams each won the overall meet.

RUNNING AND JUMPING, as fast as possible and as high as necessary, are the objectives of the hurdling events. The photo above is of the boys' 300 hurdles event, taken at Tuesday's meet hosted by the Southern Rams. From left are Erick Blamble, Andrew Goad, and Bryan Corby, all of Southern, and Nick Maxim of Northern. Maxim had dominated the event all season, including this particular race, which he won with a time of 45.6 seconds. Maxim also won the 110 high hurdles and the 400-yard dash. Pictured at right are Southern hurdlers (from left) Chelsea Wassell, Mandi Stahl, and Sarah Stephens in the 300 event. Stephens won the race with a time of 55.7 seconds.



DEFYING GRAVITY the best among the female competitors in Tuesday's track and field meet at Southern High School was Southern's Nikki Raynovich, pictured above clearing the bar at 4 feet, 8 inches. Placing third was Northern's April Kyle, pictured below on one of her successful leaps.



THROWING THINGS, either a discus or a shot put, are among the events of a track and field meet, and throwing the discus is being demonstrated in these two photos. Above, Southern's Chris Bennett wins the event by heaving the disk 131 feet, 1 inch. Bennett also won the shot put with a heave of 42 feet, 9 inches. Pictured below is Northern's Sarah Stewart, who placed third in both the discus and shot put.

The SHS girls (5-5) and boys both won over Beall by 4-3 scores.

Winning singles matches against Beall for the Southern girls were Jasmine Scheffel and Hannah Watkins. Victorious in doubles were the teams of Justine Pagenhardt and Sabrina Scheffel, and Stephanie Spano and Hannah Logsdon.

The team of Bailey Michael and Jessica Hamilton also won in exhibition.

Getting singles victories for the Mountaineers were Sarah Eisel, Karen Wilson, and Nicole Kelly.

Winning in singles for the 10-2 Spartans were Chet Sizer, Ryan Villanueva, Crew Becker, Erica Tola, and Michael Siemann.

Southern is slated to compete in the Bi-County Tournament this weekend at Allegany College in Cumberland.

Garrett G-Force Wins Fairmont Wavezz Shootout

Garrett G-Force, a newly formed tournament basketball team for fifth and sixth grade girls from northern and southern Garrett County, placed first in a Fairmont, W.Va., tournament last weekend, the team's first such outing.

The team is coached by Pete Brosnihan and Jane Wildesen. The players are Emillee Bosley, Morgan Brosnihan, Anna Keefer, Katie Hinebaugh, Jennifer Shaffer, Kate Ware, Heidi Welch, and Abby Wildesen.

The third annual Fairmont Wavezz Basketball Shootout, sponsored by Pepsi, involved teams from Ohio, Penns[illegible]nia, Maryland, and W[illegible] Virginia. The tournam[illegible] offered a three-game qu[illegible]ying round followed by t[illegible] next d[illegible]'s semi-final game and championship.

Following two wins and one loss in the qualifying rounds, G-Force made it to the semi-final game. The local players defeated Fairmont and earned their way to the championship game against Parkersburg Glory.

"Parkersburg's team was experienced in tournament play, and we knew it would be a close game," said Coach Wildesen.

G-Force led by a small margin for most of the game with both teams playing full court, man-to-man defense. The coaches said foul trouble became a factor as two team members played with four fouls, and two fouled out late in the second half for the G-Force.

"The bench played an important part in keeping us in the game," said Wildesen.

Glory took the lead with just under a minute remaining, but G-Forced rallied back and led by one with less than 20 seconds to go. Glory tied the score with a free throw to push the game into overtime.

Overtime gave G-Force the opportunity to jump out to a quick 6-point lead, which they would not relinquish. The final score was Garrett, 42; Parkersburg, 36.

"This was truly a team victory, as each girl played a big part in the outcome. I'm so proud of the way these girls stepped up in pressure situations," Brosnihan said. "I hope these experiences will someday help these girls follow in the footsteps of this year's Lady Rams and Garrett Lady Lakers and bring home more championships to Garrett County."

Uno's To Host Meghan Price Golf Tournament

The fifth annual Meghan E. Price Golf Tournament is scheduled for Saturday, June 18, at the Oakland Golf Club, Oakland. The tournament, an activity of the Meghan E. Price Memorial Trust, raises scholarship funds for students of Southern High School and the University of Maryland College Park. Uno Restaurant at Deep Creek Lake is sponsoring the tournament.

Meghan Price and her grandfather, Carl T. Johnson, were killed in an automobile accident on Dec. 29, 1998. She was a senior student scholar and leader enrolled in the honors program at the University of Maryland. She was president of the Student Government Association and had received several awards for both her academic and leadership accomplishments. Price had planned a career in public service upon graduation.

Meghan, a native of Swanton, graduated from Southern High School, where she was an honor student and served as Student Government president and drum major.

"Meghan was a person of vision," explained her father, Sonny Price. "It was with that in mind, that we decided to set up the Meghan Price Memorial Trust. To continue her vision and help students at Southern and Northern high schools and the University of Maryland through the Maryland Leadership Academy pursue their vision for a brighter future for mankind.

"The first four tournaments were held in Montgomery County, but we decided to bring the golf event back to Meghan's home," Price added. "We were very pleased when Uno's offered to help us."

Meghan worked as a server for Uno's during her summer breaks from college for four years.

"Meghan was one of the special ones. She was going to change the world. Since she's not here to make that happen, it's our job to continue her legacy and help make those changes," commented Greig Johnson, Uno's owner.

The monies raised at the tournament will be split among several local interests which Meghan held dear, including donations for Southern and Northern High School bands, Our Town Theatre, and scholarships for students attending the University of Maryland and Southern High School.

The tournament is a shamble format with prizes for longest drive and closest to the pin. Accident Garage is sponsoring Par 3 hole-in-one prizes, including the grand prize of a 2004 Chrysler automobile.

Persons interested in more information or in playing in the tournament should call Pat Warren, Oakland Golf Club pro, at 301-334-3883 or Sonny Price at 301-387-5158.

FSU To Present Faulty Award To Local Educator

MARTHE A. McCLIVE

Frostburg State University will present three professors with Faculty Achievement Awards during this year's University Honors Convocation at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, May 21, in the Drama Theatre of the campus Performing Arts Center.

This year's recipients include Dr. Marthe A. McClive of McHenry for university/community service, and Dr. Robert M. Moore III and Dr. James C. Saku for teaching.

McClive, professor of management, has developed technology programs that enhanced the teaching of faculty and staff throughout the university. She has secured grant money and created programs that helped enable faculty to learn the technological skills necessary for distance learning and teaching with technology. As a result of her efforts, the university has "significantly" improved and updated its teaching, collaborative learning and quality on-line courses.

Moore is an associate professor of sociology. He has been praised for encouraging his students to take ownership of the learning process. Student comments emphasize that Moore inspires others through the development of interpersonal relationships. He also serves as a coordinator for the African-American Studies program at FSU. What Is Usually Done for Anaphylaxis?

Anaphylaxis, also known as an anaphylactic reaction, is a sudden and severe allergic reaction to a trigger substance or event that can be life threatening. Triggering substances vary depending on the individual. They may include certain drugs like penicillin or eating offending foods such as peanuts. Exercise or getting stung by an insect can also cause anaphylaxis. It has been estimated that as many as 6 million Americans may be allergic to some type of seafood. However, almost 60% of all cases occur from unknown causes. Like other allergies, anaphylaxis usually doesn't occur after the first exposure but may happen later, after repeated exposure. Beginning within 15 minutes of a reaction, the heart begins to beat too rapidly, and blood pressure falls, which may cause fainting. The skin will flush or may itch, and a rash may develop. Airways can swell and become completely blocked, making it difficult to breath.

Once an anaphylactic reaction is suspected, the person should be taken to the emergency room or medical facility immediately. An injection of epinephrine may be given. Antihistamine tablets are sometimes prescribed to help decrease symptoms.

YET ANOTHER SIZABLE DONATION BY THE MOUNTAIN LOGGERS GROUP has been given to the West Virginia University Children's Hospital, part of the Children's Miracle Network. On Tuesday, the group presented a check for $105,000 to Claudia Asvestos, child life specialist with the hospital/network. The group surpassed last year's donation by $5,000. Pictured, left to right, in the front row are Log-A-Load chairperson Sharon Sisler, S, C, and L Logging, Cranesville, W.Va., and Asvestos. In the back are group president Butch Glotfelty, Glotfelty Lumber Company, Oakland; Paul Lewis, Bark Busters, Bruceton Mills, W.Va.; Jerry Sisler, S, C, and L Logging; forester Ken Fleming, Terra Alta, W.Va., of MeadWestvaco; and group secretary Tim Pahl, BalkenTier Consulting, Morgantown, W.Va. Asvestos also presented the organization with a plaque for its "outstanding service" to the hospital. The group has donated more than $555,000 to the hospital through its Log-A-Load For Kids program. See story for more information.

Children's Hospital Honors Mountain Loggers For "Outstanding Service"

The Mountain Loggers Group was honored Tuesday for its "outstanding service" to West Virginia University Children's Hospital, part of the Children's Miracle Network (CMN), at a meeting in McHenry.

Claudia Asvestos, child life specialist for WVU Children's Hospital/CMN, presented a plaque to the group from CMN's main office in St. Lake City, Utah. The plaque was signed by Marie Osmond and John Schneider, co-chairs of network.

The Mountain Loggers Group is a non-profit organization of loggers, foresters, sawmills, and other forestry related businesses in West Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania. Since 1996, it has raised more than $554,000 through its Log-A-Load for Kids program to benefit WVU Children's Hospital, according to a hospital spokesperson.

Each year the group holds numerous events, including an elimination dinner, golf tournament, and a successful log auction, with proceeds going directly to the hospital. This year's auction alone raised $92,000, according to the spokesperson.

"The events they hold each year demonstrate the Mountain Loggers Group commitment to WVU Children's Hospital. Many hours of hard work and manpower go into making their event successful year after year," said Peggy Myers-Smith, development specialist at the hospital. "We always look forward to these fundraisers and are honored to have such a wonderful group working for our patients."

At the meeting on Tuesday, the loggers presented a check for $105,000 to Asvestos, surpassing last year's donation by $5,000. (See nearby photo.)

WVU Children's Hospital is an 88-bed facility located within Ruby Memorial Hospital in Morgantown, W.Va. According to the spokesperson, more than 7,200 children are treated at the hospital each year. These children come from every county in West Virginia, as well as surrounding states. The hospital is home to the only pediatric open-heart surgeon and pediatric neurosurgeon in the state, she noted.

MAKING OWL CALLS was but one of the many activities for fifth graders at a recent class at College and Me, an educational program involving the Garrett County Board of Education and Garrett College that gives elementary school students an opportunity to spend time learning on a college campus. Conducting the class that involved making owl calls were local state park naturalists Eric Savage and Caroline Blizzard. The materials for the calls, which included PVC pipe, were donated by Manor Home Center. The students pictured above, all members of Rebecca Sanders' fifth grade class at Crellin Elementary School, are, front row, from left: Megan Ridenour, Allison Friend, Andy Roberts, Brittany Gank, and Courtney Graham; and second row: Chantal Craig, Jackie Sisler, Stephen Beckman, and Faith Sisler.

Dr. Goralski Speaker For Asthma Seminar

Dr. Robert Goralski, a physician with the Garrett Medical Group, was the guest presenter for a seminar titled Asthma Diagnosis and Treatment, held for physicians, teachers, and other caregivers as part of the Movin' Mountains in Western Maryland: Steppin' Up for Better Health initiative.

Dr. Goralski will do another presentation on Friday, May 21, as part of the grand rounds physician education program at Garrett County Memorial Hospital. At the conclusion of the course, participants will be able to: understand the anatomy and physiology of asthma; determine the value of environmental control in the treatment of childhood asthma; understand the pharmacotherapy of childhood asthma; describe the relationship between exercise and asthma; manage asthma-related emergency situations; and identify community responses that will assist with the management and education of patients with asthma. One CEU of CME credit will be awarded to registered healthcare providers.

A mini-seminar on asthma treatment and management will be held at Dennett Road Elementary School next Wednesday, May 19. Persons with asthma, parents of children with asthma, and school-aged children with asthma are encouraged to attend. The seminar will help people with asthma and/or their parents gain a better understanding of the disease, learn asthma management techniques, and better understand new medications for asthma.

Those interested in attending are asked to call 301-334-7730. Presenters will include Judy Simson, RN, GCMH wellness coordinator; Lance Rhodes and Frank Tomblin, GCMH pharmacists; and Randy Crabtree, GCMH respiratory therapist.

The asthma presentations are being sponsored by the Md. Department of Health and Mental Hygiene, Garrett County Health Department, Garrett County Memorial Hospital, and the Garrett County Board of Education. Movin' Mountains in Western Maryland is a collaborative initiative in Allegany, Garrett, and Washington counties to improve health outcomes for those in the region with chronic diseases.

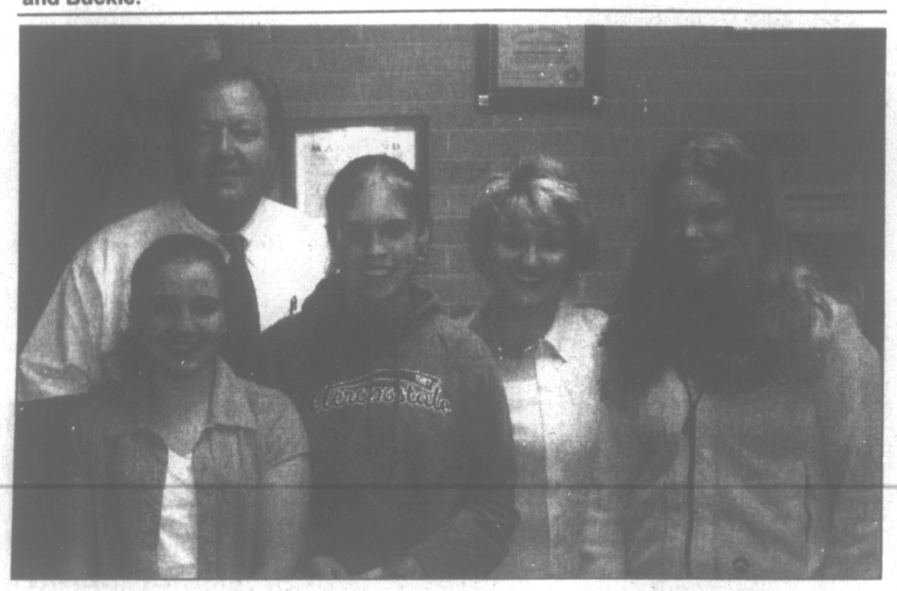
SMS ESSAY FINALISTS NAMED – Southern Middle School eighth graders Rachel L. Skipper, Tiffany Wotring, and Clare Buckle were the three SMS finalists in an essay contest titled "Special Parking for Special People." The contest was sponsored by the Garrett County Commission for the Handicapped. Each received a complimentary ticket to Garrett 8 Cinemas. Pictured above, from the left, are Skipper, John Rickman (principal), Wotring, Sue Lisantti (language arts teacher), and Buckle.



ESSAY CONTEST WINNER RECOGNIZED – The Garrett County commissioners this week recognized Danielle Brenneman, winner of an essay contest sponsored by the Garrett County Commission for the Handicapped. The organization was formed about two years ago to help draw attention to the conditions and difficulties faced by the physically challenged, said Commissioner Ernie Gregg, who is a member of the Commission for the Handicapped. To promote public awareness about the importance of handicapped-accessible parking spaces, the group recently asked county middle school students to write an essay about the need for "Special Parking for Special People." Commission member Bill Aspinall said Danielle's "concise" essay stood out from the many entries he had the pleasure of reviewing. "It said everything that had to be said" about special parking, he noted. See her essay located near this photo. A resident of Bittinger, Danielle is in the eighth grade at Northern Middle School. She won a $50 savings bond for her winning entry. Pictured above, left to right, in the front row are Commissioners Gregg, Dave Beard, and Fred Holliday. In the back are Aspinall, Danielle's father Terry Brenneman, Danielle, and her mother Debbie Brenneman.

Special Parking for Special People

by Danielle Brenneman

How many times have you seen a non-handicapped vehicle sitting in a handicapped parking space? How many times have you seen people abuse the privilege of special parking for special people to only get a little closer so they didn't have to walk an extra step?

There are many everyday activities that we all take for granted. Whether it is showering, walking, or being able to get out and about. There are many people who are not able to do these things independently, which is why it is important to have handicap accessible restrooms, ramps, and parking spaces. Not everyone has the ability to move around, even if it's is a simple thing like walking to the door of a store.

I know from experience that handicap parking makes it a lot easier getting a handicapped person to the store without any trouble. My grandfather has struggled for many years trying to walk due to a stroke. If it weren't for handicapped parking it would have been ten times harder to get him in and out of places. Not only would it have been hard on the people transporting him but on my grandfather also.

People who are disabled feel very frustrated, and handicapped-parking spaces eliminate some of that frustration. It's bad enough being handicapped without having to compete for a place to park. So the next time you go to park in a handicapped parking space think of the others who may need it more than you.

Consider Vitamin C Supplementation

Vitamin C assists the body's immune system by providing antioxidant and anti-aging protection to cells throughout the body. Some studies have shown that taking vitamin C can counter the potentially negative effects of eating a high-fat meal. In another study, high vitamin C intake reduced the incidence of asthma flare ups in 40% of children who were exposed to cigarette smoke.

For people with iron deficient anemia, the absorption of iron has been shown to increase significantly when given at the same time as vitamin C. This vitamin can help prevent vision loss in older adults with age-related macular degeneration, especially when taken in combination with other supplements. Diabetic patients with kidney disease can reduce the amount of albumin in the urine by combining vitamins C and E. Taking vitamin C alone can decrease the risk of developing hardening of the arteries and peripheral artery disease. It has been suggested that vitamin C may help reduce the incidence of certain cancers including those that affect the esophagus and stomach.

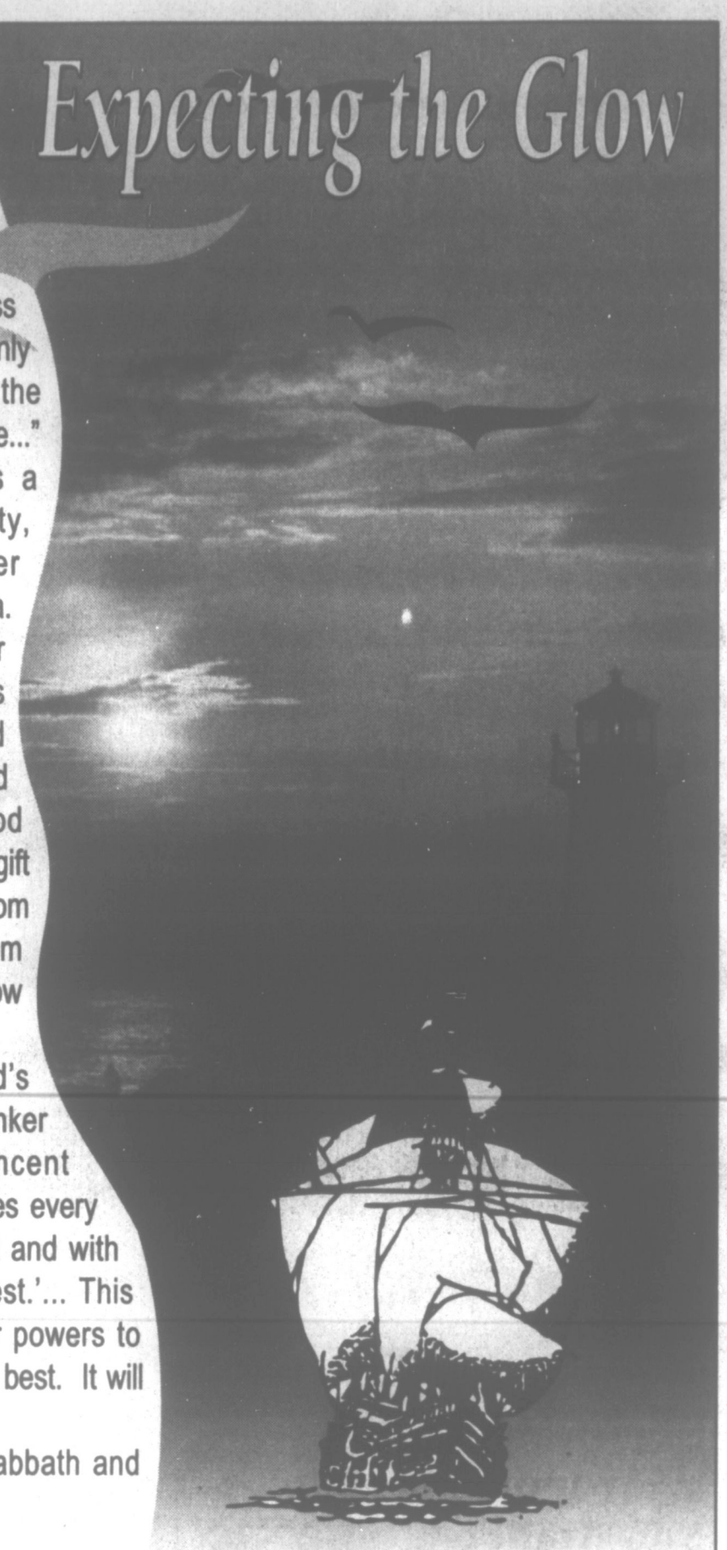
Expecting the Glow



"Are our instruments functioning correctly? I thought we would be closer to shore by now, so that darkness would not overtake us. Certainly we shall see the glow from the lighthouse. I know it's out there..."

The lighthouse, always a symbol of hope and stability, waits to guide the voyager traveling an unpredictable sea. Only our Creator knows our fate and only He can bring us the hope and the joy we need to traverse the future. We read in James 1:17... "Every good endowment and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights with whom there is no variation or shadow due to change."

Do you have faith in God's protection? The positive thinker and minister, Norman Vincent Peale, said, "At least ten times every day affirm, 'I expect the best and with God's help will attain the best.'... This practice will bring all of your powers to focus on the attainment of the best. It will bring the best to you."

Visit God's House this Sabbath and expect to find the glow within.

The Best of All Possible Worlds

The philosopher Leibniz is famous for his optimistic claim that this is the best of all possible worlds, and the French philosopher Voltaire is perhaps even more famous for his satirical attack on Leibniz in his fictional work, Candide. While Voltaire wondered how one could possibly believe that this is the best of all possible worlds, Leibniz strongly believed that this followed logically from the attributes of God. That is, if God is omnipotent (all-powerful), omniscient (all-knowing), and completely good, then it follows logically that this must be the best of all possible worlds. Why? Because an all-knowing God could survey in his infinite intellect all the different worlds it would be possible to create; an all-powerful God could make any world He wanted; and, an all-good God would want to create the best of all possible worlds. According to Leibniz, this does not mean that this world has no evil in it; on the contrary, Leibniz surely realized that there is plenty of evil in this world, but believed that on balance, this still must be the best possible world. Similarly, we may not always understand why things happen the way they do, but we can rest assured that things are going according to God's plan, and that this is indeed the best of all possible worlds.

And God saw everything that He had made, and behold, it was very good.

ACS Conducting Assessment Of Cancer Services

The American Cancer Society is completing a community assessment for Garrett County on cancer services in the area. Volunteers are also being sought to help with the project.

"The community assessment is designed to give an accurate picture of Garrett County's strengths and needs when it comes to cancer," said an ACS spokesperson. "It will also help the American Cancer Society and other agencies in getting a clear understanding of the community."

Once completed, the assessment will be available to other agencies in the area to be a reference for grant writing or a "point of beginning" when agencies are looking at what kind of cancer services Garrett County needs, she added.

The Garrett County unit board of the ACS will work on this assessment throughout the coming months. On the board are representatives from local agencies such as the Garrett County Health Department, Garrett County Department of Social Services, Garrett County Memorial Hospital, and individuals.

The unit board, however, is also looking for other volunteers interested in helping with the assessment so that it may obtain the most accurate "picture" of Garrett County possible.

For more information about the assessment or becoming a volunteer, persons and organizations may call Nancy-Elizabeth Nimmich, American Cancer Society unit representative, at 301-334-4445.

Next "I Can Cope" Workshop Slated By Cancer Society

The American Cancer Society's I Can Cope Series workshop, "Discovering Resources," will be held on Thursday, May 20, at 3 p.m. in the Community Services building at Garrett County Memorial Hospital.

A panel of local agency representatives will discuss services that are available to residents who are dealing with a cancer diagnosis. They will be from the American Cancer Society, Garrett County Memorial Hospital, Garrett County Health Department, and Garrett County Department of Social Services.

Representatives from agencies outside the county will also attend and discuss services that Garrett County residents may access. The representatives include Julie Longenecker of the Western Maryland Health System Regional Cancer Center, Cumberland, and Jennifer Craddock, West Virginia University Hospitals and Mary Babb Randolph Cancer Center, Morgantown.

Questions will also be entertained during the session, and information will be available.

The workshop is free and open to all Garrett County and surrounding area residents. To register or for more information, persons may call Sara Burdette at Garrett County Memorial Hospital at 301-533-4311. Registration is suggested to guarantee materials but is not required.

Carr Promoted At First United

William B. Grant, chairman of the board/CEO of First United Bank & Trust, has announced the promotion of Mandy C. Carr to regulatory and reporting specialist. She has been with the bank since July 2000.

"Mandy is an asset to our Finance Department, and I know that she will perform well in her new position, said Robert W. Kurtz, president and chief financial officer.

Carr graduated summa cum laude from Fairmont State College with dual degrees in accounting and finance with a specialization in corporate finance. She will also receive a master's of business administration from Frostburg State University later this year.

Local Soldiers' Names Omitted

Two soldiers were not pictured and therefore their names were omitted from last week's front-page caption about local National Guardsmen being deployed to Southwest Asia. They are Doug Mayle and Jackie Vansickle.

Additionally, all the local soldiers are actually with the 253rd of Baltimore, not the 121st Engineering Battalion as the caption indicated.

Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner Slated By GC Democrats

The Garrett County Democratic Club will hold its annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner on Monday, June 21, at the McHenry House. The event will begin with a reception at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 7 p.m.

Baltimore mayor Martin O'Malley will be the featured speaker. Entertainment will be provided by local musicians.

Tickets may be obtained by calling Doris Goldsborough at 301-334-3007 or Susan Davis at 301-245-4252. Reservations must be made by June 12. No tickets will be sold at the door.

The GCDC encourages all local Democrats to attend this event.

MISS MARYLAND VISITS TWO ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS – Marina Harrison, Miss Maryland, recently visited Yough Glades and Kitzmiller elementary schools. She discussed how to "start today to make your ultimate dreams come true." "You can be whatever you want to be, but you have to start today," she told the students. She also discussed the major points that she wished someone had told her when she was their age. She showed the students her crown, or her "bling bling" as she called it. At Kitzmiller School, each student got the opportunity to wear the crown. She ended the program by singing "God Bless America," with many of the students accompanying her. They listened intently to what Harrison had to say, said a spokesperson from Kitzmiller School. "The students were in awe of her," said Keith Harvey, principal at Yough Glades. "She had their full attention the entire time." Harrison's platform issue is "Public Education: Providing the Best for America's Children." Harrison is pictured above speaking to the third, fourth, and fifth graders at Yough Glades.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• Inventor George Eastman (of Eastman-Kodak fame) killed himself, leaving a suicide note that read: "My work is done, why wait?"

• The Eiffel Tower is recognized around the world as the unmistakable symbol of Paris. When it opened in 1889, it was considered a marvel of engineering — at 1,000 feet, it was the tallest structure in the world. It wasn't admired for its aesthetic virtues, however; a group of artists and writers protested the tower, calling it a "truly tragic street lamp," a "mast of iron gymnasium apparatus, incomplete, confused and deformed" and a "half-built factory pipe." Writer Guy de Maupassant hated it so much that he ate in its restaurant every day, saying, "It is the only place in Paris where I don't have to see it."

• At an exhibition in Birmingham, England, in the year 1858, chess master Paul Morphy played eight games at once. Blindfolded. (He won six, lost one and the other was a draw.)

• The very last passenger pigeon was named Martha.

• In today's busy world, many people are multitasking in order to get more done in less time. Be careful what chores you combine, though. A 79-year-old Michigan woman named Maxine Anne Kegerreis was mowing the lawn and exercising her dog at the same time, with the dog's leash attached to the riding mower. When the mower got snagged, she tried to back it up, but became entangled in the leash. Unable to extricate herself, she fell into a pond, where she and her pet drowned.

• King Juan Carlos of Spain was born in Italy.

Safety Tips

DEAR PAWS CORNER: Over the past six months, I have heard of four dogs being killed or severely injured from hanging incidents while left unattended. Two were from being tied up: One jumped off a porch after a raccoon and one fell off a hillside chasing something. Neither survived.

The other two occasions were dogs left with collars on. One was in a car where the collar caught on a latch in the back of a hatchback. The dog survived but suffered oxygen deprivation. The other case was a dog left alone in the house while owner was at work, and its collar caught on a door latch. This dog did not survive.

Please ask your readers to stop and think before leaving a dog unattended either tied up or with a collar on. It only takes one incident to lose a faithful companion. — Lynne G., via e-mail

DEAR LYNNE: Thank you. Several ways to increase a dog's safety when unattended include use of a kennel cage (some owners even put one in the back seat of their cars) or setting up a sturdy back-yard "run" to keep active dogs safe.

DEAR PAWS CORNER: The most important way to keep your cat safe is to keep it indoors. If the cat desires to be outdoors, build it a fenced enclosure. Vehicles and non-cat people can cause great tragedy. In our area of Connecticut, coyotes, dogs and fishers will snatch a cat in a blink of an eye.

Outdoors, you have no control over what poisons, such as antifreeze, your pet might consume. Indoors, cat-proof your house as you would for a toddler. Make sure anything small enough to be ingested is secured. Strings, rubber bands and dental floss are enticing play toys, but if swallowed can kill.

I have nine cats, all indoors. Two of them are feral cats that remained after fostering them and their kittens. They are all happy, healthy and safe. One more thing: spay and neuter! — Cathy W., via e-mail

DEAR CATHY: Many thanks from all the readers who will benefit from your advice!

Corporate PERKS

More companies are attracting clients and treating workers with NASCAR weekends

By JIM MARTYKA
Cox News Service

Ontario, Calif.

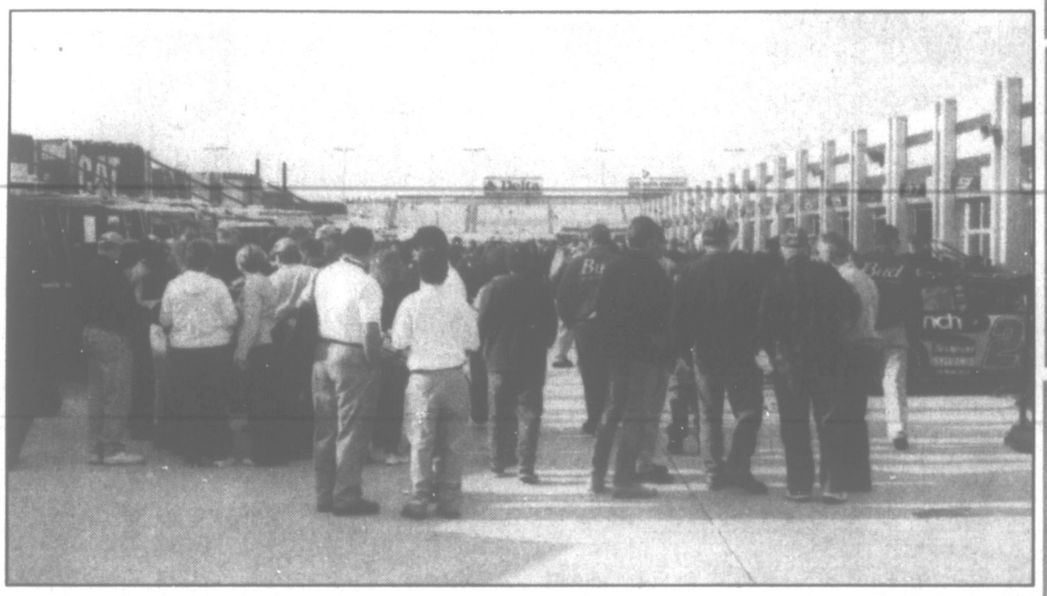
As the deafening roar of speeding cars pierced the desert air at California Speedway, Carrie Hogg, 32, took in a deep breath of the oil, exhaust fumes and excitement that is NASCAR.

"This sure as hell beats watching a basketball game in a skybox somewhere," she said with a smile.

Hogg, an employee of Albertson's grocery store chain, and her husband, Philip, proudly showed off their Dale Earnhardt Jr. T-shirts as they made their way to the garages to watch the drivers and crews prep for the next race. After that, it was back to the hospitality tent for food and beers before settling in to watch the end of the race.

"And the best part," she yelled over the passing cars, "it's all on the company."

It's the newest and fastest-growing trend in the world of corporate "wooing" and employee recognition. While companies still reward key clients and accomplished employees with luxury suites at basketball, football and hockey games, many are beginning to embrace the growing popularity of NASCAR by offering a weekend of the stock-car racing experience.



Cox News Service

Visitors to the garage area at Atlanta Motor Speedway tour the facility hours before the Nextel Cup race on March 14. Many corporate travel packages offer inside access to races, including passing through the garage area as crews prepare the cars for competition.

Exciting experience

"Experience is really the key word," said Justin Macy, president of RaceAway Hospitality Inc., a Kansas-based company which promotes and sells sporting travel packages to corporations.

"The reason more and more corporations are buying these packages is because their clients or their employees are amazed with what they get," he said. "It's not like sitting up in a suite, watching a game. With these NASCAR packages, you're right in the middle of everything."

The packages, which cost $200 to $600, typically include air travel, lodging and transportation to the races. At the track itself, there is usually a hospitality tent with food and beer. Sometimes NASCAR drivers will make an appearance and do quick interviews or an autograph signing.

Clients often are allowed inside-access to the event, passing through the garage as racers get ready, checking out the cars as they are unloaded from trucks and getting close to the pit crews as the race is going on. Sometimes there is the opportunity to listen on headsets to the conversations between drivers and their crew.

"You get everything except grease on your face ... and I suppose you could even get that," said Matt Wagner, a sales representative for Cary, N.C.-based Premiere Sports Travel, the country's largest sports travel package distributor.

Both Wagner and Macy said the number of NASCAR packages sold has skyrocketed over the past couple of years. For RaceAway, a firm with revenues under $1 million, they are the No. 1 priority. And Wagner said Premiere, which brings in a few million dollars a year, is focusing more on the profitable NASCAR packages.

"We do make quite a bit from these NASCAR packages, as they almost always sell out," Wagner said. He also noted the large capacity of NASCAR events as well as the longer season, which means more sale opportunities.

"And the fans are extremely loyal to NASCAR," he said. "These travel packages are a great way for people to see that it's not just a good-old-boy, redneck-running-moonshine kind of sport."

Destroying that image is one reason both NASCAR and the tracks work so closely with the sporting package companies.

> "With these NASCAR packages, you're right in the middle of everything."
> JUSTIN MACY,
> President,
> RaceAway Hospitality Inc.

"These travel packages are just one more piece of a very smart and detailed plan by NASCAR to change its image and to attract more fans," said Don Hinchey, vice president of communications for the Denver-based Bonham Group, a sports consulting firm.

"Over the past couple of years, NASCAR has made an effort to open themselves up more and to let people experience the race. We've seen it with expanded television coverage, the personalization of racers and their teams and travel packages like these," he said.

And while it's a great experience for the clients and the employees, the corporations get a lot from the NASCAR packages as well.

"The agent takes care of everything for you, in terms of lodging and transportation and making sure they have a good time, so you don't have to worry about it," said Roger Long, a sales executive for Syngenta Crop Protection in Greensboro, N.C.

Showing appreciation

Long took clients to a race in Bristol, Tenn., last year and said the price tag of a few thousand dollars was well worth it. "They were clients we really wanted to keep and show our appreciation to, and they had the time of their lives at the race," he said. "And they're still clients today."

Not all the kinks have been worked out of the NASCAR packages. Open access is such a new trend that some raceways struggle to give people access to the normally off-limits areas they want to visit. At California Speedway earlier this month, several patrons were milling around aimlessly at times and questioning staff as to where things were and where they could go.

But for Brian Mosley, 31, a supervisor for drywall company Jade Inc., that was all part of the experience.

"We love it because we're right here in the middle of it," he said. "We can feel it. There's no other sporting experience like this."

Drivers appreciate support of mothers

With the Nextel Cup Series idle in honor of Mother's Day, several NASCAR drivers took time to thank their mothers for the influence they've had on their sons' careers.

Kasey Kahne said his mother molded him into the person he's become.

"The way I act today and treat other people and respect other people — I think I learned most of that from her," he said, adding that his mother now runs his fan club and sells his souvenirs.

"She's really enjoying it, and she's doing a lot for me. It's pretty cool."

Busch Series driver Stacy Compton finished 20th in Saturday's race at Gateway International Raceway, then traveled home to Virginia to be with his mother on Sunday. He pointed out how his mom is a mother figure to many in the NASCAR garage.

Ida Compton often prepares special treats like oatmeal cookies and pecan pies for her son, his crew members, other drivers and their crew members and members of the media.

"She basically takes care of everybody there," Compton said. "She makes sure that everybody gets fed."

Richmond International Raceway

Fast times expected at Richmond

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

A new coat of asphalt at Richmond International Raceway is expected to bring record speeds and possibly some single-file racing when the Nextel Cup runs there Saturday.

"Everybody knows when we go to a track for the first time after it's been repaved and it's new that one-groove racing is probably going to be more apparent," said Elliott Sadler, who recently tested there.

"Once the Busch cars run on the track Friday night and maybe slicken it up a little bit, we might see a groove-and-a-half or hopefully two grooves by Saturday night."

Jeff Gordon, riding a two-race winning streak, said the poll record of 21.194 seconds (approximately 127 mph) likely will be broken during Friday's qualifying.

"The poll record will fall for sure," Gordon said. "I ran that time [during testing] on 30-lap tires."

Truex Jr. claims third '04 victory

Cox News Service

Martin Truex Jr. won his third Busch Series victory in six races, leading 123 of 200 laps in the Charter 250 Saturday night at Gateway International Raceway near St. Louis.

Truex, driving the No. 8 Chevrolet for owner Dale Earnhardt Jr., started the race from the pole and finished 6.601 seconds ahead of Ron Hornaday Jr.

The victory moved Truex 16 points ahead of Michael Waltrip in the series standings.

"We had a superior car tonight," Truex said after the race.

Jason Keller was third, followed by Bobby Hamilton Jr., Kyle Busch, Jason Leffler, Greg Biffle, David Stremme, Tim Fedewa and Robby Gordon.

Truex's victory Saturday marked the first time a Busch Series driver won from the pole at Gateway. Truex's other two wins this season were at Talladega and Bristol.

Resurfacing Work On Garrett Hwy. Slated By SHA

The Maryland Department of Transportation's State Highway Administration announced this week that it will begin safety and resurfacing improvements on Rt. 219 (Garrett Highway) between the Bear Creek Bridge and Rt. 40 at Keyser's Ridge.

This 4½-mile project includes patching, resurfacing, drainage improvements, traffic barrier modifications, application of reflective pavement markings, and replacement of roadway sensors. Weather permitting, the $2.6 million project should be completed by late this fall, according to the SHA.

Motorists traveling along Rt. 219 within the project limits may encounter a single-lane closure from sunrise to sunset. Shoulder closures may take place at any time throughout the project. Variable message signs, flaggers, traffic cones, and barrels will guide motorists through the work zone.

For more information, persons may call SHA's District 6 office at 301-729-8400 or toll free at 1-800-760-7138.

Man Arrested Following Fight

Garrett County sheriff's deputies responded to the parking lot of Garrett County Memorial Hospital Monday night for a reported fight in progress. Before the man was taken to the emergency room for treatment of an injury, he allegedly assaulted one of the deputies.

Edward Scott Moats, 19, Oakland, was arrested and charged with second-degree assault, disturbance of the public peace, disorderly conduct, and failure to obey a lawful order. He was also issued a Uniform Civil Citation for underage possession of an alcoholic beverage.

Hiking The Appalachian Trail

Editor's note: The following is the second in a series by McHenry resident Julia Geisler as she and her friend walk the entire length of the Appalachian Trail.

From Hampton, Tenn. – 400 miles walked.

Cold, wet, and shivering, with an inch of water sloshing around in my shoes, we finally arrived at Kincora Hostel, just off the Appalachian Trail in Hampton, Tennessee.

After a week of hiking in the rain at a fast pace in order to keep warm, we were more than ready for a zero mileage day.

Our next two days off at the hostel were (of course) beautiful and full of sunshine, so we volunteered with the local hiking club to rebuild part of the trail that had been washed away by Laurel Creek. We were also treated to a Scottish New Year celebration put on by the hostel owners, Bob and Pat Peoples. The Gaelic feast included generous portions of homemade fluffy onion pie, buttery corned beef hash, and scrumptious trifle. After two days of relaxation and rejuvenation of spirit, I was ready to get back on the trail.

We were sprinkled with the May dew by Bob Peoples as a blessing of good health for the coming year, and we headed out on the trail, in the rain. The first few hours of walking were spent in reflection of my stay at Kincora Hostel. So many amazing experiences and lessons have come to me along the trail, but among the greatest teachings has been the realization of the appreciation I should have for the materials and resources that are provided for me every day.

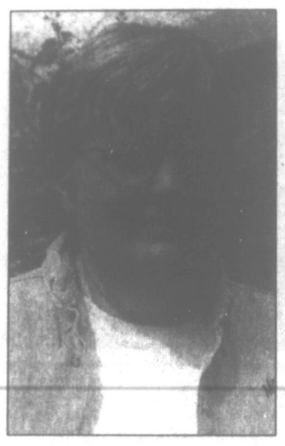
For example, Mom's home cooking is definitely a treasured delicacy when I eat oatmeal, gorp (good old raisins and peanuts), and dehydrated rice and beans, day in and day out. Kitchen appliances and running water become valued when I filter every drop of water used to cook dehydrated meals on a single-burner stove with one pot to share between the two of us. Hot water is appreciated far more when I wash my pot in the freezing cold stream, I can see my breath, and there is ice hanging off my nose. The indulgence of a hot shower takes on a new meaning when you experience your first full week without a bath. The privacy that walls provide gains merit when you are forced to change clothes after a cold and wet day of hiking in a one-room shelter with 10 other strangers of all ages. A flat place to sleep is more valued when the only place to set up the tarp is on a steep slope that makes you feel as if you are going to slide right out the door.

I am more thankful for the quietness of my own room when there are five people snoring in the shelter at night and the earplugs just aren't working. A chair becomes a treasured item when you try to sit on rocks, logs, and wet earth in order to eat, read, or filter water. I welcome the softness of cotton when I wear the same pieces of outdoor clothing made of synthetic material and elastic waistbands every day. The luxury of air conditioning is fully realized when hiking in 90 degree temperatures up a mountain with no shade in sight. Even a toilet is much more appreciated when I have to dig a "cat hole" in the dirt, steady myself against a tree in the rain, and try to succumb to the call of nature.

All of these comforts are certainly nice to have around me; however, there is a flip side that I think we all feel when the sun is shining and you just want to be outside. There is also something deeply satisfying about reaching a destination on foot, setting up your shelter for the evening, cooking your simple "just add water" meal, and knowing that tomorrow you don't have to go to work. I merely need to wake up, eat, walk, sleep, eat, walk, and sleep. Besides, the constant noise of traffic, television, radio, and phones becomes less appealing when I hear only the calls of birds, the trickle of water, and the rustle of the leaves in the woods. Fluorescent indoor lighting and computer screens begin to give me a headache when while living in the outdoors there is only sunshine, a sky full of stars, and the moon to act as illumination. The "fend for yourself" attitude that many Americans hold seems a bit ridiculous when you are shown the true giving nature of human kind in the woods by the sharing of shelters, food, and water. The monotony of everyday life becomes real when I am experiencing a new environment every day, full of new people and adventures.

As you can see, there are most certainly many things to appreciate both on and off the trail. However, I do not think that this appreciation could be fully realized by myself without experiencing the life on the trail. I have begun to recognize that until you are forced to "go without," you will never fully realize the greatness of that which you have right in front of you.

Chesley To Give Victorian Flower Arranging Demo



Barbara Chesley, a new resident in Mountain Lake Park, will present a "Victorian" flower arranging demonstration on Sunday, May 16, at the Ticket Office (town museum) in Mtn. Lake Park. The museum is located along G Street just off Rt. 135.

The program will begin at 2 p.m. Following the presentation, all visitors will be welcome to browse through the building.

According to Chesley, the replication of Victorian era floral décor is very popular today. Traditionally, the Victorian arrangement had a "very luxuriant look with an emphasis on color usage," Chesley said. Another popular floral design of the 1800s were "tussie mussies," cone-shaped vases holding floral arrangements, each one having a definite meaning. Examples of these arrangements will be on display, and handouts will be available.

Chesley summered in Mtn. Lake Park as a child. She lived in Natick, Mass., for the past 28 years before moving to Garrett County two years ago with her husband Fred. As a member of the 15 Gardeners Garden Club in Natick, she served as president and active member for over 15 years. For six years, she volunteered at the New England Flower Show and, representing her club, entered a display in the amateur division. She is presently an outside sales agent for Wayland Travel Inc.

The Mountain Lake Park Historical Association welcomes all visitors to the Ticket Office. Self-guided tours are available, and walkers or drivers may rent tour tapes for a nominal fee. Volunteers will be on hand to answer questions about the history of the Park.

TV PIPELINE

'Stones' star used to be on NBC's 'Sisters'

By Taylor Michaels
© Zap2it

Q: We really enjoyed "The Stones." Where might I have seen Robert Klein before? –Doris Green via e-mail.

A: An alumnus of Chicago's Second City improv troupe, Klein made his first big splash in stand-up comedy before making a segue into a legitimate acting career, which includes a Tony-nominated Broadway run in the musical "They're Playing Our Song."

His many film credits include "Hooper," "The Owl and the Pussycat," "Poison Ivy," "Jeffrey" and "How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days," but almost every female reader I've heard from recalls Klein's memorable 1993-96 series role as Albert "Big Al" Barker on NBC's "Sisters."

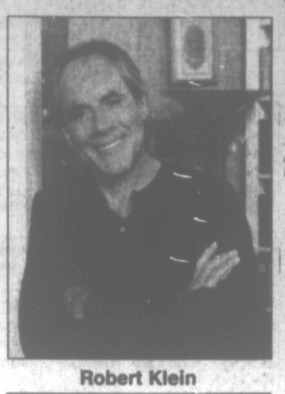
Now 62, Klein is having less luck on the tube these days. "The Stones," which quickly sank like one this past season on CBS, was preceded in 2001 by the embarrassing Jason Alexander sitcom flop "Bob Alexander."

Q: What ever happened to Michelle Pfeiffer's first husband? I know he used to be on a soap opera. –Virginia Clark, Phoenix.

A: Peter Horton, who was married to Pfeiffer from 1981 to 1988, was never actually in a daytime drama, although he spent a few soapy seasons in ABC's "thirtysomething," which premiered in 1987 just as the Horton-Pfeiffer marriage was coming unraveled.

Since then, he hasn't been hiding. Horton starred in the cult TV thriller "Brimstone" on Fox (1998) and, on ABC, the 2000 sitcom "The Geena Davis Show." Just this past season, he made two guest appearances on ABC's "Line of Fire," one of several shows for which he also directs.

Horton, 50, appears in the upcoming feature fantasy "The Dust Factory."



Robert Klein

Q: Did George C. Scott ever reveal why he refused to accept his Oscar as best actor for "Patton"? He certainly earned it in that movie. –Norman E. White, Bloomsburg, Pa.

A: Scott, the first person ever to refuse an Academy Award, made no secret of his motivation: He found pitting artists against one another to be unseemly and crass. A 1999 BBC obituary reported that Scott denounced the politics surrounding the Oscars as "demeaning" and the actor reportedly called the Academy Award ceremonies "a two-hour meat parade."

Q: Did I recognize Deidre Hall of "Days of Our Lives" in a Richard Crenna TV movie called "And the Sea Will Tell"? She was very young. –C.C., Riverview, Fla.

A: You did, although Hall was actually well into her 40s when she played Muff Graham in that 1991 fact-based crime drama, adapted from a book by Vincent Bugliosi and Bruce B. Henderson.

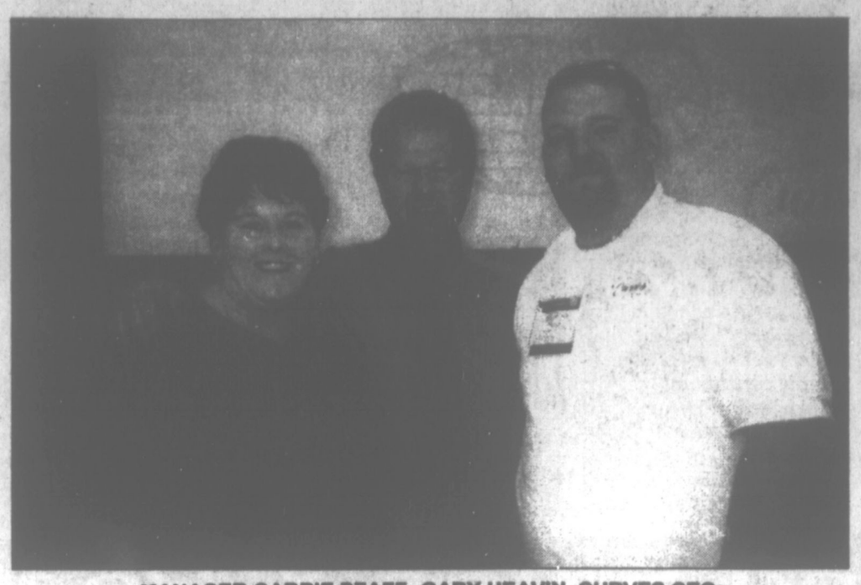
CURVES

Waco-based Curves International Inc., the world's largest fitness center franchise, recently announced the opening of its newest Curves location in Grantsville. This is Grantsville's first Curves center, bringing to residents a supportive environment offering a 30-minute fitness solution with a common sense weight loss program that helps break the weight loss cycle.

To celebrate the location's opening at 14 Penn Avenue, the center will host a special grand opening promotion on Monday, May, 17, beginning at 8 a.m.

"We are excited to become part of the Grantsville community," said Debbie Pfaff, local franchise owner. "Curves offers a comfortable, welcoming place where real women work out. Our facility is designed so women can encourage and support one another while moving around the circuit. We look forward to helping women in this community reach amazing results, both physical and emotional, through our Curves Workout program and support network.

"With the average person gaining three pounds a year, a reasonable workout regime that can fit into today's busy lifestyle of work and family is critical to help combat diabetes, osteoporosis, hypertension and other health risks that women can face," Pfaff said.



MANAGER CARRIE PFAFF; GARY HEAVIN, CURVES CEO; AND MANAGER ED PFAFF

The Curves workout program, designed by Gary Heavin and his wife and co-founder Diane, is utilized in all Curves locations.

The system allows women of all ages and fitness levels to perform all five of the components of a complete fitness program, combining strength and cardiovascular training through hydraulic resistance. The experienced instructors at Curves offer one-on-one training, while members talk and inspire one another during the workout. Also, the comfortable, welcoming atmosphere has helped women of all fitness levels commit to an ongoing fitness program and achieve results.

Since the Curves franchise opened in 1995, the organization has seen exponential growth, beginning with 44 locations in 1996 and expanding to more than 1,250 centers in 2000. In Entrepreneur Magazine's 2003 list of the top 500 franchises, Curves was named the fastest growing franchise of any kind in the world, as well as the number two overall best franchise.

Today, Curves continues to establish itself among the premiere franchises and currently has more than two million members in more than 7,000 locations within the United States, Canada, Spain, Mexico, and the U.K.

A Curves center opens every four hours on average, and has grown from just one franchise in 1995 to having one location for every two McDonalds in America.

"Helping say goodbye to unhealthy lifestyles, unattainable diet resolutions and unreasonable fitness regimens gives women a new outlook on exercise and feeding their body properly," said Pfaff. "We look forward to providing women in this community a complete workout in only 30 minutes that will ensure they can stick to the program and sustain a healthy weight."

Pfaff's managers at the Grantsville location will be Carrie Pfaff and Ed Pfaff. Business hours will be Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

For more information about Curves, persons may visit www.curvesinternational.com or call Pfaff at 301-895-4267.

Garden Club To Present Program About GC's Plants

Local naturalist and plant expert Liz McDowell will be the featured guest speaker at the upcoming meeting of the Mountain Laurel Garden Club, set for Tuesday, May 18, at the Oakland fire hall. A perennial plant sale will follow the progam. Members and guests are asked to bring a bag lunch.

Following a 10:30 a.m. business meeting, McDowell will present "Native Plants: A Welcome Sign for Wildlife," which will incorporate a slide show. During the program, members and guests will learn how homeowners can enhance biodiversity by creating wetlands, butterfly gardens, and other backyard habitats. This presentation was postponed in March because of snow.

McDowell has over 20 years of experience in education and environmental studies. She earned her master of science in wildlife management at the Appalachian Laboratory at Frostburg State University in 1983, where she studied the feeding habits of cave-dwelling bats in the central Appalachians. She has worked as a park naturalist and resource biologist for the Department of Natural Resources, as an environmental specialist for the Maryland Department of the Environment, and as a science teacher at Northern High School.

In 2002 McDowell and her husband, Ron Boyer, started their nature company, Elk Ridge Nature-Works, with the goal of "sharing unique nature experiences in every season." The couple offer ecotours, outdoor classes, and nature programs as well as propagate native wildflowers and handcraft bat boxes. Her volunteer activities include training the NHS Envirothon Team, surveying for the North American Amphibian Monitoring Program, sampling for the Maryland Streamwaders Program, and serving as an instructor at the National Youth Science Camp.

Garden Club membership is open to all, and guests are asked to call Karen Ewing at 301-387-6180 or Norma Hesen at 301-387-4384. Additional information is available on the club's Web site at http://home.earthlink.net/~mlgclub/.

The Mtn. Laurel Garden Club is a member of the National Garden Clubs and the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland. The clubs are involved in environmental issues at the local, state, and national levels, and also host environmental studies schools.

Loch Lynn Church Slates Ladies Rally

Reams Awarded Scholarship To Study Engineering

Baltimore's Northrop Grumman Corporation recently announced the 23 statewide winners of its second annual Engineering Scholars program. Among those named was Southern High School senior Billy Walker Reams of the Oakland area, who will receive a $10,000 merit-based scholarship.

The program will provide a total of $230,000 in college scholarships this fall to high school seniors across Maryland who are interested in pursuing an engineering-related field. Candidates must plan to attend an accredited college or university as a full-time student in an approved engineering curriculum.

"As was the case last year," said Robert P. Iorizzo, president of the company's Electronic Systems sector, "we continue to be impressed with the high caliber of applicants from across the state, which makes the final selection process that much more difficult for our scholarship review team."

To be eligible, applicants had to be a resident of Maryland, a graduating senior this spring from a public or accredited private school in the state, have a minimum composite SAT score of 1,100, and have a minimum grade-point average of 3.5 during grades 9 through 12.

Northrop Grumman will host an awards reception and dinner for the winners at the historical Electronics Museum in Linthicum next Thursday, May 20.

STUDENTS SEE WINDMILLS UP CLOSE – The technology education students from Southern High School took a unique field trip recently, visiting the "wind farm" on Backbone Mountain. The teenagers were impressed with the size and scope of the facility, and learned a great deal about one of the most renewable energy resources on the planet. See story by student Tabby Plummer. Pictured above, left to right, are tech ed students Josh Armstrong, Brandon Fonseca, Alex Patrucco, Chad Andrews, Logan Craig, Danielle Daniels, Seth Friend, Randall Lewis, Matt Kitzmiller, and David Beachy.

SHS Tech Ed Students Take "Windy" Field Trip To Thomas

by Tabby Plummer
SHS Tech Ed Student

Southern High School's technology education students had a rare opportunity in April to visit the Mountaineer Wind Energy Center, located near Thomas and Parsons, W.Va. The first thing they noticed was that it's not exactly a "center." The windmills stretch out over more than six miles along Backbone Mountain.

Wind energy is increasingly important as an alternative to fossil fuels such as gas, oil, and coal. We can never use up all our wind. Alternative sources of energy is one of the topics covered in the technology education course.

Operated by Florida Power and Light (FPL), each of the 42 windmill turbines produces 1.5 megawatts. That's enough energy for about 100 average homes.

Surprisingly, the windmill blades always turn at 17 revolutions per minute (RPM), no matter how strong the wind. Of course, when there's no wind, they don't turn at all. Each windmill has its own weather station and computer to control it. When the wind gets strong, the computer "feathers" the blades so that they use less of the wind's energy. If a hurricane rolls in, the blades automatically shut down if the wind exceeds 56 mph. This prevents damage.

It is important for the windmills to always face directly into the wind. The onboard computer always knows the direction of the wind and turns the windmill continuously into that direction. As the student stood under the windmills during their tour, they could see the continuing adjustments.

Where does all this energy go? To Allegheny Power, which distributes it locally. It is also part of the National Power Grid, so that if needed, the energy can be sent elsewhere.

Why did FPL decide on the Thomas/Parsons area for these windmills? The staff consulted a national wind map, which shows areas where good wind is fairly consistent. Then they put a weather tower up for 18 months to gather data and determine if the place was a good site for generating electricity.

Now in its second year of operation, FPL has given over 40 tours of the windfarm. The spokesman for the SHS tour was Mary Wells, director of public relations for FPL. Students thought she did a great job of explaining the operation of the turbines and of answering the teenagers' many questions. She said FPL staff members enjoy giving tours except in the winter, when weather conditions would make such excursions too dangerous.

One of the last questions put to Wells was "How do you like your job?"

"It's the best job in the world," she said. "I'd never give it up."

Alzheimer's Assn. Explains Safe Return Program

Certain families in need of financial assistance to care for a relative with Alzheimer's disease (AD) or some other form of dementia can now get help paying for the Alzheimer's Association Safe Return program. Families in Garrett, Allegany, Washington, and Frederick counties in financial need can get their one-time $40 registration fee waived. This assistance is available through June 30.

Safe Return is a national program of the Alzheimer's Association that provides personalized ID bracelets and other identification materials and stores a person's contact information in a national database. The program enables police, community service agencies, and private citizens to identify people with AD who have wandered and help them return home.

According to a program spokesperson, 98% of those using the Safe Return program are found within 24-48 hours. The return rate drops to 43% among those who are not registered in the program. These people are at risk because of weather, traffic, and people who prey on the helpless. Some have died from exposure only a short distance from their own doorsteps.

"Nearly 60% of the more than 8,000 people with Alzheimer's disease in western Maryland will wander at some point during the course of their illness. They may be searching for someone or something familiar, such as a friend or where they used to live or work. They may need something, such as food, water, a bathroom, or companionship, but they cannot communicate about it," the spokesperson said.

To register a person in the Safe Return program or learn more about how to prevent or reduce the likelihood of wandering, persons in Garrett County may call 1-800-443-CARE (2273), or go to the association's web site at www.alzgmd.org.

The Alzheimer's Association Greater Maryland Chapter provides education and services for individuals and their families and professional training for care providers while supporting research and advocating for improved public policy.

Frozen Camp Run Information Being Sought

The Garrett County Historical Society is looking for information regarding the origin of the name of Frozen Camp Run so that it could be included in the American Forestry Heritage program.

Frozen Camp Run can be seen as it goes under Silver Knob Road about 1/2 mile west of U.S. Rt. 219. It forks near Mansfield Road to form Cherry Creek to the west and Douglass Run flowing east.

An undocumented story is that a survey crew camped one night there and froze to death while in the process of confirming the site of the Fairfax Stone, a major point in setting the boundary between the colonies of Maryland, Virginia, and Pennsylvania in 1736.

Persons with questions or comments may contact the Rev. John A. Grant at 301-334-5974, 115 N. 2nd St., Oakland, MD 21550; or John R. Toston at 301-334-7604, 166 Church St., Oakland, MD 21550.

Vacation Bible School Slated By Oakland Churches

St. Peter's Catholic, St. Mark's Lutheran, and St. Paul's United Methodist churches in Oakland are currently making plans for vacation Bible school. The school will be held daily, July 26-30, from 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m.

The openings, closings, and classes for younger children will be held at St. Paul's, located at the corner of Fourth and Oak streets. Classes for older children will be held across the street in St. Peter's Sunday school building.

All students from 4 years of age (on or before July 26) through ninth grade are invited to attend. Registration forms are available at the mentioned churches and at Shaffer Ford Sales in Oakland.

For more information, persons may call director Kathy Shaffer at 301-334-2121 (work) or 301-334-9032 (home).

Umbel To Lead Garrett County Pipkin Campaign

Ruth Umbel, McHenry, will chair the E.J. Pipkin campaign for Garrett County. Pipkin is the Republican candidate who is running for the Maryland U.S. Senate seat currently held by Barbara Mikulski.

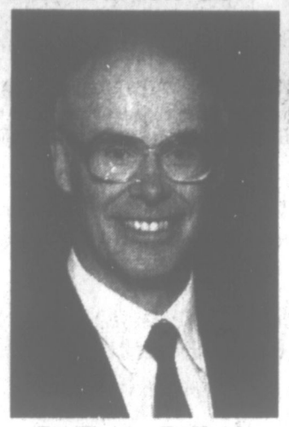
Umbel holds a B.S. degree in social sciences and a master's degree in education from Frostburg State University. She presently teaches government at Allegany High School, Cumberland.

Umbel's political career includes serving as president of the Southern Republican Women for two terms, Western Region chairman under seven Maryland Federation of Republican Women presidents, and one term as state recording secretary for MFRW. She has been a precinct chairman and has been elected to the Garrett County Republican Central Committee, for which she serves as secretary. She is also a member of the First Ladies Forum in Maryland.

Umbel said that E.J. Pipkin is a "good candidate, who grew up poor and is a self-made success." She added that he has donated over $200,000 of his own personal money to help clean up the Chesapeake Bay. He is the father of three children, and is thus concerned about education. He is also against raising taxes, she said.

Persons interested in volunteering to help with either the Pipkin or the Bush/Cheney campaigns are invited to telephone 301-387-2522 or 301-387-5035.

Sheahen Chairing Bush Campaign For Garrett Co.



Dr. Thomas P. Sheahen, Oakland, is serving as chairman of the Bush/Cheney 2004 campaign for Garrett County, according to the Garrett County Republican Central Committee.

Sheahen is a physicist who received both his B.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and has had a long career focused primarily in energy sciences.

His first Republican party position was as an elected county committeeman in New Jersey in 1972. Since then he has held various positions in other venues.

Dr. Sheahen ran for the Maryland State Senate in 1986 as the Republican candidate in District 19 (central Montgomery County).

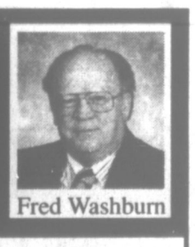
Real Estate Facts by...



Fred Washburn

HOW MUCH IS ENOUGH?

My word is my bond! That expression held great meaning to land buyers and sellers in the "olden" days. Most real estate sales were made with a handshake, and a verbal promise to complete the transaction at some future date.

Later, as a show of their good intentions, buyers would give sellers a sum known as "earnest money" to be held until the sale was consummated. This deposit had more ceremonial significance than monetary assurance of a completed sale.

Today, earnest money deposits are a part of most every real estate transaction. The amount used as a deposit is negotiable between buyers and sellers, with no minimum or maximum required by law.

There is, however, a strong message attached to the amount of money tendered by buyers. As the saying goes, "Money talks!" If sellers are presented with two identical offers on their home, one with a $10,000 deposit, and the other with $500, which do you think they are most likely to accept? Sellers believe the higher deposit indicates buyers who are more qualified to complete the purchase.

Having said that, understand that earnest money is just one factor to be considered when buying or selling a home. The amount of the deposit is relative, and depends on the unique nature of each property. Detailed information about earnest money deposits is available from the real estate agent you choose.

If you'd like to buy a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call today!

Mtn. Top Truck Driving Institute To Open May 24

The Mountain Top Truck Driving Institute, now a part of the Continuing Education and Training Division of Garrett College headed by Dean Lowell Bender, will begin its first class on May 24, according to a college spokesperson. The course will continue for 10 weeks and will include 320 hours of instruction, which equates to 16 credits.

The purpose of the professional truck driving curriculum is to qualify students for entry level positions as drivers in over-the-road or local driving vehicles. The training will focus on basic information about trucks, truck driving, and the trucking industry, as well as the fundamentals of operating trucks and tractor trailers.

The curriculum will have three components: the classroom, the yard where students will learn about trucks, and the hands-on, over-the-road experience.

To qualify for enrollment, students should have a high school diploma or a GED. Persons who are not high school graduates and foreign applicants may be accepted if they pass a nationally recognized ability to benefit test. All students must hold a current driver's license and a commercial driving license learner's permit, possess an acceptable driving record from the Motor Vehicle Administration, or be at least 21 years of age.

Classes at the institute will meet four days a week, Monday through Thursday, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. (including breaks). Students are required to attend at least 80% of the hours offered in each course, except driving hours, where 90% is required. At the end of each course the student's grade point average is calculated, and each student is required to achieve at least 70% overall grade point average for graduation.

To accommodate persons who are presently employed and who want the truck driving training, weekend sessions are being scheduled, with the first session to start June 5. Classes will meet on Saturdays and Sundays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. (including breaks) for 20 weeks.

The director of the Mtn. Top Truck Driving Institute will be Bud Poland, who directed the Diesel Institute in Grantsville for the past 20 years. The instructors will also be former faculty members of the Diesel Institute.

Financial aid services and career placement services of the college will be available to students enrolled in the institute. Students may register for either the credit option or the non-credit option. Those who register for credit may be eligible to receive Title IV Pell assistance or student loans.

The Mountain Top Truck Driving Institute is located three miles east of Grantsville on Route 40. Persons who desire information about tuition and fees should call Poland at 301-387-3088.

Students Take Part In First GC Envirothon

Approximately 70 students and teachers took part in Garrett County's first Envirothon at the 4-H Center, Bittinger, recently. The Northern Lights team from Northern High School took first place, and will represent the county in the state competition in June.

Northern Lights team members are Mike McKewen, Annie Winter, Amanda Sisler, Margaret Mastej, Angel Giron, and Sam Sherrard. Their advisers are April Slagle and Liz McDowell.

The Topes team took first place in the teacher competition. Members were April Slagle from NHS, Robin Taylor from Bloomington School, and three South African teachers, Kathy Dos Santos, Jacky Johnson, and Elna- Marais.

According to Lynn Bell, director of secondary education, this year's competition was a chance to expose everyone to the event.

Students from both high schools and middle schools competed, as did eighth graders from Bloomington School.

Envirothon is a hands-on outdoor competition for youth that tests students' knowledge and understanding of soils and land use, aquatic ecology, forestry, wildlife, and a current issue that varies from year to year. Students compete in teams of five. This team approach requires students to share information and opinions about resource management and environmental issues, and promotes cooperative decision making. An adult adviser, generally a teacher, provides training to the students throughout the school year, but cannot help during the competition.

Northern High School student Julie Nixon designed the Envirothon emblem. This design was used on T-shirts, invitations, and certificates.

Bell added that the program had a lot of support from the employees of the Department of Natural Resources, who set up the stations, and Stony Brool Properties, who purchasec the T-shirts and developec the site maps.

PARTICIPATING IN FIRST ENVIROTHON – Students at both high schools, middle schools, and eighth graders from Bloomington recently participated in Garrett County's first Envirothon at the 4-H Camp in Bittinger. Students rotated through five stations: wildlife, soils, forestry, aquatics, and the fifth issue, which is a current issue that varies year to year. Pictured above left are the members of Amviente, a team from Bloomington, evaluating the dirt at the soil station. Team members were Madison Carder, Chrissy Friend, Garrett Wilson, and Robby Hershberger. At the bottom left are the Husky Too's from Northern High as they measure the soil pH. On the right is Shaun Sanders, district manager of the Garrett Soil Conservation District. Team members were Carly Chase, Caity Sussman, Holly Wampler, and Rick Mosser. At the top right are the Envirothon Middle Rams from Southern Middle School at the aquatic center, where they identified species of dead fish among other things. Team members are Ben Uphold, Sarah Hanlin, Zach Lawrence, Dan Beachy, and Tiffany Wotring. At the bottom right are members of the Northern Lights from Northern High School, who placed first in the competition. They were recognized at Tuesday's Board of Education meeting. This team will represent Garrett County at the state competition in Prince George's County on June 22 through 24. Pictured are adviser April Slagle, Annie Winter, Jim Raley (board president), Amanda Sisler, Margaret Mastej, Mike McKewen, and Dr. Wendell Teets, superintendent. Absent was Angel Giron. Also absent was Julie Nixon, sophomore at Northern High School, who designed the emblem that was used on T-shirts, certificates, and invitations. Gary Reichenbecher, principal at NHS, accepted the certificate for Nixon.

Unique Heritage Program Provides Local 4-H'er With Rare Breed Sheep

Ethan Broadwater, Grantsville, was recently notified he was a awarded a Karakul sheep in the Youth Conservationist Program (YCP). The YCP offers a unique opportunity to young people with a serious interest in raising rare breeds of sheep.

Richard Larson and his wife Donna initiated YCP in 1998 when they gave an aspiring young shepherd a registered Karakul ewe.

"Most people don't know about heritage breeds of sheep," said Richard. "YCP enables youths to experience the joys and responsibilities of conserving heritage wool sheep breeds. The program introduces the breeds to individuals who otherwise might never know about them or get involved with them."

YCP awarded 16 registered ewe lambs and yearling ewes to young shepherds in 2002. Breeds involved in the program as of 2002 are Karakul, Coopworth, Cotswold, Jacob, Leicester longwool, Lincoln longwool, Scottish Blackface, Hog Island, Clun Forest, Merino, and Tunis.

The animals are presented to young people who express a genuine interest in raising them. When the Larsons offered a single ewe in 1998, they received 14 applications from young people in four states. The couple awarded five ewes in 2000 in response to applications from 40 youngsters from nine states. As a result of these initial efforts, 16 registered ewes were donated from 14 breeders in 2002.

"It was like the pebble tossed in the pond," Richard said. "The circle gets larger and larger." Dobree Adams of Frankfort, Ky., donated a Lincoln longwool ewe in 2002.

"The future of agriculture and especially of our heritage breeds of livestock rests with our youth," Adams said. "This is an important program. I was impressed with the quality and sincerity of the many applications, but I was even more impressed when I met the winners and saw the excitement in their faces."

Because of a variety of obstacles, YCP was not available in 2003. Elaine Ashcraft has volunteered to organize the program this year. Ashcraft witnessed two of her local 4-H'ers receive ewes from YCP in 2000, and said she has seen first-hand the positive impact for both the youngsters and their families.

To be eligible to apply, the youth must be between the ages 12 and 18 years old, exhibit the ewe at least twice in 2004 at a county fair or local sheep show, and show it again at the state fair in the state where the recipient lives. The recipient must breed the ewe to a registered ram in the fall of 2004, and agree to either use the ewe's fleece to personally make a woolen item or sell the fleece to a spinner, felter, or weaver.

Ethan is the son of Michael and Lisa Broadwater of Grantsville and is a member of the Grantsville 4-H Club.

BROADWATER AWARDED WITH KARAKUL SHEEP – Ethan Broadwater, Grantsville, has been awarded a Karakul sheep to raise and to show at local and state fairs. The rare breed of sheep was awarded to the local 4-H'er through a unique, competitive program. Broadwater, at left, is pictured with Richard and Donna Larson of the Old Gjerpen Farm in Culpeper, Va., where Broadwater retrieved his sheep on Sunday. The Larsons are the founders of the Youth Conservationist Program (YCP). See story.

FIRST PLACE AGRONOMY TEAM RECOGNIZED – The agronomy team from Northern High School placed first in the state competition at the University of Maryland, and were recently recognized at the Board of Education meeting. Team members were tested individually on the identification of various species (plants, seeds, and insects) and the process of plant growth. Additionally, the team competed with other agriculture teams with a problem solving task. Pictured above, from the left, are Dr. Wendell Teets (superintendent), Bridgette Welsh, Lacie Berkebile, Jim Raley (board president), Randi Rodeheaver, Becky Berkebile, and Larry Deal (adviser).

Farm Business Plan Will Have Internet Access

In mid-2005, the USDA Farm Service Agency (FSA) will provide its direct and guaranteed farm loan borrowers with a new online Farm Business Plan, an accounting system that will enhance the quality and speed of service that FSA offers America's farmers and other agricultural producers. This plan will replace the Farm and Home Plan. The new plan is powered by easy-to-use software that is one of the most widely used financial planning tools in the lending industry today, according to an FSA spokesperson.

FSA's new Farm Business Plan allows borrowers to document cash flow, expenses, assets, debts, and other important financial information. This information is shared with FSA farm loan officials or guaranteed lending partners who track the success of the borrower's business by computer to see how the producer is progressing toward the goal of graduating to commercial credit. In addition, it allows borrowers to evaluate their own short- and long-term plans and goals as well as assess profitability and many other things. Producers will find the plan and its forms very user-friendly and helpful in planning and monitoring the progress of their farm business, the spokesperson said.

FSA borrowers will be able to fill out and submit their Farm Business Plans via the Internet to local FSA offices from their homes or offices, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Producers who do not own computers will be able to access their accounts through computers at local public libraries or other facilities with Internet access. Borrowers may also complete worksheets by hand and submit to the FSA office for the staff to enter into the system.

All offices will be using the new plan by October 2004. More information will be released later.

Good Weather Aids Planting

Sunshine and warm temperatures allowed farmers to plant corn, sorghum, soybeans, watermelons, cucumbers, snap beans, sweet corn, potatoes, tomatoes, and cantaloupes. There were 5.3 days suitable for field work for the week ending May 9. Field corn was over 60 percent planted, and 25 percent has began to emerge. Farmers are starting to plant full-season soybeans and harvest a small amount of strawberries, green peas, and hay.

Winter wheat was in good condition with 26 percent excellent, 54 percent good, 17 percent fair, and 3 percent poor. Grain heads have formed in over 30 percent of the winter wheat fields. Barley was in good condition with 36 percent excellent, 45 percent poor, 14 percent fair, and 5 percent poor. Over 85 percent of the barley fields have headed, and a few fields are beginning to turn color.

Pasture was in good condition with 30 percent excellent, 49 percent good, 15 percent fair, 4 percent poor, and 2 percent very poor. Hay supplies was rated 53 percent adequate, 31 percent short, and 16 percent very short.

A VIOLENT WIND twisted and snapped this mighty tree on Saturday afternoon, as a storm cell tore through Garrett County. The tree, located on property along Bishoff Road past the Wisp Resort, came crashing down at about 5:30 p.m. While a microburst or small tornado was suspected at this locale, the National Weather Service reported that there were only high winds at work. The storm was selective with its damage, as parts of the county experienced only hard rain and a few thunderclaps. The stormy weather has continued throughout the week, with lots of lightning dancing across the sky. The forecast is predicting much of the same for the next several days — very warm, humid, and intermittent thunderstorms. Batten down the hatches, and watch the grass grow and grow. WV Contractor Arrested By GBI Authorities

A West Virginia contractor was arrested by Garrett Bureau of Investigation in connection with the theft of $27,330 from the Garrett County Sanitary District in October 1999.

Charles Edward Wamsley Jr., 44, was arrested and charged with one count of felony theft. He was released from the Garrett County Detention Center on an unsecured bond.

At the time of the reported theft, Wamsley owned and operated Wamsley Construction Company. He was issued a check in error for the aforementioned amount by the sanitary district and refused to return the money, according to a GBI spokesperson.

EVERY CANDLE HAS A NAME – The Ceremony of Hope, an annual event included in the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life, allows participants and guests to take a few moments to reflect on family members and friends who have either died of cancer or who are now battling the illness. The relay will be held on June 11 and 12, with the Ceremony of Hope slated for dusk on Friday (about 9 p.m.). The public is welcome and encouraged to attend the solemn and silent event, during which no walkers are to be on the track. Those who wish to purchase a luminary in honor or in memory of a loved one may do so by filling out a luminaria form, available from any member of a Relay For Life team. All proceeds will go toward cancer patient services in Garrett County. For additional Relay For Life information, persons may call Donna Broadwater at 301-334-3923 or Rick Broadwater at 301-334-2500.

BioBlitz Set For May 29-30 At New Germany

The third annual BioBlitz will be held at New Germany State Park from Saturday, May 29, at 3 p.m. to Sunday, May 30, at 3 p.m.

A 24-hour species search will be conducted so a "snapshot" can be taken of the biodiversity at New Germany State Park. The diversity of nature within the park environment over a 24-hour period will be counted. Interested persons are invited to come and join any of several group tours under the leadership of experts.

A partial list of tours includes the following: On Saturday afternoon and early evening, Ron Boyer, Liz McDowell, and Donna Gates will investigate stream invertebrates, Kevin Dodge will explore botany, and Margit Pruett will search for animal tracks. On both Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning, Wayne Hildebran will hunt for reptiles and amphibians, Ellen Hrabovsky will examine botany, and Fran Pope and Diane Smith will explore the butterfly population in the park.

On Sunday morning, Steven Hinebaugh will examine the many trees and shrubs in the area, Dan Feller will search for dragonflies, and Susan Rivers and Al Klotz will hunt for stream invertebrates and research fisheries. Beginning at 10 p.m., Mike Callahan and Shelley Miller will conduct a night hike.

Md./D.C. atlas coordinator Walter Ellison and Garrett County atlas coordinator Fran Pope, both bird experts, will lead an "atlassing" expedition over the weekend. (See detailed

Two Children Ejected After Vehicle Flips

Two children, who were not restrained in child safety seats, were ejected in a single-vehicle accident Wednesday evening on I-68 west of Lower New Germany Road, according to Maryland State Police.

The driver, Camela Dawn Bosley, 41, Petersburg, W.Va., told police she swerved to avoid a collision with a tractor trailer. After swerving, the vehicle entered the grass median strip and overturned.

The juveniles, ages 3 and 6, were transported by Trooper 5 to Memorial Hospital, Cumberland. Bosley was transported by Northern Rescue Squad to Memorial Hospital. The front seat passenger, Me-

Local Girl, EMS Agencies Receive Awards In Annapolis From MIEMSS

The Maryland Institute of Emergency Medical Services Systems (MIEMSS) in Annapolis on Tuesday honored children from across the state and presented its annual Stars of Life Awards to honor EMS (Emergency Medical Services) personnel, citizens, and EMS programs. The MIEMSS is the state agency responsible for the delivery of emergency medical services in Maryland.

Among those honored were a 9-year-old Red House area girl, who helped save her father's life, and various Garrett County and Allegany County EMS agencies for their response to the massive crash on I-68 last Memorial Day weekend.

The awards were presented in a two-part ceremony in the Governor's Reception Room of the State House. The morning presentation honored Michaela Warsaw and eight other children "whose actions have ensured that people in Maryland receive the right care when it counts."

Michaela was nominated by Diane Lee and Sam Moon of the Garrett County Health Department for helping to save her father's life.

On June 11, 2003, Michaela went looking for her father Bruce on their southern Garrett County farm. She found him with severe injuries and remembered what she had learned at Yough Glades Elementary School. Michaela went to a neighbor's home to dial 9-1-1. When EMS personnel arrived, she took them to where her father was lying.

Assisting with the children's awards ceremony this year was First Lady Kendel Ehrlich. "The First Lady's support of the EMS System and the safety of Maryland's smallest citizens is extraordinary," said an MIEMSS spokesperson.

Featuring primarily classical ensembles, the 2004 series also includes a solo piano performance, a concert of Appalachian and Celtic folk music, and an evening of cornet music from the Victorian era. On Sept. 11, a special benefit concert has been added for the Alta E. Schrock Memorial Fund.

GC Hotel Rental Tax Legislation Signed Into Law

Governor Robert Ehrlich Jr. last week signed House Bill 539 into law, which will take effect on July 1, 2004.

This legislation makes unpaid hotel rental tax in Garrett County a lien against certain real and personal property, and allows the county government to collect that tax in the same manner as property tax is currently collected.

Legislative Services has projected that Garrett County expenditures will decrease by $1,040 for each circumstance involving unpaid hotel rental taxes because of avoided attorneys' fees and court costs. Revenues would not be affected.

The bill was requested by the Garrett County commissioners and sponsored in this year's General Assembly session by Del. George Edwards and Sen. John Hafer.

Click It Or Ticket ABC Operation Urges Constant Safety Belt Usage

The Garrett County Commissioners proclaimed their support of the upcoming "Click It or Ticket/ Operation ABC (America Buckles Up Children) Mobilization" by issuing a proclamation on Tuesday.

The proclamation, which was supported by Maryland State Police Barrack W in McHenry, the Garrett County Highway Safety Program, and the Garrett County Traffic and Transportation Advisory Committee, advocates the importance of using safety belts and child safety seats on every trip, every time.

The Mobilization, which will run from May 24 to June 6 is a national effort to increase safety belt use and reduce fatalities.

"Motor vehicle crashes are the leading cause of death for persons age 16 to 34," said Diane Lee, highway safety coordinator at the Garrett County Health Department, "and a third of children age 14 and under ride in the wrong restraint type for their age and size."

A free child safety seat check is scheduled for 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, May 22, at the Burger King on Chestnut Ridge Road in Grantsville. Trained personnel from the Health Department and Maryland State Police will help parents and other caregivers make sure they are using the correct child safety seat and installing it properly.

"For children in child safety seats, the risk of death is reduced by as much as 71%," Lee said. "When a lap and shoulder belt is used for adults and children over 80 pounds, the risk of death for front-seat passenger car occupants is reduced by

High School Student Safety Belt Usage Low

Motor vehicle crashes continue to be the leading cause of death for teens and young adults age 16 to 34, but a recent survey at Garrett County high schools found that student safety belt use is lower that the county average.

The Maryland State Police Barrack W in McHenry and the Garrett County Health Department joined forces and did observational surveys at both Northern and Southern high schools during the week of April 19. The safety belt use rate was 74% at Northern and 53% at Southern, compared to the most recent county survey of 79%.

"We would like to see the safety belt use rate at the high schools increase to at least the state average, which is 88%," said Diane Lee, highway safety coordinator at the Garrett County Health Department. "Safety belts reduce death by 45% in passenger cars and 60% in pickup trucks, but nationally, almost two-thirds of 16- to 20-year-old passenger vehicle occupants killed or seriously injured in crashes in 2002 were not wearing a safety belt.

"We would like to take advantage of the natural

BORN TO RIDE – Even at the age of 2, Shaila VanSickle, McHenry, is already a veteran of the National Pike Wagon Train, which traveled through Grantsville last week. Her mother participated in the wagon train in 2002, finally resting in a horse trailer as labor pains progressed. When she decided it was time to go to the hospital, Shaila arrived within the hour. She has been riding horses since she was a baby, and is on her way to becoming a barrel racer like her four siblings. Shaila participated in the wagon train for the last two years, and is pictured above as she rode last week with her mother Sherry. Photo by Lisa Broadwater.

Two West Virginia residents were lucky to escape with minor injuries, and a Garrett County motorist avoided injury altogether, after what could have been a calamitous accident Saturday evening evening on Interstate 68, according to Maryland State Police troopers stationed at the McHenry barrack. The driver of the West Virginia pair's small pickup truck, which rolled across the median strip and struck a vehicle in the oncoming lanes, was charged in the crash.

Shortly before 6 p.m., Tiffany Dawn Runion, 19, Charleston, was operating a 1984 GMC Sonoma that began hydroplaning in the outside lane of the rain-soaked eastbound Interstate just east of Bittinger Road. The pickup went out of control, traveled into the median strip, and overturned before continuing into the westbound lanes and striking an oncoming vehicle. The pickup finally came to rest on the outside shoulder of the westbound highway.

Runion and her passenger, David Wayne Kane Jr., 19, Hedgesville, were transported to Cumberland Memorial Hospital by the Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad. Joann Heavner Fletcher, 49, Frostburg (GC), who was driving the westbound 1998 Subaru Legacy that was struck by Runion's truck, was not injured.

Runion was charged with failure to give full time and attention to her driving.

Bill O'Brien

It's been seven years now since you've been gone,
Your love and memories forever live on.

Although many things have changed along the way,
The thoughts of you remain with each passing day.

We know that you're in a better place now,
But still we can't help but wonder how.

Our lives will go on with you not here,
Then we remember that you'll always be near.

This helps the days as they go by,
And makes it a little easier to understand why.

Oakland Men Sentenced In Circuit Court

Two Oakland area men were recently sentenced in Garrett County Circuit Court. Robert Carroll Hesson, Oakland, pleaded guilty to driving while impaired by alcohol. Related charges against him were not prosecuted based upon his plea.

Hesson, 53, was sentenced to one year in the Garrett County Jail, which was suspended, and fined him $250 plus court costs.

Wagner, 58, will be on supervised probation for three years and must perform 50 hours of community service.

A related charge of unauthorized use of motor vehicle was not prosecuted based upon Wagner's plea.

He was charged by the Garrett County Sheriff's Office in October 2002 after he allegedly changed the ignition in the victim's 1988 Chevrolet Silverado truck, according to a police report.

He was charged and arrested by the Garrett County Sheriff's Office following a June 2003 traffic stop on Maryland Highway, according to a deputy's report.

In an unrelated case, Richard C. Wagner pleaded guilty to damaging/tampering with a motor vehicle without the driver's consent. Judge Jim Sherbin sentenced Wagner to 60 days in the Garrett County Jail, which was suspended, and RECKNER WINS NATIONAL 4-H TITLE – Lyndsae Reckner, daughter of former Garrett County resident Gary Reckner and granddaughter of Lillian Reckner of McHenry, won the 4-H National Land Judging for Homesites Contest in Oklahoma City, Okla., earlier this month. The 17-year-old Parrish, Fla., resident was a member of Manatee County 4-H Land Judging Team. To win her individual title in the homesite evaluation division, Lyndsae out-judged 123 other contestants from 31 states. They were taken to four homesites, where they evaluated how well the land would support the building foundations, lawns and landscaping, sewage lagoons, septic tanks, and roads. Lyndsae had three out of four perfect judging score cards, for a total high of 362 points. The Manatee County Team won ninth nationally in homesite judging and 10th in land judging. Also on the four-member team was Lyndsae's 15-year-old sister, Brystol, who had two perfect cards in homesite judging. Their 19-year-old brother Bryce competed in the Florida 4-H Land Judging Contest last year but fell short of winning the state title. Their father is a U.S. Department of Agriculture natural resources conservationist.

W.Va. Man Faces Drug Charges After Traffic Stop

Maryland State Police troopers jailed a Morgantown man on drug charges early this morning after a traffic stop in McHenry.

Justin Ray Dalton, 19, was stopped at approximately 1:30 a.m. on Garrett Highway just north of Mountainview Lane while riding in a vehicle that was observed speeding and weaving along the roadway. When the investigating trooper noted the odor of suspected burnt marijuana emanating from inside the 2003 Mitsubishi, Dalton, a passenger, reportedly stated that he possessed marijuana. Dalton turned a bag of the suspected drug over to the trooper voluntarily, and a subsequent search of the vehicle and its other occupant failed to reveal any additional contraband.

Dalton, who was charged with possession of marijuana, was released from the Garrett County Detention Center after posting a $100 bond.

Click-It Challenge...

This column is directed almost entirely to Garrett County's teen drivers, particularly those who reside in the southern area of the county. It is strongly requested that parents and local high school teachers clip the column out of the paper, enlarge it, and post it all over Southern and Northern high schools.

Beginning Monday, May 24, and continuing through Sunday, June 6, will be a national effort by law enforcement personnel to crack down on vehicle occupants who refuse to wear their safety belts. It's called "Click It or Ticket/Operation ABC (America Buckles Up Children) Mobilization."

According to the most recent surveys, we here on the mountaintop are doing reasonably well overall in complying with the law, as 79% of us are properly restrained in our vehicles. This is much better than just a few years ago, but of course, the goal is 100%.

However, the same survey showed that in vehicles arriving at and exiting Southern High School the compliance rate was only 53%. Those entering and leaving the Northern High School parking lot revealed a compliance rate of a not-too-bad 74%. Nationwide, safety belt use by teens and young men, ages 16-24, is 69%. But statewide, safety belt use at high schools averages 88%.

So, Southern High School students, what's going on? You can do much, much better than that. (Is it possible that you can do better than Northern High School?)

Northern High School students, with the challenge now being issued, you surely can now do even better than 74%, right? Or can you?

This challenge is not our creation, but the idea of Diane Lee, highway safety coordinator for the Garrett County Health Department. But we here at The Republican are willing to put some money where our collective mouths are by offering to purchase a large — and quite beautiful — trophy that can be displayed at whichever school wins this friendly competition. It would be a revolving trophy unless and until one of the two schools wins the competition, say, three years in a row, and in that case it would be a permanent possession of that school.

The sad fact is that nearly two-thirds of those ages 16-20 who were killed in passenger vehicle accidents in the year 2002 were not wearing a safety belt. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates that safety belts save the lives of more than 14,000 motorists each year, and save about $50 billion in medical care, lost productivity, and other injury-related cost nationwide. And this does not mention the horrible pain and suffering, not only from unnecessary injuries, but especially from losing a loved one.

While our precious young people are the primary focus of this column, there are still plenty of adults who are not setting a good example by wearing their safety belts, and worse, by leaving their young children unrestrained. We older folks can do a whole lot better too.

We also encourage all local law enforcement officials to diligently "ticket" those who refuse to "click it."

To the Editor:

May is designated as National Foster Care Month, a time when the spotlight shines on the children, teens, and foster families who make foster care work. The foster care "system" is only as good as the people who choose to be part of it. As more Americans begin to feel responsible and support the families in foster care, the system will become better and better. I would like to take this opportunity to thank those who became involved in foster care in our area by supporting our organization and our families.

A special "thank you" to the following businesses for all their help: Martin's Food Market, Oscar's, Ponderosa, Chi Chi's, Hen House, Bob Evans, Harvey's Florists, Giuseppi's, Hilltop Restaurant, Uno's, Deep Creek Brewery, Silver Tree, Smiley's, Perkins, Frostburg Cinemas, Love's Grocery, Home Interiors by Chee Chee, George's Creek Florist, Moon-Glo Skating, Barbara's Hallmark, Hartley's Pizza, Dairy Queen, M&M Bakery, Baltimore Orioles, Enterprise Car Rental, and most importantly the 27 foster families in our program who are the real reason for our success.

There are countless opportunities for you to make a difference in the lives of the youth in foster care in your area. Consider sending notes of encouragement to our youth and families, donate a coupon for a free pizza or movie rental, or just take a few minutes to find out more about our agency by visiting our web site, www.pressleyridge.org. New foster families are desperately needed in our area.

Remember that the children in foster care are not the responsibility of someone else. They are our future; their well-being is dependent on the willingness of our entire community to care for and about them.

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to commend the three women in charge of the Partners After School program at Friendsville Elementary. My daughter participated in the program and she loved it. It was organized, full of activities, and well run. The program was set up for three days a week, and most children participated in all the days available. Each day they had an after-school snack, homework hour, and a well-planned activity.

Throughout the year the children had field trips to Rocky Cap State Park, the Friendsville Post Office, the Friend Museum, S & S Market, and a weekly trip to the library. To end out the year they had an opportunity to eat at the Japanese Steak House and attend a comedy show at FSU. They also had an evening of ice skating, rock wall climbing, and swimming at the YMCA. All trips were well planned and the children thoroughly enjoyed them.

I would like to thank Tammy Humberson, JoAnn Ross, and Carol Wakefield for their time, patience, and TLC.

To the Editor:

I use this time and space to express the thanks, gratitude, and appreciation to those who attended and supported the 2004 edition of the Ali Ghan Shriners Circus held at the Frostburg State University on Sunday, April 4.

Thank you to the many businesses in the Oakland and Garrett County area that purchased advertising space in our program.

Thank you to those businesses who went the extra mile and were corporate sponsors for the circus.

Thank you to the many circus fans who attended and hopefully enjoyed a great circus.

Our purpose was to provide outstanding family entertainment for the families of this area and to provide an entertainment outlet for those less fortunate in the area. I hope we met those objectives. Seeing the excited smiles on the children's faces made our efforts worthwhile.

And last but certainly not least, we thank The Republican's great media coverage in support of our efforts. Your coverage of this event contributed to its success and for that we are grateful.

Sincerely,
Fred Widmyer

To the Editor:

As dandelions blink yellow faces in bright sunshine and goldfinches drop by for longer and longer visits, I am reminded that time is rapidly moving toward what we call in our family, "our visit with the girls." "The girls" in this case are our Fresh Air Fund youngsters from New York City who spend two weeks with us in July. In fact, I just finished talking on the phone with both of their mothers. I like to keep in touch.

This will be the third summer that my husband and I have had the joy of waiting with other folks of all ages (single couples, families with children, empty nesters like ourselves) for the chartered bus to arrive with our Fresh Air kids. There is nothing like the excitement that ensues when the bus finally pulls into sight, rounds the corner, and stops in its designated spot. The open doors of the bus, the children climbing down mirror the open arms and smiling faces of the Friendly Town families.

This experience could be yours. I truly wish you would sign aboard. For two weeks you could have an opportunity like no other; an opportunity to influence a life in significant, positive, and lasting ways, and an opportunity to grow yourself as a human being, in understanding, compassion, and love. Most of all, you would have a great time!

Your house may not stay spotlessly clean during the time you spend with your Fresh Air child, but I can promise you lots of laughter, squealing, singing, reading, hiking, dirty clothes on the floor, doors slamming, toys everywhere. In fact, it will be family living at its most real.

You may not do the weeding in your garden that you would were you alone for those two weeks. But I imagine you might have special help picking your beans, watering plants, or arranging exquisite bouquets of hand-picked wildflowers.

And, moving for a moment beyond household affairs, you might just have a day-long outing to an amusement park where you could ride the rides, get wet at the water games, eat tacos and ice cream for lunch, and hold hands in the parking lot to stay safe.

Fresh Air Fund holidays are for two weeks. But the relationships continue. I know of families who have welcomed back the same Fresh Air kids summer after summer. However, regardless of the amount of time spent, the effects of Fresh Air visits are forever. In a world in which so much goes on every day that is unjust, hurtful, and wrong, you can take part in something that is loving and good by sharing your life with a Fresh Air child.

To become part of this special community outreach please contact the Fresh Air Fund at: 1-800-367-0003 or visit their web sight at www.freshair.org. You may e-mail the Fresh Air Fund at freshair@freshair.org. In the Grantsville area, please call Mrs. Alice Orendorf at 301-245-4326.

Yours truly,

During the afternoon ceremony, MIEMSS presented its annual Stars of Life Awards which honor EMS personnel, citizens, and EMS programs statewide. Governor Robert Ehrlich Jr. assisted with the presentation.

Receiving the MIEMSS Director's Excellence in EMS Award were several EMS agencies in Garrett and Allegany counties. This award was presented for their response to the Interstate 68 crash near Finzel on May 23, 2003.

Those recognized were the Garrett County Emergency Operations Center, Eastern Garrett County Volunteer Fire and Rescue Department, Garrett County Fire/Rescue Association, Garrett County EMS Committee, Allegany County Emergency Operations Center, Allegany County Fire and Rescue Board, City of Cumberland Fire Department, Frostburg Area Ambulance Service, and Western Maryland Health System.

"The response to the massive crash scene, which involved 40 separate collisions, 80 vehicles, and lead to 70 injuries and two deaths, was overwhelming," said a MIEMSS spokesperson. "The Maryland EMS System came together, working effectively in one of the most rural areas of the state."

Only seven other counties and Baltimore City were presented with awards during the ceremony.

The EMS Awards presentation was held in conjunction with EMS Week 2004, May 16-22. This is a national celebration to honor approximately 750,000 EMS providers nationwide. This year the theme is "EMS: There When You Need Us," which emphasizes the "responsiveness and compassion of our EMS providers, whose timely and attentive intervention saves countless lives," noted the spokesperson.

Maryland has approximately 30,000 prehospital care providers, both career and volunteer, according to MIEMSS.

"Working as an emergency medical services provider is different from any other career you can have," said Dr. Robert R. Bass, executive director to MIEMSS. "You get tremendous satisfaction from helping others and knowing you have made a difference between life and death. Our Maryland EMS providers perform a vital service for the community."

TRANSITION

"Things are up in the air," we say when plans are not firm, when circumstances could go one way or the other. A person for whom things are always "up in the air" we might call an "airhead." There is a normal, and healthy, desire to be grounded. But grounded for what?

Gravity is terrific, but gravity six feet under is just a grave.

The beauty of both ballet and volleyball is that groundedness is a launch pad. The ballet dancer and volleyball player touch ground in order to push away from it.

A leap is an act both violent and graceful. It is an action that would not be possible without gravity. At the same time it is an act defying the law of gravity. Law is not the enemy of grace. In one sense, law makes grace possible. Grace is not possible without law, and law without grace is only a grave.

These ruminations follow from two momentous weeks in my life. Law and grace have played out in numerous ways. The more momentous event was becoming a grandfather last week. My second daughter took Mother's Day to heart, and began an easy labor that concluded in being delivered of a healthy baby girl in the wee hours of Monday morning.

Although a much less significant event in the broad sweep of my life, I successfully concluded my fourth semester of graduate studies at the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. Two days before my final exams I handed in my fourth and final term paper. I felt like one of the heroes in those movies about runners who collapse as they cross the finish line. The trouble was that I wasn't finished. There were still the finals to study for, but there was no mental energy to study for them.

During the same time frame, in a move that surprised as much as it pleased me, the director of my master's thesis approved my work, and instructed me to put it into final form. Things were up in the air.

Interspersed with those events were suppers with my other two children, a wide-ranging Mother's Day celebration, watching my son give his all to a volleyball game when he was obviously in pain, conversations with my 91-year-old great aunt who was paying a visit to her younger sister (my grandmother), mowing acres of ground in conservation programs, and overseeing my youngest nephew's mowing of my yard, as well as my own doing of the normal chores: laundry, washing dishes, sweeping the kitchen floor, and cleaning toilets.

I have also made enough time to stare out the window and to take walks, thereby to see bluebirds, a Baltimore oriole, catbirds, mockingbirds, blue jays, bobolinks, mourning doves, redwing blackbirds, English sparrows, far too many grackles, crows, geese, and a kestrel. There is a veritable symphony of birdsong outside my window. The birds too are often up in the air.

So, there is a sense in which "being up in the air" is just to say, "I am in transition – on the way from groundedness here to groundedness there."

Memory gathers from these current events, and brings forward recollections from the past. Thinking about my daughter having a baby and the birds singing, I recall one night a decade ago when she came crying late at night because there was a mockingbird outside her window, singing persistently and keeping her awake against all trying. Eleven years from now her daughter will be the same age as she was then.

Life is lived up in the air.

Today is the Feast of the Ascension. It is a big day for my Amish neighbors. More technological Christians have trouble knowing what to make of this solemn remembrance.

Even centuries ago painters struggled to add pictures of the Ascension to those of the more paintable birth and death of Christ. One approach was to show a pair of feet at the top of the picture being eyed by mystified disciples. My Amish neighbors don't have that problem either, since they are prudent iconoclasts.

Any image of a holy truth is necessarily wrong, but it is worth conjuring images to try to get some idea of what the holy truth is. I like to think of the Ascension as Christ up in the air. Obviously, I do not mean that in the sense of being indecisive or not knowing what he is doing.

I do mean, rather, Christ in transition, pushing off from the earth where his saving work is grounded, into purest grace. Christ is like a ballet dancer who leaps, and just keeps going.

The promise (I Thessalonians 4:17) is that it is there – up in the air – that one day we shall meet him. It may help us just a little, when life is more up in the air than we can quite manage, to think of it as a practice for big events still to come: up in the air.

north-south rivalry and have the high schools compete to see which students can achieve the highest usage rate. Each of the schools will be surveyed again before the end of the school year, and we will announce the winner sometime in June."

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimates that safety belts save the lives of more than 14,000 motorists each year, and save about $50 billion in medical care, lost productivity and other injury-related cost nationwide.

"Morning announcements promoting safety belts and explaining the competition will be made available to both schools next week," Lee said. "It's the perfect time to be promoting safety belt usage, since next week is the kick-off of the national "Click It or Ticket/Operation ABC (America Buckles Up Children) Mobilization," which runs from May 24 through June 6, 2004."

The high school safety belt competition is also a part of the Maryland Chief's Challenge Campaign, which is an effort to increase safety belt usage rates across the state through increased enforcement and public education.

In Maryland, an adult safety belt citation carries a $25 fine, and a child safety seat violation is a $48 fine. Police agencies will be increasing their enforcement of both laws during the Mobilization, which is the final event of the two-month Chief's Challenge Campaign.

Ham has been in the ministry for over 20 years as an evangelist, youth pastor, recording artist, and author. He has worked with "Youth With a Mission" in Central America, and while in college traveled with various outreach teams throughout Europe and with Barry Mayson in high school and prison ministries.

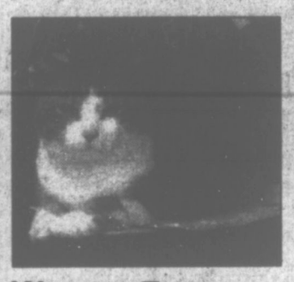
Ham has also served as youth pastor for two fast-growing churches in North Carolina, and now serves as president of Dan Ham International, overseeing three departments of outreach ministry: International Youth Ministries, Dan Ham Communications, and Hambone Records.

The evangelist will also be speaking at the Pleasant Valley Christian Academy graduation exercises, slated for 2 p.m. on May 23, also being held at the church.

Pastor Dan Winters and the congregation extend an invitation to the community to attend the concert.

Adorable Adoptables

YO, ROCKY – Looking for a new home this week is Rocky, a male border collie mix whose fur is not very long. He is excitable, but sat long enough to get this nice picture of him. He was given up by his owner who did not keep him contained on his property, so Rocky kept running around town. Also available for adoption from the Garrett County Animal Shelter is this large male black Lab that was picked up as a stray. "As you can see he wanted his tummy rubbed," said a Humane Society spokesperson. "He must have an owner somewhere, but the Lab wasn't wearing any tags, so he is up for adoption. Come meet him." Pictured below is a very friendly male beagle that was also picked up as a stray and Jade, an older male tabby who is neutered and declawed. He loves attention and to sit anywhere he wants. "Last week's featured dog, Buddy, was adopted, and in the nick of time," said the spokesperson. "The shelter was filled to capacity with dogs again by Monday. Remember, please do not adopt a pet if you don't have the time, space, or money to care for it. Almost 50 percent of the animals that come into our local shelter are owner give-ups." For more information, persons may call the shelter at 301-334-3553. Adoptable pets can also be found at Petfinder.com and on the adoption board at Wal-Mart.



Woman Faces DUI Charge After Car Overturns

A Delaware woman faces charges including driving under the influence (DUI) after her car overturned Tuesday evening on Interstate 68, according to the McHenry barrack of the Maryland State Police. She and her 8-year-old son sustained injuries that could have been more serious if they had not been wearing their seatbelts, the investigating trooper said.

At approximately 7:22 p.m., Gail Elizabeth Williams, 33, was operating a 1988 Oldsmobile sedan that began to hydroplane on the eastbound Interstate west of New Germany Road. The car traveled across three lanes of traffic, off the roadway, and hit an embankment before overturning.

Williams and her son were transported to Cumberland Memorial Hospital by the Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad. The Grantsville Volunteer Fire Department also responded to the crash site.

In addition to the DUI charge, Williams was cited for failure to control her speed.

New PAWS Web Site Offers Variety Of Pet Information

Partners for Animal Welfare and Safety (PAWS) has announced its new web site. Found at www.garrett-paws.org, the site will serve as a resource for area pet owners, a spokesperson said.

Visitors to the site will find an outline of PAWS education and spay/neuter assistance programs, as well as photos of major activities. Numerous links to local, state, and national agencies and organizations will provide information on many animal-related topics, from licensing requirements to health and behavior issues.

The site and many of its links provide information on animal cruelty, how it is defined, how to report it, and the connection between animal abuse and other forms of community violence. Occasionally, the site will feature animals available for adoption through PAWS, and will offer links to Petfinder and Pets911, two national adoption web sites where the Garrett County Animal Shelter and other area rescue organizations regularly post available pets.

Links to several humane education web sites for children are provided as well.

The web site is publicized on the new PAW posters, created by loc students, in an effort to pr mote shelter adoptions. (Se photos.)

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Glotfelty Sussman

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the lot owners of Bittinger Cemetery will be held Monday, May 31, at 11 a.m. at the Bittinger fire hall. Grantsville Post #214 will hold military services at the cemetery at approximately 12:30 p.m.

MY NOTES

Bittinger area residents are far too familiar with power outages, but it is unusual when our weather is just about perfect, with only a few clouds in the sky, little or no wind, and pleasantly warm to have our electricity shut down for almost two hours on Monday. The outage stretched from the far reaches of Peat Moss Road to at least downtown Bittinger. It is an inconvenience for a homeowner, but much worse for businesses like Buckel's Store who couldn't pump gas or use a cash register. But by 2 p.m. it came back on. Of course, it was no way as bad in May as during our eight-month-long winter season to be without heat as well as light and water. What a horror for our kids to have no TV, no computers, and almost no phone (unless their cell phone is fully charged).

Thank goodness I finally found someone to hang up my hummingbird feeder because I know they are around at least for the last couple weeks. If you do not provide them with a meal they will move on. Someone told me that they spotted hummingbirds on the ground trying to get some food from the tiny purple bell shaped blossoms of ground ivy. It would take quite a few of those little flowers to feed even one hummingbird. Now my feeder is very busy. It seems that is one of the favorite conversations of people around here. Both before St. John's Lutheran service and last Sunday service at Emmanuel I heard quite a lot of bird talk, including a sighting of a blue heron on Beachy's pond.

According to Kevin Dodge, who reported that he counted almost 90 species of birds in one day, we can assume around Bittinger there are about 100 species of birds.

My flock of barn swallows is back. It is nice to see them again after several months in South or Central America.

Also, Allison Buckel is home from her trip to Costa Rico. She had a fabulous time enjoying the beautiful scenery and their fabulous birds. She was only in Garrett County for one day before she had to rush to Baltimore for a close girlfriend's wedding.

We all are looking forward to the visit the first part of June by Lea (Stanton) and Michael Pochet of California. June is the perfect time to visit Bittinger. Nowhere is it as beautiful as Bittinger in June. Since our May was warmer than usual, one wildflower appeared a bit earlier. The pale lavender and white blossom of wild geraniums decorated our ready-to-cut hayfield. When I spotted a big patch in our hayfield, I couldn't resist driving out to pick a few, even though they have so many bitter-sweet memories for me involving my former husband.

The Bittinger ELCA Mother-Daughter banquet last Friday evening was a big success. About 80 mothers, daughters, and granddaughters enjoyed the luscious turkey dinner and group singing including one adaptation of "Down by the River Side" words composed by Lana Roby. We had a rousing performance of traditional mountain "clogging" by the Teets girls, Vicki, Nancy, and Judy, thumbing their noses at the idea that over 40 years old is "over the hill," as their skill and energy would make most teenagers and 20-something-year-olds envious. My daughters are inspired to learn how to clog.

My Claire and Caitlin had to leave somewhat early before the door prizes were awarded, as they were due at the 4-H camp for leadership training weekend. Still Claire won a prize, which was a lovely wood ornament made by Judy Simpson. Another door prize was won by my guest, Andrea Howe, which was a gift certificate for Brenneman's Store.

As I watched Vicki, Nancy, and Judy, I thought how odd that I have two sets of double second cousins. Besides Ken and Harriett Buckel's children, also the Teets girls are double second cousins of mine. I wonder if anyone else has six double second cousins. Perhaps it is a world record.

The parish-wide luncheon on Sunday afternoon featured selections of soup to please any taste, plus salads, sandwiches, and desserts. Meredith Vagnetti, who substituted for Rob, explained the "Angel Bells" mission. Rob was in Hagerstown watching Daniel play in the JUCO tournament, then they had to head to Philadelphia to continue in their effort to get dual citizenship with USA and Italy so Daniel can go through with his plan of playing baseball for a team in Italy. I can imagine the red tape that would be involved. Even the simplest task involving government "wrap" is more red tape than a whole Santa Claus bag's packages. That is how the American economy grows: producing more red tape and employing more workers to wrap everything in it, not to mention the additional sales of Tylenol and Advil for the ensuing headaches. The more visits you have to make, the more $2-per-gallon gas you burn, which is more tax for the federal government.

I am ashamed to admit that I did not do my duty to a beloved uncle and accompany Ruth DiPaolo, Rodney and Barry Glotfelty, and Carol Bass to a memorial service for my Uncle Donald Buckle in Madison, Va. He was so like my grandfather, Charles "Pop" Buckle, in appearance, personality, and character. They both loved to garden and were devoted to their families. The Buckle-Buckel reunion will never be the same since he is gone. The members of his previous Methodist church in Madison insisted on having a service there also, as they loved him as much as he was loved elsewhere. A previous memorial service was held in Roanoke where he resided.

Sunday afternoon was the only chance to spend time with my girls. Nothing is more important than that PAWS POSTER CONTEST WINNERS – Winners of the "I Found a Friend at the Animal Shelter" drawing contest, sponsored earlier this year by PAWS (Partners for Animal Welfare and Safety), were announced recently. Contestants (students in grades 1 to 5) were asked for pictures showing good things that happen when homeless pets are adopted from animal shelters. Four winning drawings were chosen from 138 entries. The four winners were put together into one poster, pictured above. Earning the first place prize for her drawing depicting lonely shelter cats and dogs and then the happiness both owners and animals share after a pet is adopted was fourth grader Rachel Frazee, Friendsville Elementary (above center). Second place was awarded to Kaitlin Engle, a second grader at Grantsville Elementary, for her cat drawing. Third place winner Erica Umbel (above left) drew a picture of the cat friends she has at home, and Lorren Snodgrass (above right), honorable mention, created a happy outdoor scene with her adopted cat named Fatty. Both girls are second graders at Friendsville Elementary. All winning artists were students of art teacher Carolyn Collen-DuBose, with whom Engle is pictured at right. PAWS and the Grantsville Library are planning a display of several other entries during June, which is National Adopt a Shelter Cat Month. More information about PAWS activities and efforts may be found at the organization's web site, located at www.garrettpaws.org.

to me now because I do not have them home with me for very long. That is a natural, but somewhat sad, aspect of parenthood. I never knew, when I was young and eager to see the world, how hard it must have been for my parents, or after seeing the world, I would return to the one lovely place, our family farm. Yes, I once again wish I could run away, but even if I did, I probably would return. That is how it always was. Even when I had fabulous times at the University of Maryland, most weekends I came home. Even when I lived a dream life work on Broadway in the "Big Apple," still I was always eager to come home because my roots were too deep in this rich clay soil here to easily be transplanted. Many classmates who settled down here without having left at all could not really know what we have here in our mountaintop homeland.

As I write this sentence, a rumbling thunder rolls across the tableland, and as my friend Walter Haydel once said, "Bittinger is where weather is born." The gentle misty rain of this morning turned into a downpour now. It is no wonder our weather changes so fast around here. It's because we are at the place where east meets west and north meets south. If it is true what Diane Sawyer said that Times Square is the "crossroads of the world," then I now am living in the "cross land of America." Some of this rain will run into the Mississippi River, some will run into the Potomac and then the Chesapeake Bay, and some will stay right here in our wetlands.

Our home also shared the most important historical movement in America, too. It was the first frontier and it was home of Native Americans fighting for their home. It has seen the utilization of our natural resources to fuel the growth of America. First was the cutting of the tall trees to become masts of big sailing ships. Then my ancestors were among the so-called "wood hicks." I once saw an old photograph titled "Jennings Wood Hicks" consisting of a logging crew posed with their team of horses.

Then our mountains yielded vital fuel for the growth of the industrial might. Coal was fuel for our closest big city, Pittsburgh. We were vital to the growth of Pittsburgh as the "Steel City." It is not just coal our mountains contributed to Steel City, but also our clay used for the fire brick for the steel furnaces.

There is a road called Fireclay Road down in the Casselman Valley near our biggest brick factory in Jennings. I am proud to say I worked there in the summer after graduating from college, so I have experienced industrial work as well as being a female who invaded a man's world.

However, it was not my cup of tea, and happily I found my first work in my major – the theatre. Although it was not as well paid, it was much more pleasant and fun. Most of the workers at the brick factory were not as lucky. When the steel industry began to have problems in the late 1970 and '80s, there was no new source of jobs for the men who depended on their factory job to support their family. At the same time our local industrial town, Cumberland, also experienced a downward trend.

America's growth as an industrial giant did not happen without some lasting changes in our home, nature, wild beauty, or character, with abandoned mines, gashes of quarry yielding limestone for our network of highways. As the metropolises of D.C. and Baltimore grew and became uncomfortably crowded, hoards of residents of the urban jungle yearned for a piece of our peace and beauty.

Deep Creek Lake is no longer "Maryland's Best Kept Secret." As one of the last pieces of wild country in the East, we still are at the front line of the battle between civilization and nature. We live in a place where subdivision development is beside country with bears, wild cats, and perhaps even a handful of mountain lions, and thousands of deer. The age-old question is "How much is too high a price to pay for progress?" We know we can't allow our city neighbors to decide that for everyone, especially not for us because it is our home which will change too much to bear.

I believe some kind of wild animal just ventured out of our woods into the pasture, as Boo is in quite a state. Besides her vigorous barking, the hair on her back is standing straight up.

In earlier times a large farm dog was not just a pet; it was a necessity. I never saw a bear within sight of my house, but I know they are out there on Meadow Mountain.

I know they can be a nuisance destroying bird feeders, bee hives, etc., and, of course, scary for parents with small children, but most people living around here have learned to adapt their lifestyles to accommodate our wild neighbors. I feel like nothing would be the same here without bears roaming in my beloved wild country adjacent to our farm. They are the link to our past, history, and pure nature. A bear sighting is something worthy to share with everyone you know. Sheila Southerly often comments that something she sees or hears proclaims to her that our environment is still reasonably healthy.

I can remember a time during my New York days when a hawk nested on a window ledge of one of the skyscrapers, and its progress was one of the hottest news subjects. I was homesick often in New York, true, but still sometimes I feel homesick for New York. Like today during "Good Morning America," I saw a mini-concert by Simon & Garfunkel. They were not just great popular music stars, they are from my generation. Paul Simon was part of my life while I lived in Manhattan. How lucky I was to be able to touch the greatest, as it was when I heard a mountain lion screaming in the night on Meadow Mountain.

I don't know where I really belong because I am still enough of a hillbilly to like to eat wild plants. I was delighted to find beautiful fiddlehead fern and included them in a Chinese stir fry dish I cooked for my daughters. One thing I loved so much about my neighborhood in New York was having every kind of cuisine imaginable readily available.

I know that Bittinger is not the only place in the world, or even sure it is the best place in the world, but it is home to me. They say that all writers have a love/hate relationship with their home. I cannot claim myself as a peer to someone like William Faulkner, who is in my opinion the greatest American writer, but all writers write trying to deal with the inner conflict they feel every minute of their lives. On the other hand, the curse of having an artist's heart and soul and the desire to possess the beauty is so elusive, and I want to paint today. I have to finish this now to get on with the other must-do jobs at hand to paint the strange soft multicolor of our mountains in a spring rain.

I only know one person so like myself who qualifies as my "twin soul" with me. Although I can reach and touch Betty Douglas via long distance phone calls, we have too many things to talk about to fit into a brief phone call. I guess when I write this column each week I not only write for someone from Bittinger, perhaps Sheila Southerly, or from Garrett County like my editor, Don Sincell. I guess I write as if Betty will read it. I included lots of things I need to tell her and discuss with her. No one else can really fully understand as we can.

I know I wrote too much, but it's what I do when I have so much to say. Each little bit is part of my overall design for this week. Probably some students thought during a class during the first week of April 1994 that I gave too much information too fast, and why not save some of it for the next class? Well, it turned out the next class did not come. You never know when it is almost too late to say what you need to say.

Sincere Thanks

The family of Thurman Nair would like to express their thanks for all the help received during Thurman's illness.

Special thanks to Ted & Dot Sisler, and John & Debbie Shaffer for all your visits and help.

Rev. Rogers Fike, Rev. Glen Nissley, Hinkle Funeral Home, the women of the Eglon Church of the Brethern for the lovely meal served, and thanks to Hospice for the care given during this time.

Words will never be able to express our thanks for all the cards, food, and phone calls.

Special thanks to the American Legion Post 71 for the graveside service.

THE FOLLOWING CORRESPONDENCE IS BEING SENT TO BUSINESSES, COMPANIES, PROFESSIONALS AND INDIVIDUALS. PLEASE ACT ON THIS REQUEST BY MAKING A DONATION TO CINDY'S FUND, P.O. BOX 656, OAKLAND, MD. THE MEMBERS OF CINDY'S FUND ARE ASKING ALL GARRETT COUNTIANS TO OPEN THEIR WALLETS AND HEARTS AND DONATE TO THIS WORTHY CAUSE TO DEFEAT CANCER IN GARRETT COUNTY.

May 12, 2004

Dear Sir or Madam:

This correspondence is a special request to you and to your company or organization from The Garrett County Cancer Coalition to participate in the support of Cindy's Fund. We apologize for the generic context of this letter but this appeal is to all Garrett Countians and businesses.

Cindy's Fund was created last year by the Garrett County Cancer Coalition in memory of Cindy Kutchman of Oakland, Maryland. We are members of the Coalition and had the pleasure of knowing Cindy. She was a wonderful person who combined her roles as wife, mother and active contributor to the civic life of Garrett County. She was trained as a registered nurse and cared for cancer patients. She then became a cancer victim herself at an early age. Her own heroic struggle against breast cancer lasted for a long time. During all that time, while she waged a ferocious battle against a remorseless disease, she remained a shining example of courage, hope and compassion for others. She finally lost her battle with cancer last year. Her death was a great loss, not just to her family and to her profession, but a loss to the entire community. One of her last wishes was that cancer screening be made available to as many residents of Garrett County as possible. Cindy well knew that, at present, the best way to defeat cancer is to detect it early. The Cindy's Fund was founded to do just that.

All donations to Cindy's Fund will be used in Garrett County to help to finance cancer screening programs in the community. Screening leads to early detection of cancer and early detection is the key to survival. It is clear that the one most important weapon we have against cancer is early detection. Cindy's Fund has already been successful in saving the lives of members of our community here in Garrett County. The program has brought screening to more than 300 underprivileged citizens and has promoted early screening for all of Garrett County's 30,000 citizens. During the first rounds of screening, multiple colon cancers, skin cancers and ovarian cancers have been discovered. Those affected now have a much better chance of survival with a much better quality of life. The program is specifically structured to provide for all Garrett Countians at a stage when cancer can be treated successfully.

If you or your company can make a donation it would be greatly appreciated. Individual donors have been contributing $350.00 while corporate donations have been greater. The Arts

HEADING HOME, AN ORIGINAL WATERCOLOR BY JUDY McCAUGHEY

GC Artist To Be Featured At Canal Place

"Small Treasures," a collection of miniature and small watercolor paintings by Garrett County artist Judy McCaughey, will be the featured display at the Arts at Canal Place Gallery from Monday, May 31, through Saturday, June 26. A public reception for the artist will be held on Saturday, June 5, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the gallery located in the Canal Place Heritage Area, Cumberland.

McCaughey, a former kindergarten teacher, moved to her home overlooking Deep Creek Lake in 2002.

"Before this last move, my husband and I moved to Columbia, Maryland, in 1991 from Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, retired from our jobs and became grandparents for the first time," she stated.

With time to explore new and old interests, McCaughey began to write stories for her grandchild. "These stories needed illustration, so I enrolled in a course on how to draw and paint and discovered watercolor," she added.

Her art studies have taken her to courses offered by the Howard County Recreation and Parks Department, the Columbia Art Center and the Touchstone Center for Crafts in Pennsylvania. During this past year McCaughey also had the opportunity to attend watercolor workshops with Linda Doll in Leroy Springs, S.C., and with Martha Mans in Baltimore.

"These instructors inspired me to experiment with new pigments and to try different watercolor techniques," she explained.

In an attempt to assimilate this fresh information, McCaughey began to experiment with glowing washes and bright colors on small pieces of watercolor paper.

"I felt freer trying something new on a small piece of paper," she said. "If it turned out to be a mess, it was only a small mess. When it worked, it was a treasure." Thus, the name of McCaughey's show, "Small Treasures," came into being.

In addition to her work at Arts at Canal Place, McCaughey's watercolors can be seen on display at the Artist's Gallery in Columbia, the Garrett County Arts Council Gallery, Oakland, and Rocky Gap Lodge, Cumberland.

The Arts at Canal Place Gallery is a program of the Allegany Arts Council. Gallery hours are Sunday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. For information on the show and the gallery, persons may contact AaCP by phone at 301-777-8199 or www.artsatcanalplace.com

The artist's reception and the gallery are free and open to the public.

NHS Saxophonist Set To Tour With The Continentals

Northern High School senior Michael P. Miller has been accepted for a 2½ month summer tour engagement as the tenor saxophonist for the Continental Brass and Singers.

The Continentals, based in Ventura, Calif., were formed in 1967 as a nonprofit, inter-denominational ministry. More information can be found at www.continentalsingers.org/about.htm.

Miller is a member of the award-winning Northern Garrett Husky marching band, under the direction of William Robinson, and has played saxophone since fourth grade. He will fly to Los Angeles the day after graduation to join the other musicians and vocalists for a weeklong rehearsal camp.

The group will then tour throughout the U.S. and also spend two weeks in Europe, visiting Germany, Switzerland, and Italy, before returning home in late August.

The Continentals will be performing locally at Miller's home church, Springs Mennonite Church, 1686 Spring Road, Springs, Pa., Monday evening, July 19. The performance is open to the public and all are welcome to attend.

For further information about the July 19 performance, persons may contact the Springs Mennonite Church at 814-662-4201. The complete tour schedule (Tour S) is online at www.continentalsingers.org/concerts.htm

Miller is the son of Pete and Karin Miller of Grantsville. He has also played AYSO soccer for the past 11 years, refereed for four years, and has been on the NHS track team for three years. He is a member of the Springs Mennonite Youth Fellowship and participates with Mt. Top Youth for Christ.

Miller plans to attend Allegany College of Maryland in the fall.

Highland Festival, Tourist Season To Kickoff With Gala

The Gala Celtic Kickoff Dinner and Concert will open the 17th annual McHenry Highland Festival and Garrett County's tourist season on Friday, June 4, at the Lodge at the Wisp in McHenry. Social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m., followed by the dinner. The concert is slated for 9 p.m.

"Many people think of Autumn Glory as the end of the season," said Karen Myers of the Wisp. "I look at this as a way to mark the beginning of the season. The Highland Festival board of directors was looking for ideas for a fundraiser, realizing that costs were continuing to rise in producing the annual event."

The profit from the evening will support both the McHenry Highland Festival and the purchase of new kilts for the Garrett College Pipes and Drums, the host band of the festival. The band is changing its uniform to the Colquhoun (Calhoun) tartan in honor of band member Fred Thayer, who was the first pipe major and founder of the band 25 years ago along with Chip Evans. Thayer wears the Colquhoun kilt in honor of his aunt who taught him to love Scottish music.

"This event is designed not only for local people, but for second homeowners and weekend visitors to Garrett County, as well," said Myers about the gala and festival.

The evening will offer a gourmet Celtic meal with entertainment. Party-goers will be encouraged to enjoy the variety of food and experience the whole Celtic theme. Three buffet tables will be available: one Scottish, one Irish, and one for American food. Also, a special whisky tasting will be available

"We are trying to have fun events to which people can invite their friends coming in for the weekend," said Myers.

"The expanded activities of the festival now make it possible to provide entertainment for an entire weekend" said festival coordinator Jerry McGee. People can choose what they want to do, buying tickets for individual events or for the weekend.

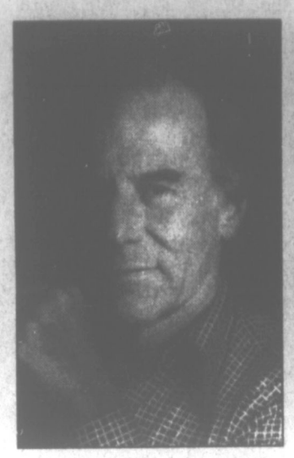
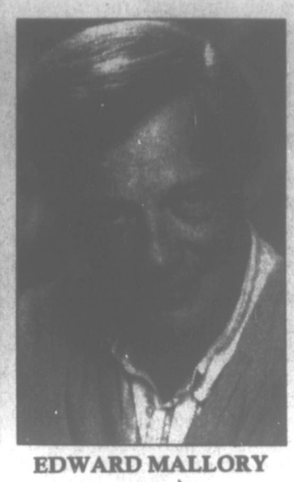
Emmy Award-Winning Producer To Be FSU Video Fair Guest Artist



H. WESLEY KENNEY



EDWARD MALLORY

Hollywood expertise will come to Frostburg State University this summer as the FSU Department of Mass Communication hosts a weeklong "Video Fair" from July 25 through August 1. The workshop will be an intense, hands-on experience in which participants can learn techniques of directing and acting for multiple and single cameras, used in shooting sitcoms and soap operas. Special guest artist for the fair is Hollywood producer-director and seven-time Emmy award winner H. Wesley Kenney.

Kenney was a director of the groundbreaking sitcom "All in the Family." He later directed several TV pilots, including the popular show 'The Jeffersons." He is best known in the industry for serving as executive producer and director of the popular daytime dramas "Days of our Lives," "General Hospital," and "The Young and the Restless," where he was honored by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences with seven Emmy awards for excellence. Kenney has been a professor with the UCLA Film and TV Department, where he teaches multiple-camera techniques.

The Video Fair is the brainchild of Dr. Robert Scott, chair of the FSU Department of Mass Communication, and Edward Mallory, FSU Artist in Residence.

Mallory's 15-year run as Dr. Bill Horton on "Days of our Lives" won him "Best Actor in Daytime" accolades by Daytime magazine in 1971 and 1972. Mallory also served as a director of "Days," and after leaving the show, he directed "The Young and the Restless," "General Hospital," "All My Children," "Rituals," "The Judge," and "Generations." He also produced many shows for the A&E network, including biographies of Joseph P. Kennedy and Hedda Hopper. Mallory, a native of Cumberland, has conducted classes in acting and directing for multiple camera for the Professional Artists Group in Hollywood. He is a resident of Garrett County.

"Directing for Camera" and "Acting for Camera" are the main focuses of the Video Fair. The program has been designed for directors who are interested in multiple-camera techniques and actors who will work in the selected scenes. All students in the "Directing for Camera" program will rotate from camera operators, cable pullers, technical directors, assistant directors, and directors, under the tutelage of Kenney. Both Kenney and Mallory will instruct the acting portion of the program.

All classes will be held in the Guild Center on the FSU campus. The FSU Cable TV-3 studio, a fully equipped studio with a booth and camera, will be the center for the session.

Tuition, room and board for the week is $850. Tuition without room and board is $450.

There will be screenings of videos related to the sessions and the final scenes of student directors will also be viewed and critiqued. A farewell party will be held on the final evening, and actors and directors will receive DVDs of their scenes, as well as certificates of participation.

"It will be a rewarding summer session," said Mallory. "Graduates will gain a valuable insight into the realities of 'big-time television.'"

For more information and registration, persons may call the FSU Department of Mass Communication at 301-687-3049.

GLAF To Offer Workshops For Actors, Artists

Garrett Lakes Arts Festival (GLAF) and the Sprenger-Lang Foundation will offer the Young Artists' and Young Actors' Summer Workshops for students entering 8th grade through graduating seniors. Both creative workshops will be held at Garrett College in McHenry during the month of July 2004.

Registration for these weeklong workshops is due by June 1. Scholarships are available upon request. For complete information and registration, persons may call the GLAF office at 301-387-3082.

The Young Artists' Summer Workshop will be held at Garrett College, Monday through Friday, July 12 to 16, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. This workshop is intended to inspire and nurture the student's natural ability.

Mark and Laura Stutzman will offer a rigorous course of study. They will introduce young artists to traditional wet and dry media and a variety of techniques in both color and black and white. Young artists will leave camp at week's end with a volume of work that includes still life, portraiture, and life drawing. Each of these areas of focus will be explored in 90-minute blocks with breaks, as well as constructive critiques of the work.

The goal of this workshop is to refine skills and to instill a greater confidence in visual expression, said a spokesperson. The week will culminate in a reception for workshop participants and their parents, featuring an exhibition of work completed.

Mark Stutzman is a graduate of the Art Institute of Pittsburgh with a degree in visual communications. He first worked in television producing "on air" art for KDKA-TV in the late '70s. He moved to Washington,

Actors Reminded Of OTT Auditions

Our Town Theatre will hold auditions for the play Precious Bane on Saturday, May 22, 1 to 5 p.m., and Sunday, May 23, 5 to 8 p.m. Performances are slated for July 7-11.

Preparation is not needed for the auditions, according to a theatre spokesperson, and acting experience is not necessary. Those wishing to audition should simply come prepared to read.

"I'm excited to see this play come to life," said Marianne Peracchio, director. "It's going to be a true community experience with parts for all ages."

The play requires women for two strong female leads, ages 16 to 25, and two older women between the ages of 40 and 70. Male leads include a part for a young man "tortured by ambition," Peracchio said, and an old wizard "driven by vengeance." There are numerous smaller parts for both men and women, she said.

"A bittersweet love story, Precious Bane explores the superstition of a 17th century small town through the eyes of a brave young woman," Peracchio said.

For more information, persons may call the theatre at 301-334-5640.

BOTH BAND BOOSTERS RECEIVE DONATION – The Garrett County Democratic Club recently held a bake sale at Browning's Foodland to benefit the Northern and Southern High School Band Booster organizations. The proceeds were divided equally with each band receiving a $100 donation. Betty Pritt, president, GCDC, is shown above presenting a check to Rodney Glotfelty, president, NHS Band Boosters. Other Band Booster members present, in the front from the left, are Julie Miller and Terry Fischer, vice president. In the back are Marci Glotfelty, Vernon Wampler, treasurer, Anna Miller, and William Robinson, NHS band director.

He is well known for the image he created for the 1992 Elvis Presley Commemorative Stamp.

Laura Stutzman graduated from Southern High School in Oakland and the Art Institute of Pittsburgh with a degree in visual communications. She first began working for the Pittsburgh Press in its promotion department. She then moved to Washington, D.C., and worked in advertising as an illustrator and designer.

In 1982, Laura began a freelance business. She and Mark share their own studio, Eloqui. Her client list includes PBS, MCI, CBS, Simon & Schuster, National Geographic, Time/Life Books, and the U.S. Mint.

The Young Actors' Summer Workshop will take place at the Garrett College Auditorium, July 26 to 30, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Through the use of improvisation and students' imaginations the workshop gives the basic foundation any good actor should have, said a spokesperson. From character creation and development (using physical and vocal training techniques) to storytelling to ensemble building, the workshop is designed to broaden each student's theatrical palate.

Instructors Vanessa Thomas and Kelly Gardner will guide the students on how to use their palates to create original performance pieces for themselves and their communities.

Vanessa Thomas is a founding partner of the Medusa Speaks Artists' Collective. She is an interdisciplinary artist who is constantly exploring intersections of different forms of expression. Her work strives to integrate all of her audience's senses, emotions, and dimensions.

She studied at George Washington University with Leslie Jacobson, founder and artistic director of Horizon Theater. Thomas has danced with Chuck Davis of African American Dance Ensemble and Assane Konte of Kankouran. Most recently she directed That Takes Ovaries in conjunction with Medusa Speaks as part of Horizons Theatre. Her other work includes the role of Tituba in Rebecca Rice's Ecstasy and Thought Woman, in the Living Stage production of Oceans.

Kelly Gardner is an actor and director who has performed on stages throughout the D.C. area while directing performances for organizations such as the Library of Congress and Washington Revels. Arts Council's Individual Artist Award, has worked closely with such contemporary American composers as George Rochberg, Stephen Paulus, and Emma Lou Diemer.

Scott Pappal is a member of the Altoona and Johnstown symphony orchestras and the Laurel Brass Quintet. Jennifer Pappal performs regularly as first violin with the Altoona and Johnstown symphony orchestras and is very active in the central Pennsylvania area as a freelance violinist.

Pianist Gila Goldstein returns to Penn Alps on June 12 from New York City after performing in the 2002 Music at Penn Alps International Piano Festival. Her CD of piano works by Israel's leading composer, Paul Ben-Haim, is a significant addition to the few commercial CDs available of Israeli classical music.

Her appearances include those at Merkin Concert Hall, the 10th London International Jewish Music Festival, the Gardner Museum, the Israeli Embassy, the Musée de Louvre, and the Tel-Aviv Museum. A native of Israel, she serves on the faculty of the Choir Academy of Harlem and has performed with the Boys Choir of Harlem.

This concert is being underwritten by the Irene and Peter Halmos Foundation.

On June 19, tenor Michael Forest of Winchester, Va., joins soprano Máire O'Brien and pianist Mark Riggleman, an Ellerslie native, for an evening of song at Penn Alps.

Forest, in nine seasons with the Metropolitan Opera, has frequently appeared as a soloist at the Kennedy Center with the Choral Arts Society of Washington and the Washington Chorus. O'Brien has sung with the New York City Opera, the Aspen Music Festival, the Baltimore Opera and the Washington Chorus at the Kennedy Center.

Riggleman is music director of the 92nd Street Y Music School in New York City and performs as a soloist and accompanist in New York, Europe, and throughout the United States.

The evening before Independence Day, Newberry's Victorian Cornet Band recreates the sounds of the American small-town band popular in the late 1800s.

Modeled after the bands that once played regularly in quaint outdoor bandstands scattered throughout America, this one-of-a-kind ensemble is composed of professional brass musicians from Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and New Jersey who specialize in playing historic instruments. The band's repertoire includes marches, serenades, songs, and opera arias popular during the Victorian era.

Russian-born Ilya Finkelshteyn, principal cello of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, performs with pianist Enrico Elisi on July 10.

He is a former member of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and graduate of the St. Petersburg Conservatory and the Juilliard School. His awards include those of the Juilliard Concerto Competition, Russian Cello Competition, and Chautauqua Concerto Competition. Other appearances include the Aspen, Marlboro and Peninsula music festivals.

Accompanying him is Enrico Elisi, a graduate of the Conservatory in Florence and International Piano Academy of Imola. He was a teaching assistant for Leon Fleisher at the Peabody Conservatory, where he earned his master's and doctoral degrees.

The Grammy-nominated Eaken Trio performs on July 17. The trio recently marked its 16th season of critically acclaimed concert appearances across the United States, Europe, and Canada.

Its members are John Eaken, violin; Andrew Rammon, cello and Gloria Whitney, piano. The ensemble has recorded under the Naxos and Catalpa Classics labels and is heard regularly on National Public Radio's Performance Today and All Things Considered.

In residence at Dickinson College from 1991 to 2000, the trio continues to provide residencies through a program recognized by Chamber Music America as one of the five most successful in the country.

The Merling Trio, slated for a July 24 appearance, brings together musicians from Polish, Japanese, and Dutch backgrounds. Violinist Renata Artman Knific, cellist Bruce Uchimura and pianist Susan Wiersma Uchimura made their debut as the Merling Trio in Weill Recital Hall at Carnegie Hall in 1993.

They have collaborated with orchestras under the batons of such notable conductors as Simon Rattle and Daniel Barenboim. The trio is now in residence at Western Michigan University. Bassist Tom Knific, a faculty member of Western Michigan U., will join the trio for this evening's performance of a composition commissioned by the Merling Trio.

On Aug. 7, the Ceciliana Quartet performs what they call nuove musiche: new music of the past. Formed in 2002, the quartet specializes in works for two sopranos and continuo from the late Renaissance through Baroque period.

Its members are recent graduates of the Peabody Institute, and include sopranos Ah Hong and Sarah Berger, Daniel Rippe on viola da gamba and guest harpsichordist Bozena Jedrzejczak Brown.

Hong, the winner of a Maryland State Arts Council 2004 Individual Artist Award in Solo Vocal Performance, teaches voice at Towson University. Berger is an Oberlin graduate who has completed postgraduate study at the Royal Academy of Music. Rippe is the recipient of a Maryland State Arts Council 2004 Individual Artist Award in Solo Instrumental Performance. Brown is a graduate of the Warsaw Conservatory of Music.

Violinist Ricardo Cyncynates, assistant concertmaster of the National Symphony Orchestra, joins pianist Anna Balakerskaia for an evening with the classics on Aug. 14.

Born in Brazil, Cyncynates assumed his post under the baton of Mstislav Rostropovic in 1987. He has performed extensively as soloist, recitalist and chamber musician. Balakerskaia, a native of Russia, is a three-time winner of the Best Accompaniment Diploma from the International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow. An adjunct artist professor at George Mason University, she teaches at the Levine School of Music.

In a change of pace, Tony Ellis and his band, the Musicians of Braeburn, bring "Appalachian Eloquence" to the Great Hall on Aug. 21.

Their eclectic repertoire draws from the Appalachian and Celtic traditions, with traditional songs and original music written in the same vein. Ellis has played at the Grand Ole Opry with Bill Monroe, and his music has been featured in numerous television productions, including Ken Burns's Baseball for PBS.

Rams Given Early Playoff Exit By Boonsboro, 6-2

An early and unexpected end to the 2004 season of the Southern High School baseball team arrived Monday afternoon when the Rams, ranked #1 in the 1A West Region, were upset by a sub-.500 Boonsboro squad, 6-2, in a quarterfinal game played on the Warriors' diamond.

The Rams came into the contest with an overall record of 17-1, while the Warriors had a modest 9-12 mark. Boonsboro had knocked off Westmar, 7-2, in an opening round contest last Friday.

The normally hard-hitting Rams were held to a grand total of two hits off Boonsboro's Craig Henson, who got credit for the win. He was relieved in the final inning by Jay Love, who gave up no hits.

Senior lefthander Chris Smith started on the mound for the Rams, but got into trouble right off the bat, as Alex Malphrus, Corey Robinson, and Jay Love all drew walks. Cody Poffenberger then brought home Malphrus and Robinson with a single, and Brandon Painter drew yet another walk to reload the bases.

Matt Fortese followed with a two-run single, and the fifth run was recorded via a single by Justin Baylor.

The Warriors made it 6-0 with another run in the bottom of the second when Love hit a bloop single following a walk and an error.

With the bases still loaded in the second, Smith was relieved by junior Scott Wildesen, who went the rest of the way, allowing no more runs and only two singles.

However, the only at-bat of the Rams that generated any runs was the top of the third inning. Smith and Brad Reese drew back-to-back walks, and Travis Friend loaded the bases when he was hit by a pitch. Billy Reams followed with a two-run double.

Reams also hit a single to account for the Rams' other hit.

Love finished with three singles to pace the Warriors' seven-hit performance.

In his six innings on the mound, Henson struck out eight and walked just two.

Boonsboro advanced to yesterday's region semifinal game against visiting Beall.

GARRETT NETTERS MAKE A RACKET AT BI-COUNTY – The Bi-County High School Tennis Championship Tournament was played Friday and Saturday in Cumberland, and the girls' doubles competition came down to a finals match between the Northern and Southern High duos. The NHS girls' doubles team of Miriah Fletcher/Amy Brenneman downed the Southern doubles squad of Justine Pagenhardt/Sabrina Scheffel, 6-4, 7-5, to become the only Garrett entry to gain a berth in tomorrow's West Region Tourney in Hagerstown. It was one of the most evenly played matches of the year for both tandems. Other local players who turned in fine showings in the Bi-County were NHS's Zach Bruch and SHS's Sabrina Scheffel, who advanced to the boys' and girls' singles semifinals, respectively. Northern's mixed doubles team of Bruch/Becca Stark just missed the crown in a finals match that went down to a tie breaker before the Husky duo lost, 9-8 (7-5). Northern Softball Squad Falls As Beall Ace Hurls Two-Hitter

The Northern High School girls' varsity softball team drew a tough opening assignment in the Maryland Class 1A West Region playoffs Friday, and the Huskies were eliminated in a 12-0 loss at the hands of host Beall. The Spartans' powerhouse offense cranked out 13 hits, while Beall ace Kate Rephann tossed a two-hit complete-game shutout.

NHS fell behind early and hard, as the hosts romped to five runs in the first inning and four in the second stanza. Beall added three more runs in the fourth on its way to the win.

The Spartans were paced at the plate by Kacey Kahl, who ripped a home run, triple, and single to send home three runs. Whitney Wilson cranked out a pair of triples and had one RBI.

Senior Lyndsi Butler and sophomore Kayla Kipp singled to account for Northern's two hits.

Rephann narrowly missed a perfect game as Butler and Kipp were the only Huskies to reach base. The Beall hurler whiffed six batters and did not issue a single walk.

The Spartans went on to down Hancock, 4-2, in a West Region quarterfinal battle Monday to improve to a 14-2 mark. Beall will host Williamsport this afternoon in the region semifinals.

AFTER A CLEMENTE-LIKE THROW by Northern High School varsity rightfielder Jason Rice, Husky third baseman Darrick Lowdermilk, above, is shown putting the tag on a Smithsburg runner in Monday's 5-1 West Region playoff loss in Accident. The big play came in the fourth inning with no outs, as the Leopards' Jerry Spessard, who will be playing baseball for the University of Maryland next season, tried to advance to third on a deep fly ball to right. Rice gathered the ball in and fired off a shot that rocketed across the diamond, without a bounce, to hit Lowdermilk's glove dead center. NHS starting pitcher Torrey Poholsky is pictured below firing a pitch plateward. The senior southpaw recorded nine strikeouts in six innings of work. Northern's season concluded at an excellent 13-6 mark. Photos by John McEwen.

NHS' s Missed Chances Sink Playoff Hopes In 5-1 Defeat

A case of missed opportunities sank the hopes of the Northern High School varsity baseball team during a 5-1 loss to visiting Smithsburg in Monday's Class 1A West Region quarterfinal playoff game. The Huskies left a number of runners on base during the contest, but only had one run to show for their efforts against the Leopards, who brought an 8-9 record into the postseason battle.

"It was a very evenly matched game, although we didn't get off to a good start as we were a little rusty after nine days off since our last game," NHS coach Phil Carr commented. "We practiced a lot, but it's hard to practice with a game's speed and under game conditions. We had a number of big opportunities, but just couldn't cash in the way Smithsburg did."

Smithsburg struck early, as in the leadoff inning the Leopards' Joe Acre singled, Gerry Spessard doubled, and then both scored on an infield error. T.J. Bowser doubled in another run later in the same stanza to put the guests up 3-0.

NHS responded in the bottom half of the first as Preston Sisler drew a walk, advanced to second on a sacrifice, then scampered home on Derek Workman's RBI double.

The score remained at 3-1 until the top of the third, when Husky ace Torrey Poholsky walked Smithsburg leadoff batter Wayne Rumbaugh and gave up a single to Bowser that put runners on first and second. Chad Ruppert then singled in Rumbaugh, and Drew Crawford sent Bowser home with a run-scoring single to give the guests a 5-1 advantage.

Nathan Steelman and Wayne Rumbaugh; Torrey Poholsky, Jason Rice (7) and Chad Carr.

The Huskies, who put their leadoff batter on base in each of the first three stanzas with only one run to show for it, missed a major scoring opportunity in the bottom of the third. With no outs showing, Sisler and Poholsky were perched on first and second when Eric Johnson took a questionable third strike call, and Workman grounded out to the middle as the runners both advanced into scoring position. Smithsburg pitcher Nathan Steelman finished his way out of the jam by whiffing NHS's Chad Carr, who went down swinging.

The fifth inning presented another chance for Northern to crack the scoreboard, but again it didn't happen. Sisler started the stanza off with a single before Poholsky flied out to center. Johnson walked, then Steelman struck out Workman before Carr drew a walk to load the bases with Huskies and two outs showing. The rally was nipped in the bud when NHS power hitter Danny Ellis pulled what looked to be a sure extra-base hit down the rightfield line; however, Leopard first baseman Ruppert, who was hugging the line behind the runner, only had to lift his glove a matter of inches to snag the line drive and end the stanza.

"Danny's rip was the hardest-hit ball of the day," Coach Carr said later. "It was really unfortunate, but just one of those things, that it went right at the fielder. If it had gone two feet either way, we would have scored three runs right there."

The stars continued in their misalignment for NHS in the sixth inning, which began with a walk drawn by the Huskies' Darrick Lowdermilk. Mike Bergstrom then hit a grounder to first that Ruppert scooped up before stepping on the bag for a double play. Jason Rice and Sisler then took first and second on consecutive base on balls, but Steelman got Poholsky to ground out to second.

Rice came to the mound in the top of the seventh and retired the side, striking out one batter in the process. However, Northern's season came to an end, despite an excellent 13-6 overall record, after a scoreless bottom half of the stanza.

The Leopards' Steelman worked a complete-game victory, giving up just six singles and striking out eight Huskies. Sisler singled twice for NHS. Poholsky whiffed nine Smithsburg batters in his six innings of work, while giving up nine hits along the way.

"It's certainly no excuse, but Smithsburg plays in the extremely tough Monocacy Valley League against the likes of North Hagerstown, Williamsport, and Catoctin," Coach Carr said afterward. "Any team in that league is going to be better than their record indicates, and Smithsburg proved it."

Smithsburg (9-9) takes on Williamsport this afternoon.

"Sure it's disappointing to lose, especially when we feel we helped the other team beat us," Carr said. "We're going to lose some major lynchpins to graduation this year, both on offense and defense," said Carr, "but we also have a number of strong players coming back and some junior varsity players coming up.

"It's been an excellent year throughout the Northern baseball program, from the kids right up through the coaching staff, parents, volunteers, and financial supporters. I'd like to personally thank everyone who helped in our success."

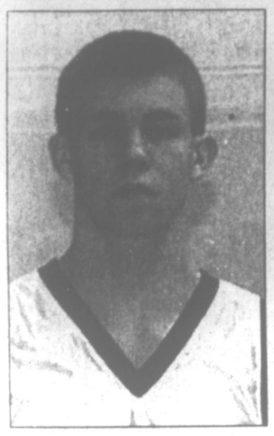
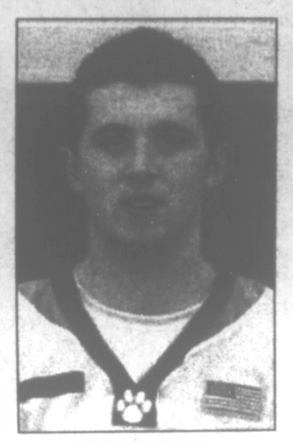
Corey Tressler Named First-Team All-Area; Rice Also WMIL Pick



COREY TRESSLER



JASON RICE

Corey Tressler, a 6-2 junior forward who led the Southern High School boys' varsity to another winning season this past year, was named to the first-team All-Area squad by a recent vote of area coaches.

Tressler was the second highest vote getter, finishing behind only senior Ian Grady, who was voted the All-Area Player of the Year.

Tressler was also named, along with Northern High's Jason Rice, to the first-team All-Western Maryland Interscholastic League squad. Rice also received All-Area honorable mention, as did Tressler's teammate Cory Bosley.

Brent Beachy of Northern and Bosley were All-WMIL honorable mention picks.

Joining Tressler and Grady on the All-Area first team are Jason Lee of Westmar, Allegany's Donavin Vinson, and Tyler Sherman of Moorefield, all seniors.

Rounding out the All-WMIL first team are Allegany's Vinson, Lee of Westmar, and Fort Hill's Denny Hockman.

Tressler, whose brother Dennis was the Area and WMIL Player of the Year last season, averaged just under 17 points and 6.5 rebounds per game this past season, and shot nearly 77% from the foul line (106 for 138). In three post-season games, he averaged 22.6 points per game, and recorded a season-high 28 points in a 60-42 win over Poolesville. He also grabbed eight rebounds in that contest.

In WMIL games, Tressler turned in a 17.6 scoring average, second only to Grady's 24.6 pace-setting mark. He was also the league's top free-throw specialist, making good on 50 of 55 attempts for a stellar 91 percent, one of the best marks in WMIL history.

"Corey was probably the most improved player in the area this year," Ram coach Tom Bosley said, "and as his game improved, his confidence grew. He's a player who enjoys challenges, and he has a great passion for the game, which is why he just keeps getting better and better.

"Last season Corey was our sixth man," Bosley continued. "This year, he was the one we looked to to lead us in scoring every game. We wanted him to have the ball when we really needed a bucket."

Bosley said that Tressler was dependable from both outside and underneath.

"He can hit the outside shot, but he really took the ball to the hoop better and better throughout the season," he said.

"Corey is solid defensively as well. I'm sure he will continue to improve both offensively and defensively next year," Bosley concluded.

Tressler is the sixth first-team All-Area pick in the past six years for the Rams. Others were: Mike Paesani, 1999; Nathaniel Panther, 2000; Bryan Panther, 2001; Chad Panther, 2002; and Corey's brother Dennis, 2003.

Northern's Rice, known for his own shooting touch, turned in an eighth-place 12.2 ppg for the Huskies, who finished 1-9 in WMIL play and 10-13 overall. The 6-3 senior forward was second in the league's three-point-goal column with 15 treys in seven games, an average of 2.14 per outing.

Lakers Fall To Catamounts In Region XX Title Series

Despite finishing the regular season with a modest 15-17 record, the Garrett College baseball team battled its way into the championship round of the Region XX Division I tournament, only to lost the title to Potomac State College Sunday afternoon.

The Lakers lost to the Catamounts, 6-3, in Saturday's round-robin format, but then eliminated Hagerstown from the tournament with a 7-2 victory, since Potomac State also topped the Hawks, 3-1. That set the stage for a title playoff between Garrett and Potomac State for Sunday.

Had the Catamounts won the first game on Sunday, it would have been all over, but the Lakers took the first contest, 7-4, which forced a third and final game. But Garrett was hammered, 18-5, in that deciding game, giving the Cats (28-18) the championship.

In Saturday's game against Potomac State, the Lakers spotted the Cats three runs in the first inning, and they had 5-1 advantage after three innings. After falling behind 6-1, the Lakers rallied for two runs in the top of the eighth, but could get no closer.

Tobi Stoner went the distance and took the loss, giving up seven hits. Those included a double and a single by Justin Dailey, and two singles each by David Toth and Jeff Miller.

Pitching for Potomac State were Scott McCormick and Bill Malaney, who also allowed a total of seven hits. Greg Whittemore rapped a pair of doubles for one RBI for the Lakers, while Jarod Bennis added a double and a single, and drove in two runs.

Details of the Laker win over Hagerstown were not received.

Freshman Ron Whiting provided the big bat for the Lakers in Sunday's first game against the Cats, as he smacked a double and two singles. Stoner provided two singles, as Garrett recorded a total of 12 hits.

The Lakers scored on run in the first, three in the second, and one in the fifth to take a 5-0 advantage, and then held off the Cats in the later innings.

Recording two singles apiece in PSC's nine-hit effort were Brent Lockhart and Ryan Anderson.

The Catamounts hammered three Laker pitchers in the championship game, finishing with 23 hits. The Lakers had a brief 1-0 lead after the first half-inning of play, but Potomac State took the lead for good in the bottom of that inning with three runs. The Cats led by a commanding 11-2 margin after just three complete innings.

Bill Malaney went the nine-inning distance for the Cats, giving up nine hits, striking out nine batters, and issuing no walks. The PSC defense also played errorless ball.

Dailey hit four singles for PSC, Jeff Miller provided a triple and two singles, and J.T. Osburn and John Hawse each singled three times.

Multiple hitters for Garrett were Whittemore and Nic Morris, each with two singles.

The Catamounts will travel to Dobson, N.C., this Friday to compete in the Eastern District Tournament, which will be hosted by Surry Community College.

TROY

Rated R - Running Time: 2:43 - Released 5/14/04

One would think that Troy, Wolfgang Peterson's huge-budget epic about the Trojan War that is based on Homer's The Iliad, would seem like ancient history. I mean, it is ancient history—The Iliad is one of the oldest stories ever written. But then I saw the plot: A selfish and petty political leader takes his country to war for spite, sending thousands to die so that he may gain power, put his name in the history books, and settle some silly score between him and another ruler. Jeez, that's exactly what's going on right now! Unfortunately, although the film's visual elements and special effects reveal the traditionally obscene excess in Hollywood blockbuster movies, the screen adaptation, by David Benioff, and most of the acting in Troy is not much smarter than the rhetoric that is being spouted on the TV news every day from our own golden ruler. I suppose art imitates life after all.

As the film begins in the year 1193 B.C., we learn that Greece, the then-predominant world power ruled by the egotistical and obnoxious King Agamemnon (Brian Cox), has had ongoing tensions with Troy, the city across the Aegean Sea ruled by King Priam (Peter O'Toole), who bears a striking resemblance to Lawrence of Arabia. But the two powers have recently come to an accord, and it looks like there's going to be peace at last. Which is a disappointment to Agamemnon, because he hasn't yet gotten the chance to use his ace-in-the-hole, his greatest soldier, his angry, argumentative primadonna of a general, the legendary, purportedly unkillable Achilles (Brad Pitt), against the Trojans. I mean, what's the fun of ongoing tensions if you can't sic your biggest dog on the enemy?

But that problem is soon solved, because during the Trojans' diplomatic visit to the Greek city of Sparta, Priam's younger son Paris (Orlando Bloom) falls in love with this local chick named Helen (Diane Kruger), who happens to be the wife of the Spartan ruler Menelaus (Brendan Gleeson). So when Paris and his big brother Hector (Eric Bana), who is the Trojan version of the super-warrior thought to be Achilles' equal, leave for home, Paris smuggles Helen on board with him. And wouldn't you know it, Menelaus notices she's not there at dinner that evening...I mean after all, she has the face that launched a thousand ships. And in fact, that's exactly what it does—Menelaus goes to Agamemnon, who never really wanted peace with Troy anyway, and they fire up the armada and head gleefully off to Troy in hot pursuit.

Although Menelaus's only reason for declaring war is to get his wife back, Agamemnon really wants to defeat Troy so he can become its ruler, so when the Greeks land at the beach, a huge battle breaks out. Before you know it (or, more accurately, long after you wished the movie were over and you were on your way home), Achilles and Hector match up for the ancient equivalent of the WWE Smackdown of the Century, to settle once and for all who gets Helen, who gets Troy, and who in the audience gets the sorest behind.

I don't know if German-born director Petersen, whose more recent credits include Outbreak, Air Force One, and The Perfect Storm, and writer Benioff, who broke onto the scene two years ago with the Spike Lee-directed adaptation of his own novel 25th Hour, intended for this to be a tribute to those extremely expensive, showy, and badly acted classics of the 1960s like The Ten Commandments and Ben-Hur, or whether it happened by accident. But this movie makes it look like there haven't been any advances in dialogue and acting technique since Charlton Heston's day. The writing is pedestrian, bloodless, artless...the lines are stilted and unconvincing...and the acting, astoundingly, matches. The fact that all these actors have proven they have immense talent in the past points the blame squarely at the writer and director. There is hardly a line in this movie which sounds believable, and that's a shame because the movie is ALMOST THREE HOURS LONG!

It would be nice if I could at least say the action sequences are realistic, or intense, or exciting. But with a few exceptions, they're mainly just long, loud, and boring. Thousands of soldiers jumping around, hacking away at each other with their plastic helmets and toy swords from Wal-Mart, is okay for a little while, but I've seen comparable acting in my own back yard, and the actors were only 9 years old.

Not everything about this movie failed. It is a beautiful, epic film, rich with period accoutrements and pretty faces. The sets are glorious, James Horner's music is beautiful, and some of the actors, like Cox and O'Toole, at least try to make their dialogue sound realistic. Ditto for Lord Of The Rings vet Sean Bean, who plays Achilles' pal Odysseus with some cred. But Pitt is nothing more than a pretty boy in a leather skirt. He fades in and out of his British accent like Princess Leia in Star Wars. Why should he have a British accent anyway? I kept imagining O'Toole saying to himself "What is he doing?" Bana and Bloom are adequate, nothing more. And Kruger—well, she definitely has the face, let's put it that way.

I can't help but think that if Homer were alive to see his great work treated in such a way, he would be forced to utter that great quote he is known for: "D-ohhh!" ★★½

Different Types of Respiratory Infections

During springtime, when our respiratory systems are being challenged with pollen and other allergens, respiratory infections are more likely in some people. A common cold is usually the result of a virus invading the sinuses. After starting with a scratchy, sore throat, symptoms may then progress to a runny or stopped up nose and end with a cough. Infection caused by the influenza virus produces symptoms that are often confused with that of a common cold. Although the flu may start with a sore throat, thin nasal discharge, and dry cough, it usually progresses to include other symptoms such as headache, body aches, red eyes, and fever.

Pneumonia is an inflammation of the lungs and the breathing passages leading to them. Pneumonia often starts with a cough then progresses to a high fever accompanied by shaking chills, sweating, chest pain, muscle pain, and fatigue. Antibiotics are usually prescribed for pneumonia caused by bacteria. In some cases, prescription cough syrups are needed as well.

cians with connections to the St. Petersburg Conservatory was formed to explore and popularize Russian choral music.

Its members – choir conductors, opera singers, instrumentalists and teachers – are united by their passion for ensemble singing. Lyra's eclectic repertoire ranges from ancient songs of the Orthodox Church to works by the Russian masters to folk songs to selections from operas, while retaining a focus on works by composers of their native land.

Although the full choir consists of about 25 singers, Lyra usually performs in small groups of five or six people selected to maintain the harmony of the choral sound.

Virginia Man Arrested On Drug Charges

A Front Royal, Va., man was arrested on drug charges after his vehicle was stopped on Garrett Highway north of Gravelly Run Road for an equipment violation early Saturday morning, according to Garrett County sheriff's deputies.

Ralph Fortune, 54, was charged with two counts of possession of cocaine, two counts of possession of marijuana, and two counts of CDS paraphernalia.

In other police news, Connie Sue Hebb, Thomas, W.Va., was cited for failure to control speed to avoid a collision after her vehicle was involved in a three-vehicle mishap Saturday.

A vehicle operated by Jean Pierre Feuillet, Damascus, was stopped at the intersection of Garrett Highway and Mansfield Road attempting to make a right turn. A vehicle driven by Paul Chew of Harman, W.Va., was stopped behind him.

Hebb's vehicle struck the rear of Chew's vehicle causing it to hit the trailer being pulled by Feuillet's vehicle.

No injuries occurred in the noon accident.

Juvenile Slightly Injured In Car-Bicycle Collision

A Friendsville juvenile was slightly injured Saturday afternoon when the bicycle he was riding struck a car on Maple Street. Charges are pending against the driver of the automobile, according to Maryland State Police troopers who investigated the 2:53 p.m. incident.

The police report stated that Sabrina Danielle White, 26, Friendsville, was traveling east on Maple Street, east of First Avenue, when she "observed a boy on a bicycle traveling westbound...coming right at her." White swerved her 2001 Dodge Neon to the left across the center line to avoid hitting the juvenile, but he "also swerved across the center line and they both subsequently struck head on."

The 8-year-old bicycle rider, who was deemed not at fault, reportedly sustained minor injuries and was transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital by the Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad. The Friendsville Volunteer Fire Department also responded to the accident scene.

The MSP report listed White's failure to give full time and attention to her driving and failure to keep right of center as contributing factors in the collision.

Southern GC Rescue Squad Slates "EMS Day In The Park"

The Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad, in cooperation with local fire departments and the sheriff's office, will observe Emergency Medical Services Week, May 16-22, with "EMS Day in the Park." The event will take place in Broadford Park on Saturday, May 22, from 1 until 4 p.m. The public is encouraged to attend this free event.

"We are planning this day at the park to cater to kids and their parents," noted an event spokesperson. "There are so many reasons that children should be aware of EMS providers and of the important services they provide. We are planning an afternoon full of fun and learning for the kids."

Free helium balloons, coloring books, pencils, stickers, temporary tattoos, and helmets will be given out to the children. Ambulances, fire trucks, and a police car will also be displayed during the event.

"Our units will be out and open for anyone in attendance to look through," said the spokesperson. "Children will have the opportunity to spray the fire hose."

Additionally, Linda Lewis of the Garrett County Health Department will conduct safety seat checks from 1 until 3 p.m., and emergency medical technicians will be available to take blood pressures throughout the day.

National EMS Week 2004 brings together local communities and medical personnel to publicize safety and honor the dedication of those who provide the day-to-day lifesaving services of the medical "front line." EMS Week celebrations will also be held in conjunction with National Emergency Medical Services for Children (EMSC) Day, May 19.

The theme of this year's EMS Week – "EMS: There When You Need Us" – "focuses on the commitment and dedication of the paramedics, emergency medical technicians, first responders, fire fighters, and police who provide an essential community service every day," noted the spokesperson.

CELEBRATING JOIN HANDS DAY – Several local groups recently met to celebrate Join Hands Day, a national day of volunteer service. WOW Lodge 45, the Friendsville Lions Club, and the Fireflies 4-H Club met at the Ryland Cemetery, which is located off the Old Morgantown Road west of the Marlin Lawson farm. A new flag pole and flag were provided by Lodge 45, and the Lions Club completed the cement work. The 4-H Club, pictured above, was in charge of beautification, which included planting flowers. A dedication was held by members of VFW Post 10077 and American Legion Post 71. Several members of the DAR were also present. Three local Civil War veterans are buried at the Ryland Cemetery. Francis T. Casteel, Private Company I, 2nd Maryland P.H.B. Infantry, enlisted Oct. 31, 1861, and was discharged Oct. 31, 1864. James R. Herring, Private Company D, 3rd Maryland P.H.B. Infantry, enlisted in May 1862 and died in service Nov. 18, 1864. Lloyd Lowdermilk, Private Company K, 8th Pennsylvania H. Art., was born in 1844 and died in 1889. Join Hands Day was established in 2000 by America's Fraternal Benefit Societies in partnership with the Points of Light Foundation and the National Volunteer Network. Initially, Join Hands Day was meant to develop relationships between young people and adults in the United States through volunteerism. Since its establishment, the event was spread not only across the United States, but also to Canada and countries all over the world.

SMART STRATEGY

Earnhardt Jr.'s crew makes winning call at Richmond

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Richmond, Va.

Faced with a critical strategy decision with the laps winding down in the Chevy 400 at Richmond International Raceway, Dale Earnhardt Jr.'s crew made the winning call, leaving him on the track while his closest challenger, Tony Stewart, stopped for tires during the race's final caution period.

When the drivers lined up for the final 45-lap sprint to the finish, Earnhardt had the lead, but Stewart, in fourth place, had the newer tires.

It turned out, just as Earnhardt's crew predicted, that track position would be more important than fresh rubber, as Earnhardt motored away to a big lead and his third win of the 2004 season.

Jimmie Johnson, who used the same strategy as Earnhardt, took second place over Bobby Labonte, Stewart and Matt Kenseth.

Earnhardt said strategy turned out to be more important than speed when it counted.

"I really don't know if we had the best car tonight, but being out in front at the end was where it needed to be, so that's what we did," he said. "I expected [Stewart] to come on up through there, but I saw in [Friday's] Busch race that track position was tough. I knew Tony was going to have to work pretty hard to get up through there."

Stewart had the best car during the middle portion of the race, and appeared to be in position to challenge Earnhardt in the late-race shootout. But he and Jeff Gordon bumped while racing for third place just after the final restart and neither driver was a factor after that.

Earnhardt's 12th career win allowed him to boost his points lead from 25 to 40 over Johnson and earn an $80,000 bonus paid to the points leader if he wins a race.

Fears of single-file racing on the newly paved racing surface turned out to be unfounded. By Lap 130, Earnhardt used the second groove, which some didn't think would be raceable, to wrestle the lead from Johnson.

From then on, the outside lane seemed to be the better of the two grooves, at least for drivers like Earnhardt and Ryan Newman.

Johnson, like most other drivers in the field, had predicted that the bottom groove would be the only one utilized, as is often the case when tracks are paved.

"I really thought it was going to be a single-file race, but it wasn't," Johnson said.

RICHMOND NOTES

Almost a flawless outing for Stewart

By RICK MINTER
Cox News Service

Richmond, Va.

Tony Stewart, who has lost opportunities to win in several recent races because of fender-benders on the track, ran a flawless race at Richmond for 350 of the race's laps.

STEWART

His only slip-up came in the final 45-lap dash to the checkered flag when he and Jeff Gordon brushed each other while racing for third place. Both drivers dropped back — Stewart to fourth and Gordon to sixth — and remained there for the remainder of the race.

Stewart, while being interviewed on TV after the race, voiced his displeasure with driver-turned-analyst Darrell Waltrip.

"I got a little loose and got into Jeff," Stewart said. "So I guess Darrell Waltrip will lobby to have me suspended. If Waltrip has his way, there will only be 18 cars in the next race."

Before the race, Stewart said that Fox broadcasters Waltrip, Larry McReynolds and Mike Joy seemed to be the main ones who have problems with his driving.

Gordon suffers in Indy rain

Robby Gordon's disappointing fortunes at Indianapolis Motor Speedway followed him to Richmond International Raceway on Saturday.

Gordon, who is running the Indy 500 in addition to a full Nextel Cup schedule, qualified a disappointing 18th for the Indianapolis 500, then fought tire problems for most of the Chevy 400 at Richmond.

Rain interfered with qualifications at Indy, and Gordon had to take his chances early in the session so he wouldn't miss the start of the 400 at Richmond.

"This will probably be our worst Indianapolis 500 starting spot," Gordon said. "If we didn't have to leave [for Richmond], we would have waved it [qualifying attempt] off, for sure."

At Richmond, he had a flat tire in the 400 just as the green flag dropped, but he overcame the lap he lost only to crash again on Lap 137 with another flat tire.

He lost three laps and finished 24th.

Green, Kahne tangle

A strong third-place qualifying run by Jeff Green was wasted after he came out the loser in an early race fender-banging duel with rookie Kasey Kahne. Green's car slammed into the Turn 2 wall on Lap 101, bringing out the second caution flag of the race.

"I gave [Kahne] a little nudge to let him know I didn't like him running me into the wall, and he wrecked me," said Green, who wound up 37th. Kahne was 28th.

New NASCAR television series is a winner

'NASCAR Drivers: 360' documents drivers' lives

By MARC KATZ
Cox News Service

Dayton, Ohio

It's not that I don't like NASCAR. I'm just wound up with too many other sports. And all those logos make me dizzy.

Besides, if I wanted to see two cars rub paint off each other's bumpers, I could just watch other members of my family back out of the garage in the morning. You know who you are.

On the other hand, I have just watched an episode of "NASCAR Drivers: 360," a delightful series of eight one-hour shows on FX. It takes the smell out of gasoline, the grease off the driveway and the cursing out of the air, except, possibly, for one little indiscretion.

When DeLana Harvick tries to wake up husband Kevin one morning five days prior to a race, she says, "OK, turd, get up."

In case you can't hear it, the phrase is repeated in caption.

Then Kevin tells his wife he's hungry, to which she replies, "That's not my problem."

"What is your problem?" he answers.

"Well, technically, you," she says, reminding him to clean up the dog "turd" in the garage.

"This is wrong," Kevin says as he takes a shovel to the mess in the garage, adding, "It's even more wrong to throw it in the neighbor's yard," which he does.

Except for the dog stuff, the conversation sounds familiar. Kevin Harvick is not like me, but he is. He is like all of us.

If other sports would take the time to personalize their athletes the way NASCAR does, fans would be a lot more friendly, too.

"NASCAR Drivers: 360" goes where most documentary films go, to cool places. It shows the drivers as normal people who live normal lives and have loving and sarcastic and friendly and funny times with their wives and children.

Nine families were chosen to be filmed doing everything from getting up in the morning, eating dinner, driving to the next race, testing cars, trying to get a ride when a car fails and, yes, even throwing dog poop into the neighbor's yard.

Taking part in the series are Harvick, Dale Earnhardt Jr., Jeremy Mayfield, Jamie McMurray, Casey Mears, Scott Wimmer, Brian Vickers and Kenny and Rusty Wallace.

The show I watched featured Harvick and the Wallaces and their wives and children. If they were any friendlier, you'd swear they were lifelong pals instead of celebrity race-car drivers.

The program slows down their lives from the racetrack, showing the drivers from dawn to dusk, what they do with the rest of their day and how important sponsorships are.

Oh, yes, there are wrecks to be shown. Just as you couldn't show a hockey game without a fight, showing a NASCAR race without a wreck would be exclusionary.

Even the casual or non-NASCAR fan will be able to enjoy this series. Just be careful leaving the garage.

Future not bright for tradition-filled tracks

By RICK MINTER

Richmond, Va.

International Speedway Corporation's purchase of Martinsville Speedway could signal the departure of another Nextel Cup race from the Southeast, once the base of NASCAR.

Officials from ISC, which is controlled by the France family that owns NASCAR, said there are no immediate plans to move one of Martinsville's two race dates elsewhere. But the current trend says otherwise.

"If you are not in a major market and you don't have 100,000 seats, you're going to be in tough shape because economically you just can't make any money," said H.A. "Humpy" Wheeler, president of Lowe's Motor Speedway.

It was announced last week that North Carolina Speedway in Rockingham, N.C., is being taken off the 2005 Nextel Cup schedule in favor of a second race in Texas.

In addition, one of Darlington Raceway's dates was given to Phoenix International Raceway.

Darlington, Rockingham and Martinsville all seat less than 70,000 fans.

Harrison Kyle also finished with second place honors at the fair in the Engineering category. His project was titled "The strongest wood!" in which he used cut samples of various types of wood to test for strength.

Thomas Holtschneider finished third in the Environmental Sciences category with his project "Which type of material produces the most solar heat?"

Alex Barnard received third place honors in the Behavioral and Social Sciences with a project titled "Are you forgetful?" in which she determined if age affects a person's memory.

Zion Lutheran Women Convene

Women of the ELCA, Zion Lutheran Church, Jennings, held their monthly meeting in the church last Friday.

The study theme, "Prosper in the Gospel," was introduced by Leota Baker. The principal objectives of the session were: to see how disagreeing sisters in Christ might resolve differences; to learn how God's peace overcomes anxiety; and to consider Paul's understanding of stewardship. This concludes the nine-session Bible study "I Thank God for You."

Devotions closed with the singing of the hymn "Lord, Take My Hand and Lead Me."

Judy Stanton presided over the business meeting.

The highlights of the spring assembly of Women of the ELCA in the Monongahela Valley–Mountain Cluster were reported by Leota Baker, who had attended the meeting at Grace Lutheran Church, Fairmont, W.Va.

A birthday offering was presented by Judy Stanton.

Tribute to the memory of Mrs. Norman Baker was made through a gift offering to Women of the ELCA–Churchwide. This offering was designated for the specific ministry "Strengthening Families and Communities."

A package of 13 sweaters, two jackets, and a shirt was sent to Our Savior's Lutheran Church, Box Elder, Mont., for its clothing give-away on the Rocky Boy Indian Reservation. A letter of thanks has been received from the pastor, the Rev. Rufina Votaw.

NORTH STARS "JOIN HANDS" TO BEAUTIFY ACCIDENT – Members of the North Star 4-H Club participated in Join Hands Day, May 1, by planting eight flower pots, which were then placed along the streets of Accident. The club had received a $250 mini grant from the Points of Light Foundation to participate in the event. The members also picked up trash around the Accident fire hall and Town Park East on April 27 as a prelude to Join Hands Day. Members who participated, left to right, in the front row are Tessa Gardner and Kevin Haenftling. In the back are Brett Stanton, Rachel Schmidt, and Kara Savage. Their parents also helped with the project. The North Star 4-H members complete several service learning projects each year.

A: This year marks Boone's 25th anniversary with artist Gabriel Ferrer, son of the late Rosemary Clooney and actor Jose Ferrer (which also makes Debby the sister-in-law of "Crossing Jordan" actor Miguel Ferrer).

Boone and Ferrer have four children: Gabrielle, Dustin, Jordan and Tessa.

Q: Several seasons ago there was a weekly series with Michael Madsen as a mysterious character who helped people in trouble, often with assistance from other people he had helped in the past. What was it called? –Mary Lou Christensen, Tucson, Ariz.

A: "Vengeance Unlimited" was the creepy and, um, morally ambivalent 1998-99 ABC series in which Madsen starred as Mr. Chapel, a shadowy figure who devoted his life to helping people get revenge against those who had wronged them. His fee was either a million dollars or the promise to perform a favor at some point in the future. Kathleen York played KC Griffin, a paralegal who assisted Chapel.

Chapel was by no means a heroic character. He used any means at his disposal to dispense his own version of "justice," and he cut such a sinister figure that after he redeemed a favor from a past client, he would tell that person, "I am out of your life forever," which usually provoked a weak but fervent "Thank God" in response.

Although "Vengeance" sharply divided critics, its cult popularity makes it a likely candidate for DVD release.

UPDATE: Just a few days after I filed last week's column that included an item on "The Nanny," the Web site TVShowsonDVD.com carried an announcement that the first season of the CBS Fran Drescher sitcom is scheduled to be released on DVD Aug. 10.

Send questions of general interest to TV Pipeline, Zap2it, 333 Glen St., Glens Falls, NY 12801, or e-mail to tvpipeline@tribune.com. Only questions selected for this column will be answered. Personal replies cannot be sent.

Local Employer Recognized By Army Reserve

Salem Children's Trust executive director Louise Richards received the "My Boss is a Patriot" award recently during a change-of-command ceremony at the 300th Chemical Company in Morgantown, W.Va.

The award was presented by Col. Paul Dietrich of the 464th Chemical Brigade in Johnstown, Pa. Pfc. Brenda E. Glotfelty, a petroleum supply specialist and retention NCO in that unit, nominated Richards for the award. Glotfelty is employed at Salem as an assistant horsemanship instructor.

The National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (ESGR) Award Program recognizes employers whose support and good will are important in retaining "highly" skilled and qualified members of the National Guard and Reserve.

"Without good rapport, membership in the Guard can be difficult for both employer and employee since monthly drills and annual training consume at least 48 to 50 days annually," noted a Salem Children's Trust spokesperson.

Glotfelty's nomination letter read, in part: "Louise is very supportive of me as an employee and as a Reserve soldier. She is concerned about me and about training and deployment situations, and is very concerned about my future in case I am called up to serve. I am never made to feel as though putting the Reserves ahead of my job is a bad thing; she is always willing to give me as much time off as I need, no matter how long. Louise is also interested in what I do in the Army. She is a good boss!"

In presenting the award, Col. Dietrich noted that "employer support for soldiers enables them to participate in the defense of their country." Richards also received a colonel's coin and ESGR Patriot Pin.

Located near Grantsville, the Maryland Salem Children's Trust provides residential, therapeutic, and educational services to children who have been abused, neglected, and abandoned.

RICHARDS RECEIVES "MY BOSS IS A PATRIOT" AWARD – Salem Children's Trust executive director Louise Richards recently received the "My Boss is a Patriot" award during a change-of-command ceremony at the 300th Chemical Company in Morgantown, W.Va. Nominating Richards for the award was Pfc. Brenda E. Glotfelty, a petroleum supply specialist and retention NCO in the unit. Glotfelty is employed at Salem as an assistant horsemanship instructor. See story for details. Pictured, left to right, are Richards, Glotfelty, and Col. Paul Dietrich, 464th Chemical Brigade, presenting the award.

GLOTFELTY AWARDED – Pfc. Brenda Glotfelty, far right, was recently awarded the Army Reserve Components Achievement Medal for three years of service in the U.S. Army by Capt. Matthew Adams, far left. Glotfelty also received the Army Achievement Medal for "initiative and can-do attitude." She was awarded the Army Service Ribbon upon completion of Advanced Individual Training at Ft. Lee, Va., in 2001. She is employed as an assistant horsemanship instructor at the Maryland Salem Children's Trust.

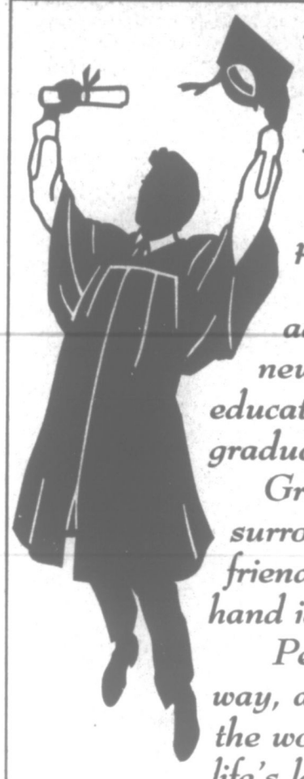
Reflections



Graduation...is it a beginning, an ending, or possibly a stop along the way?

Graduation is a beginning of life as a young adult charting an unfamiliar course; a beginning of new friendships and fresh concepts, of higher education or a fulfilling occupation. Certainly, graduation is a beginning.

Graduation may also bring endings...to familiar surroundings and comfortable routines, to old friendships, a setting aside of childlike fears and second hand ideas. Yes, graduation may signify endings.

Perhaps, graduation is a significant stop along the way, a preparatory pause, a fork in the road. Indeed, the word itself means a gradual transition, a step on life's ladder...a time to remember the past, to ponder the present, and to dream of the future.

Whatever graduation means to you, feel proud of your accomplishments, and praise God for providing you with strength and guidance. Worship Him regularly, so that you may continue to receive His direction during this most meaningful time in your life.

The Lord Takes Delight in His People

In the Bible, Psalm 149 tells us that the Lord takes delight in His people and He crowns the humble with salvation. The significance of this wonderful verse comes alive when we think of how much pleasure parents and grandparents receive when they are surrounded by their family for some special occasion.

It is such a blessing to be close to those you love, and the feeling of togetherness is bound by true affection for each other. Passing along family values to our children is beneficial to family life, and more importantly, the virtues and qualities that children witness with their families will remain with them throughout their lives. God wants us to receive joy from those around us, and the closeness that families develop should be a reflection of our closeness with our Heavenly Father. Our Lord takes delight in His people and He wants them to spend eternity with Him. The delight and closeness that we share with our loved ones is an example of God's love toward us, and the eternal blessing that we share as being part of God's family is salvation.

I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth.

Uses for Coenzyme Q10 Supplements

Coenzyme Q10 is used by body cells to produce energy needed for cell growth and maintenance. In humans, the heart, liver, kidneys, and pancreas contain the highest levels of this substance. Researchers have found that tissue levels of coenzyme Q10 drop as we age. Taking supplements by mouth for at least 6 months can reduce the symptoms of some genetic disorders. Some research suggests that adding coenzyme Q10 to the regimens of people with congestive heart failure improves overall quality of life and decreases hospitalization rates and symptoms. Coenzyme Q10 also lends an additional blood pressure lowering effect when taken with prescription blood pressure medication. When started within 72 hours of a heart attack and continued for at least one year, coenzyme Q10 can significantly lower the risk of additional heart attacks and cardiac death.

Taking high doses of coenzyme Q10 orally seems to slow the functional decline associated with Parkinson's disease. Some studies have concluded that coenzyme Q10 also seems to help improve physical performance in some people with muscular dystrophy.

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• It was Marguerite Duras who observed, "You have to be very fond of men. Very, very fond. You have to be very fond of them to love them. Otherwise they're simply unbearable."

• Some years ago, four Elvis impersonators were scheduled to skydive into the parking lot of a Boston nightclub during its opening celebration. Unfortunately, they were blown off course, and one of them was killed. A wit from the Boston police department commented, "Elvis hit town — he just hit it a bit too hard."

• There was a time when people commonly used the word "treen" as the plural for "tree."

• Ever wonder where the term "40 winks," referring to a nap, came from? It was first published in 1872, in a magazine of British humor called Punch. The reasoning was that someone who had read all 39 articles enumerating the rules for the clergy of the Church of England would fall asleep out of boredom and therefore need "40 winks" to recover.

• After the Bible, the book that more early American colonists possessed was "The Complete Works of William Shakespeare."

• In addition to its other odd characteristics, the duckbill platypus has "fangs" on its feet. In addition to claws used for digging, the platypus has a needle-sharp, hollow bony protrusion through which it can inject poison as a method of self-defense.

• In Barcelona, Spain, a judge once had to intervene to prevent a widow from using the skin of her deceased husband to make a purse.

• Some teens (and their parents) might be able to sympathize with Russian writer Anton Chekhov, who described his adolescence as "a never-ending toothache."

• On May 24, 1964, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., suggests during an interview using low-yield atomic bombs in North Vietnam. A storm of criticism followed, and Goldwater was crushed by Lyndon B. Johnson in the U.S. presidential election later that year.

• On May 30, 1971, the unmanned U.S. space probe Mariner 9 is launched on a mission to Mars. Mariner 9 would become the first spacecraft to orbit a planet other than Earth, and send back more than 7,000 pictures of the "Red Planet" and the first close-up images of the Martian moons.

• On May 25, 1977, China's communist government lifts its decade-old ban on the writings of William Shakespeare.

• On May 28, 1987, Matthias Rust, a 19-year-old amateur pilot from West Germany, takes off from Finland, travels through more than 400 miles of Soviet airspace, and lands his small Cessna aircraft in Red Square by the Kremlin. The event was an immense embarrassment to the Soviet government and military, and Rust would spend 18 months in a Soviet prison.

Feline Diabetes

Q. My cat "Buster" was recently diagnosed with feline diabetes. He didn't seem sick before, so why did he contract this illness? How long will his lifespan be? — Sharon D., Concord, N.H.

A. There are a number of reasons why cats develop diabetes. There are also two main forms of the disease in cats: In the first form, the pancreas does not produce enough insulin to properly metabolize sugars. The malfunction of this important organ can be triggered by a virus, steroid medications or dietary deficiencies. In the second type of diabetes, insulin is produced but the cells don't recognize it, leading to the same problems.

Buster didn't have symptoms when he was diagnosed. This may be a blessing in disguise for you both. If the disease is caught early, it can be checked or, in some cases, reversed. Pets that go months or years without diagnosis and treatment can develop severe symptoms, including eye, nerve and kidney damage.

Veterinarians have several tools in the battle against feline diabetes. These include prescription diets and oral medications. Insulin injections are also available and can be highly effective.

When caught early enough, diabetes is not a death sentence. Affected cats can live a full, healthy lifespan. The difference is that their owners must devote a lot more attention to them — not just in watching their diets, but in administering medications that will keep them healthy.

Much more information is available about feline diabetes than I can give here. One of the best resources out there is on the Internet at www.feline-diabetes.com, which has published lots of details on its pages and includes links to support groups for pet owners grappling with this illness.

Week Of The Working Parent Dinner Slated

A.P.P.L.E.S. for Children, the Child Care Resource Center for Western Maryland's Allegany, Garrett, and Washington counties, will host the second annual Partnership Dinner for 125 community representatives, parents, early childhood professionals, and elected officials this Saturday, May 22. May 16 through 22 has been named the 2004 Maryland Week of the Working Parent (WOWP).

The entertainment during the dinner will be provided by the Humor Project on the theme of Partnerships for Growth, with additional time for children's music and a silent auction. The public is invited to bid on auction items contributed by area businesses.

Some working parents will be recognized by their employers at the dinner for "extraordinary success in the difficult but rewarding job of balancing work and family responsibilities."

The evening's festivities will start at 6 p.m., with entertainment commencing at 7:30 p.m. Ticket prices are $25. All Allegany, Garrett, and Washington county residents and advocates are welcome to attend.

A few business and community sponsorships are still available for this event.

Additional 2004 Maryland Week of the Working Parent (WOWP) activities in Western Maryland include the distribution of Working Parent Stickers for children to decorate for their parents, and free copies of a Working Parent Pages brochure on literacy, school readiness, and the arts.

WOWP was designed by the Maryland Committee for Children in 1990 to highlight the contributions of parents to the work force and the economy. It is a weeklong celebration when employers recognize the accomplishments of working parents who balance quality care for their children with quality work performance. The celebration underscores the importance of availability of quality child care and offers employers and their employees practical approaches to addressing family needs.

The designation Working Parent includes parents who work outside and inside the home. All parents make a contribution to the local and regional economy in the demanding work of raising future wage earners and consumers, said a spokesperson.

The 2004 Maryland Week of the Working Parent is a service mark (℠) of the Maryland Committee for Children. A.P.P.L.E.S. for Children (the Alliance for Parent, Provider, and Local Employer Solutions) is the local affiliate for the 2004 Maryland Week of the Working Parent.

Ellison To Be Special Guest At Bird BioBlitz

Md./D.C. atlas coordinator Walter Ellison and Garrett County atlas coordinator Fran Pope will lead an "atlassing" expedition during the New Germany State Park BioBlitz, set for Saturday, May 29.

Persons attending the BioBlitz should meet at the Lakehouse at New Germany.

Ellison will cover the use of maps to plan block coverage, atlas surveying for birds both from the roadside and off-road, and taking bird sightings from field cards onto the Internet via online data entry hosted by the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center.

"We will be looking for nesting behavior as we attempt to discover records of possible, probable, and confirmed breeding collected in support of the New Germany BioBlitz," Pope said.

The event is open to both current Breeding Bird Atlas participants (as a refresher) as well as others interested in the project.

WALTER ELLISON

Walter Ellison was born and grew up in northern New England in the Connecticut River Valley. He said his mother used to tell him his second word was "bird," said as he pointed at a bank swallow colony, and that he demanded the name of a bird brought to him by the family cat at the age of 3 (it was a common yellow-throat).

Ellison's father encouraged his interest in the outdoors, and birds in particular, by taking up birding and leading the 5-year-old Walter on bird walks, especially after noticing the boy's interest in his grandfather's bird books, including Audubon's Birds of America and a beginner's nature guide by John Kieran. Ellison has continued birding throughout his life.

He earned a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Vermont. From 1976 to 1981, he spent his summers working on the Vermont atlas project for the Vermont Institute of Natural Science, Woodstock, Vt. He continued to work on the resulting atlas book (published in 1985) and a bird-finding guide to Vermont (published in 1981) until the mid-1980s.

He received a master of science degree from the University of Connecticut in 1991. His graduate work focused on a study of northward range expansion by the blue-gray gnatcatcher. He continued with his studies at the State University of New York at Albany, where he received a PhD in May 2001 for work on the population genetics of Bicknell's thrush and veery.

He met his spouse and birding companion, Nancy Martin, when he was working on the atlas. The couple have been regional editors for New England for the American Birding Association's bird distribution journal, North American Birds, since 1995. They have one son, Ian, and now reside in Chestertown.

Ellison has worked on four additional atlas projects before coordinating the Maryland/D.C. project: New York, Maine, Connecticut (as a writer), and, most recently, the second New York state atlas in 2000 and 2001.

Fran Pope, a resident of Mountain Lake Park, is an accomplished birding expert.

For more information about the Maryland/D.C. Breeding Bird Atlas Project (MAP), persons may visit the Maryland Ornithological Society's website at www.MDBirds.org.

Maryland Wins Nat'l Economic Devel. Award

Governor Robert L. Ehrlich Jr. announced this week that the Department of Business and Economic Development's Maryland Venture Fund has earned the Excellence in Economic Development Award from the U.S. Department of Commerce for its innovative strategies in economic development.

The awards are presented each year to showcase best practices, highlight "outstanding" results, and honor innovative economic development strategies of national significance.

"This national award is truly an honor," said Ehrlich. "It recognizes our effort to send the world a clear message that Maryland is once again open for business, particularly for technology entrepreneurs. It also demonstrates that governments can develop innovative investment strategies that bring new ideas, new companies and new jobs to Maryland."

The Maryland Venture Fund, through the Challenge and Enterprise Investment programs, offers venture capital funding to emerging technology companies across the state, from early seed stage funding to equity funding. Since 1994, the fund has invested $30 million in more than 200 companies and generated more then $1 billion of private equity investment, according to the governor's press office. Of those companies, approximately 60 percent are technology companies and 40 percent are life-science companies. The internal rate of return (IRR) for the Maryland Venture Fund for the current year is 32 percent.

"I'm honored to recognize the Maryland Venture Fund for its outstanding efforts to empower Maryland residents by attracting private sector investments and creating higher-skill, higher-wage jobs," said Commerce Secretary Don Evans. "This award is a great example of our appreciation of organizations like this one to help grow the economy and create jobs for local citizens."

The Department of Commerce's Economic Development Administration presents Excellence in Economic Development awards each year in the following categories: Excellence in Community and Faith-based Economic Development; Excellence in Economic Adjustment Strategies; Excellence in Innovation; Excellence in Regional Competitiveness; Excellence in Technology-led Economic Development; Excellence in Urban or Suburban Economic Development; and Excellence in Rural Economic Development.

Winners will receive their awards at a Capitol Hill reception as part of the EDA National Conference, "The Innovation Imperative – Translating Ideas Into Regional Prosperity," to be held June 8-10 at the Omni Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D.C. More information about the event may be found online at edanationalconference.com

"By investing in the seed stages of emerging companies, the Maryland Venture Fund provides critical funding to launch new and innovative technologies and assist companies in attracting private investments to general growth," said Aris Melissaratos, secretary of the Maryland Department of Business and Economic Development. "This is an integral part of our strategy to build on the state's assets, which include many sources of research and development, strong infrastructure and successful companies."

"The Maryland Venture Fund works closely with other venture capital funds in the region, recognizing that the state plays a critical role in the funding continuum and that it needs to work closely with the private sector to ensure success," said Ann Quinn, managing director of Maryland Venture Fund. "As a seed and early stage investor, the fund often finances companies that are simply too early and too risky for more traditional venture capitalists."

SMS RAM Notes

The Literary Club has finished compiling the literary magazine Creative Express to Express Creativity. The magazine includes poetry, short stories, essays, and artwork from sixth, seventh, and eighth graders. This is the first literary magazine from SMS since 1996, so for literary club members this was a wonderful earning experience.

The magazine will sell for $3, and the proceeds will go toward next year's literary magazine. For students, parents, grandparents, and other relatives, this is a great memento of their student's work. Students who have submissions printed in the magazine will receive a letter to take home informing parents of the price and providing them with an order form. Persons wishing to purchase the magazine may call Dianne Rice at 301-334-8881.

Christian Youth Trying To Raise A "Quarter Mile"

Students and staff from the local Living Word Youth Ministry are planning a trip to Spirit Lake, N.D., in July. They wish to go as missionaries to a Native American reservation.

As a fundraiser to help finance the trip, the students are attempting to collect "a quarter mile of quarters."

Donation containers are being placed at various businesses around Oakland. They will be collected on June 18, and at 6 p.m. that day, the students and staff will meet at the Southern High School athletic track. There they will lay out the quarters with the hope of reaching a "quarter mile of quarters."

"Because of the cost of gasoline, we really need to come as close as possible to our goal so that we will have the necessary budget for our ministry on the reservation," a spokesperson said.

Any business owners interested in obtaining a quarter container may call 301-334-8422.

Mt. Storm Ladies Auxiliary Slates Memorial Service

The Ladies Auxiliary VFW Post 6735, Mt. Storm, will hold a memorial service for deceased members at the Mt. Storm Cemetery on Saturday, May 29, at 11 a.m. Flags will be placed on the grave of the departed "sisters."

Post 6735 and its ladies auxiliary will also hold a flag-raising ceremony at the veterans' memorial in the Mt. Storm Park on Monday, May 31, at 1 p.m. The public is invited.

The Ladies Auxiliary VFW Post 6735 has been busy during the last few months in the Mt. Storm community, as well as the state, reported a group spokesperson.

Last fall the organization made donations to Operation Uplink, the state Veterans Administration Hospital, Make a Wish Foundation, local Girl Scout troops, and VFW Auxiliary 10077 in Deer Park to help buy T-shirts for veterans in local nursing homes, Martinsburg VA Hospital, Toys for Tots, and cancer aid and research.

The members also worked with the Mt. Storm Volunteer Fire Department Ladies Auxiliary and the Mt. Storm United Methodist Church on Christmas food and fruit baskets for elderly shut-ins and needy families.

The Post 6735 auxiliary held a Governor's Flag Education Class for fifth grade students at the Union Educational Complex and worked with kindergarten classes at UEC to help students learn the Pledge of Allegiance. The students were given pencils and flags upon completion of the classes.

In November, a free bean dinner was held on Veterans' Day to honor veterans. The event was open to the public. A display was set up with pictures of local veterans. Thirty-five middle school students from UEC made placemats for the event. The top four were chosen and used on the tables at the dinner. The winners will be recognized at the UEC Middle School banquet.

Last winter, the organization sent clothing and blankets to homeless veterans; made donations to the state VA hospital's Christmas fund and the national VFW home's Health, Happiness, and Cheer Fund; and made and delivered cakes to the senior citizens meal site in Mt. Storm.

A POW-MIA program was also held; Buddy Poppies were available at several functions; Buddy Poppy wreaths were made and sent to the VA hospital; and a flag was donated to UEC from the auxiliary and post.

Under the direction of Diana Mielecki, the Voice of Democracy Essay Contest was held at UEC, with 33 students participating. The theme was "My Commitment to America." The winners were Jacob Reed, first place; Mike Dennis, second; and Aaron Hartman, third.

The auxiliary ladies have also been busy this spring. They mailed care packages to local soldiers serving overseas. Included in the packages were Easter cards made by UEC students in grade preschool through first.

A Creative Patriotic Art Contest was also held at UEC, with 10 students participating. The winners were Randy Junkins, first place; April Cosner, second; and Ashley Minnick, third. Randy's entry has been sent on to be judged at the state level.

Additionally, the auxiliary held a benefit dinner was to help a local family with its medical expenses, and "Remember to Get Out and Vote" signs were placed throughout the community.

Salem School Honored For "Perfect Score"

The Salem School was honored recently by its board of directors for earning a perfect score in this year's onsite monitoring visit by the Maryland State Department of Education. Board president Sam Reckley and vice president Gary Durr presented a plaque to education director Todd Mechem and faculty members Phyllis Jordan and Julie Thompson, both teachers in the Full Day Special Education program.

In addition to evaluating curriculum, materials, records and policies for compliance with state regulations, MSDE accreditation specialist Dr. Cathy Larner observed instruction in each of two special education classrooms.

"She said she was impressed with the structure and the level of teaching that was taking place, and with the relationships between teachers and students," said Ms. Jordan. "She thought it was obvious there were care and mutual respect in our interactions."

SALEM SCHOOL EARNS "PERFECT SCORE" – The Salem School, a division of the Maryland Salem Children's Trust, near Grantsville recently received a perfect score in this year's onsite monitoring visit by the Maryland State Department of Education. In recognition of that achievement, the Salem board of directors presented the school's education director and instructors with a plaque. See story for details. Pictured, left to right, are board president Sam Reckley, board vice president Gary Durr, education director Todd Mechem, and faculty members Phyliss Jordan and Julie Thompson.

Salem School, begun in a basement 10 years ago to tutor one Salem resident, now offers a range of services to up to 28 children whose special education needs are not met in the public school. While preference is given to children from Garrett County and western Maryland who have been referred by the area boards of education, the school also accepts children from across Maryland.

"We always work hard to meet the expectations of MSDE, and this year we were fortunate to earn a perfect score," said Mechem, whose staff put in long hours in preparation for the monitoring visit. "MSDE is always very helpful in letting us know what we need to do and how to do it." Mechem, who is in his eleventh year at Salem and his fourth as education director, credits his staff with earning the unprecedented perfect score.

One of about 80 nonpublic special education schools in the state of Maryland, Salem School's programs are approved and monitored by the Maryland State Department of Education under the direction of State Superintendent of Schools Nancy Grasmick. An onsite visit every three years evaluates all aspects of school programs, from curriculum and staff to behavior management and admissions criteria, to privacy rights and procedures, library contents and more.

The Full Day Special Education is one of three programs operated by Salem School, a division of the Maryland Salem Children's Trust, which provides home, counseling and educational services to children who have been abused, neglected and abandoned. The school also offers MSDE-approved Transitional Education and Extended School Year programs utilized by both Salem residents and Garrett County public school students.

Two Students, Principal, Club Honored By MSDE

The Maryland Student Service Alliance (MSSA) and the Maryland State Department of Education (MSDE) recently honored students, teachers, principals, and community-based organizations for their leadership in the field of service learning. Those honored from Garrett County were Nathan Robert Klink, a senior at Northern High; Holly Sue Sauder, a senior at Southern High; Tom Woods, principal at Southern; and the Oakland/Mtn. Lake Park Lions Club.

The two high school student "Service Stars" were recognized for their contributions they provide communities through service learning and for their leadership promoting service among peers.

"These students have gone beyond their district's service learning plan, giving hundred of hours of service to their communities," said State Superintendent Dr. Nancy S. Grasmick.

Tom Woods, principal at Southern, was honored as a service learning principal leader.

He was one of 11 principals who were recognized their service learning leadership efforts. These principals support teachers, ensure program accountability, and promote high quality service learning, said Grasmick.

The first ever Community-Based Organization Leadership Award was bestowed on eight organizations from across the state that provide "exceptional" service learning opportunities for students.

These organizations involve a large number of students, produce a quality service learning curricula, generate positive media attention for service learning, and provide significant community assistance through student efforts, said Grasmick.

DEEP CREEK DUNK PRIZE WINNER NAMED – Ed Zehler and his wife Barbara were the first prize winners at the Maryland State Police Deep Creek Dunk held earlier this year. The $7,195 Coleman hot tub, which was delivered by Tub Tech LLC, was delivered to their home in Batavia, N.Y., last month. This was the second hot tub donation by Tub Tech in collaboration with Coleman Spas in support of Special Olympics Maryland. Farming On The Mountaintop

Cover Crop Program Begins June 1; Up To $40 Per Acre Available

Farmers who plant winter cover crops early may apply for cost-share assistance of up to $40 an acre to grow crops such as wheat, barley, and rye after the fall harvest of other crops. The Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA), in a partnership with the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), is making the higher cost-share rates available to encourage farmers to plant cover crops earlier than usual. Research has shown that cover crops planted immediately following the harvest are more effective in taking up unused crop nutrients remaining in the soil. Cover crops also help control soil erosion and protect water quality in streams, rivers, and the Chesapeake Bay.

"The earlier farmers get their cover crops planted, the higher their reimbursement rate will be," said Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley. "This program is being offered on a first-come, first-served basis. Farmers who want to plant cover crops this fall following the corn, sorghum, soybean, tobacco, or vegetable harvest should work with their local soil conservation district to get their applications to us right away."

Maryland has more than $2 million available for the 2004 Winter Cover Crop Program. Farmers statewide may apply for the program through local soil conservation districts during the June 1-11 enrollment period. To qualify for the $40/acre rate, farmers must plant their cover crops by October 1, 2004. Farmers who plant by October 15, 2004, would be eligible to receive $30 an acre in cost-share funding. Cost-share funding of $20 an acre is available to farmers who plant cover crops by November 1, 2004.

Spring oats, barley, wheat, triticale, rye, ryegrass, rape, and canola planted in the fall of 2004 are eligible to receive cost-share funding. Farmers may enroll between five and 250 acres in the program. All seed used is required to meet Maryland Seed Law and regulatory standards and have a minimum germination rate of 80 percent. Farmers may graze their livestock on enrolled fields or harvest the crop for winter feed after the crop is well established. The use of manure is permitted under certain, very limited conditions, and applicants must be in compliance with nutrient management requirements. Additional requirements and restrictions apply.

The 2004 Maryland Cover Crop Program is administered by the Maryland Agricultural Water Quality Cost-Share (MACS) Program. To qualify for the $40/acre rate, farmers also must sign an Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) contract with NRCS. Interested farmers should apply through their local soil conservation district during the June enrollment period. For more information, persons may call MDA at 410-841-5864.

Conditions Good For Planting

Maryland farmers had air temperatures in the 80s and spotty thunderstorms, which allowed farmers to increase planting progress for corn, soybeans, and vegetable crops. There were 6.2 days suitable for field work for the week ending May 16.

Corn is 81 percent planted, 8 percent above the five-year average and 14 percent above last year. Soybean planting is on schedule, with 15 percent planted, 4 percent above the five-year average and 6 percent above last year.

Winter wheat is in good condition with 23 percent excellent, 56 percent good, 16 percent fair, and 5 percent poor. Wheat progress shows 71 percent of the crop has formed grain heads. Barley is in good condition, with 34 percent excellent, 46 percent good, 14 percent fair, and 6 percent poor.

CRELLIN WATER SYSTEM
NOTICE OF VIOLATION
Surface Water Treatment Technique

The Garrett County Department of Public Utilities is providing the following notice regarding the Crellin Water System. The springs for the water system have been evaluated for protection against surface water influence as required by the Surface Water Treatment Rule (SWTR), as adopted in the Code of Maryland; COMAR 26.04.01, Quality of Drinking Water in Maryland. The spring was determined to be under the direct influence of surface water by the Maryland Department of the Environment. As a result, this source requires additional treatment, such as filtration, or replacement with a protected water source. Federal and state regulations require that the Crellin Water System install filtration.

What is the Department of Public Utilities doing?

The Crellin Water System disinfects the drinking water that is produced from the spring. The drinking water is tested monthly for coliform bacteria and results have met state and federal standards.

The Department of Public Utilities is in the process of testing the design for a new water treatment facility. After the pilot test is completed, design for the project will proceed. Construction is expected to begin March 2004.

What should I do?

People with severely compromised immune systems, infants, and some elderly may be at risk. These individuals should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. General guidelines on ways to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from EPA Safe Drinking Water Act Hotline (800-426-4791). If you have specific health concerns, consult your physician.

What does this mean?

This is not an emergency. This notification is provided to advise Crellin Water customers of the treatment requirements for their water system. Any questions or concerns should be directed to Allen Festerman at 301-387-9141. Please share this information with others that may find it useful.

Real Estate Facts by... Dale Carpenter

IT'S A WHOLE NEW BALL GAME!

If you're a senior who needs to buy or sell a home, you might feel a little overwhelmed by today's real estate market. Just like everything else, it's more complicated now than it used to be, and you might be concerned that service isn't what it used to be, either.

But today's real estate professionals are ready and willing to take the time to explain the process. We're more aware than ever that seniors are fast becoming the largest segment of our population, and you demand and deserve service and respect.

Maybe it's been twenty-five years since you bought a home. Even more intimidating is selling a home today, because you have to be aware of disclosure forms, home warranties, and all the things that today's buyers expect. Let a real estate agent sit down and carefully go over all the paperwork involved and take the burden out of the transaction.

The agent understands all of the emotional ties and memories associated with your home. It's not easy to decide what to take, what to leave behind, or know who to contact when it comes to moving. If you're lucky enough to have family nearby, that's a great comfort. But don't trust the sale of your home or the purchase of another to anyone but a professional who is dedicated to making the transition as smooth as possible.

If you'd like to buy or sell a home, but feel "out of touch" with what's happening in real estate, give me a call at the office, or on my cell phone at 301-501-DALE!

Watercraft Strikes Sunbather Lying On DCL Dock

A Pennsylvania woman sunbathing on a Deep Creek Lake dock was airlifted to the hospital Sunday after she was struck by a personal watercraft. The craft was operated by a friend of the victim who was charged by Natural Resources Police.

At approximately 1:30 p.m., Bethel Park resident Sarah Underwood, 18, was lying on the dock among a crowd of friends when a Yamaha XL700 operated by Dusty Rowe, 22, also of Bethel Park, collided with the dock, climbed the structure, and struck Underwood, knocking her into the water.

Underwood was pulled from the lake by friends, reportedly sustaining a concussion and head lacerations. She was flown to Cumberland Memorial Hospital, where family sources said Monday she was in stable condition and speaking with investigators.

Rowe and an unidentified passenger on the PWC both escaped injury.

Rowe was charged with operating a PWC in a negligent manner and operating a PWC in excess of 6 knots within 100 feet of a shoreline or structure. The charges can carry fines of up to $500 each.

Motorist Suffers Head Injury As Car Hits Bridge

An Oakland man was injured and subsequently charged last Thursday, May 20, when his car struck a bridge abutment on South Third Street, according to the Oakland Police Department.

At approximately 8:25 p.m. a 1996 Chevrolet Cavalier operated by Thomas Allen Lantz, 26, hit the edge of the bridge wall head on as he was accelerating out of a turn from eastbound Water Street onto southbound S. Third Street. He suffered head injuries in the collision and was transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital by the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad.

Lantz was issued a citation for failure to control vehicle speed on a highway to avoid a collision.

DOC WILLY GETTING A HAIR CUT? Yes, he certainly may, if the price is right that is. Tammy Kitzmiller of Shear Fantasy Salon in Oakland is getting ready to "Whack the Tail" off the head of Willy Hughes of Dr. Willy's Seafood Company in Deep Creek Lake. If his Relay for Life team, "The Orphans," receives enough donations from this fundraiser, Kitzmiller will gladly chop off the pony tail on Friday, June 11, at the Relay event. The lost locks will then be donated to "Locks of Love." For more information or to make a donation, persons may contact team captain Rick "Red" Broadwater, Cook Brothers Auto Parts, 301-334-2500; John Diller, Savage River Works, at 301-334-2335, or Kitzmiller, 104 E. Oak Street (the old bottling plant), at 301-533-1055. Hughes and his pony tail may be contacted at Dr. Willy's or by calling 301-387-7380.

'TWAS AN OLD-FASHIONED BARN RAISIN' Tuesday at the Sunnyside Road residence of Glenn "Butch" Sanders and his wife Kathy, as a group of 75 friends and neighbors (mostly Amish folks) showed up at 9 a.m. to start, and complete, the task in one day. The Sanders family lost their previous barn to fire in January of 2003. The wood needed for the project was all harvested by Sanders on his property, and milled by Lester Kaufman. The various metal parts needed were purchased from the sale of other wood off the farm. The male contingent did the barn-building, while their spouses prepared a huge lunch. Some of the Amish workers came from as far as Pennsylvania. See another photo on page A-3 to see the end product. Photo by John McEwen.

Second Street Collision Injures Oakland Woman

An Oakland woman was slightly injured yesterday morning on South Second Street when the pickup truck she was riding in was rear-ended by another pickup. No charges were filed in the 9:30 a.m. collision, as the second truck experienced a brake failure, according to the Oakland Police Department.

The accident occurred as a southbound Chevrolet S-10 operated by Walter Russell Lyons, 41, Grantsville, was stopped at the intersection of South Second and Oak streets, near the CSX railroad crossing. When the brakes failed on a GMC pickup approaching from the rear, Jeffrey Chandler Bell, 50, Oakland, was unable to stop that vehicle before striking the Chevy truck.

A passenger in Lyons' vehicle, Robin DeWitt, 32, complained of back pain and was transported by the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad to Garrett Memorial Hospital. The Oakland Volunteer Fire Department assisted.

Memorial Day Parade And Ceremony Set

American Legion Proctor Kildow Post 071 will once again sponsor a Memorial Day parade through Oakland. The parade will form on Liberty Street at First Street and will end at the Oakland Cemetery.

Approximate time for the parade to begin is 10 a.m. on Monday, May 31. The ceremony at the cemetery featuring District Court Judge Ralph M. Burnett as the speaker, is set to begin at 11 a.m.

Judge Burnett served as states attorney for Garrett County from 1974 to 1978, as well as in many other capacities in his civilian life. After graduating from Dickinson college in 1965, he served as a 1st lieutenant in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam war, and is a member of American Legion Proctor Kildow Post 071, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Vietnam Veterans of America.

Marvin "Red" Guthrie, 2nd vice commander of Post 071, is in charge of the program and has enlisted the services of local groups to assist. Southern High School band and Garrett Highlander bagpipe unit are scheduled to participate in the program.

Wreaths will be placed on the grave of the unknown soldier by members of various veterans organizations. VFW Post 10077 will provide a three volley salute to departed comrades.

All veterans are being asked to participate in the parade. Those who would like to march are welcome to do so, but vehicles will be available for those who would like to ride.

GC Pipes & Drums Marking 25 Years With Highland Festival Performances

by Jo Donaldson
Highland Festival publicist

Fred Thayer and the Garrett College Pipes and Drums will celebrate 25 years of performing during its appearance at the McHenry Highland Festival, scheduled for Saturday, June 5. A new band kilt was ordered for the occasion. They are being made in Scotland. The Calhoun tartan was chose in honor of Pipe Major Emeritus Fred Thayer, who started the band with Charles (Chip) Evans.

Twelve men gathered for an evening session of classes at the Garrett Community College Center Street extension in Oakland in 1979. The band continued to grow, becoming a vital part of the community. The pipe band marches in parades, performs at area nursing homes and businesses, educational, and charitable events. The season usually starts with the Garrett College graduation ceremony.

The band began hosting the McHenry Highland Festival 17 years ago. Held the first Saturday of June, the festival offers Celtic music, several bagpipe bands, Highland athletic games, sheepdog demonstrations, craft exhibitors, livestock shows, and a variety of other activities.

"My mother was Scottish," said Thayer. "I grew up with this music." Besides continuing to pipe with the band, he is President of the Highland Festival Board of Directors that now plans the festival.

Pipe Sergeant Emeritus John Grant has a lot of stories to tell about his years in the band. Once while piping in a park in Edinburgh, Scotland, some young boys came up to talk to him about the music and were amazed to discover he was an American.

"Bagpipes have only one volume, loud," said Grant, who was a member of the first band class. The sound of the bagpipes disturbed other classes, so he offered St. John's Episcopal Church in Deer Park as a practice location. The band still practices there, and participates in the church's Kirkin' o' the Tartans each year.

Originally called the Garrett Highlanders because some members also played for the Ali Ghan Shrine Highlanders, the band changed its name in 1989 when Garrett Community College took over sponsorship and began offering bagpiping as a credit course. The name was changed again last year when the college changed its name to Garrett College.

Pipe Sergeant Paul Browning, then 13, and his 11-year-old sister Barbara, were the first family team in the band. Later his father, Jerry Browning, joined the band as a bass drummer. Through the years many other family groups marched with the band.

Band members come from all walks of life. Some are retired, such as Jim and Mary Alice Riesman. Other members include teachers, students, and business owners. Although most live in Garrett County, some such as Sue Judy travel from Petersburg, W.Va., and others from Meyersdale, Pa.

Current Pipe Major Jerry McGee is also the Highland Festival coordinator. He is excited about the anniversary celebration and new additions to the festival, such as a falconry demonstration. Several "wrap-around" activities are being added this year, including a gala kick-off dinner and concert Friday night at the Lodge at the Wisp, a Scottish party Saturday night at Deep Creek Brewing Company, and a Golf Tournament Sunday at the Wisp.

Ferrell Paroled; Was Serving Life For 1988 Murder

Former Grant County (W.Va.) sheriff's deputy Paul William Ferrell, who had been serving a life sentence for his conviction in a 1988 murder case involving a suspected Garrett County victim whose body was never found, has been released from a West Virginia penitentiary. Ferrell's prison term had been commuted by then West Virginia governor Cecil Underwood in 2001, was granted the release by the state's parole board this week.

Ferrell was tried and convicted in Grant County Circuit Court within a year of the disappearance of Garrett resident Catherine Denise Ford. He was sentenced to consecutive terms of life with a chance of parole for a kidnapping conviction, 5 to 18 years for second-degree murder, and 1 to 3 years for arson.

Prosecutors argued that Ferrell had burned the 19-year-old's body in a Ford Bronco that was consumed by fire near his Gormania, W.Va., area home.

In commuting the sentence on his last day in office in 2001, Underwood stated that Ferrell's charges "are not supported by the presence of the alleged victim's body, weapon, eyewitnesses, or physical evidence, such as fingerprints, hair or fibers."

Garrett College Commencement Sends 88 Grads Onto New Paths

By Joan Crawford

Eighty-eight students received degrees and certificates at Garrett College's 32nd commencement last week. Five of these students also received special graduate awards during the ceremony.

Following a welcome and introduction of the platform party by president Dr. Steve Herman, graduates and their families heard Dean of Academic and Student Affairs Dr. Lillian Mitchell deliver the commencement address in which she spoke of facing new challenges and always being ready to learn.

Chairperson of the Garrett College Board of Trustees Rob W. Michael then presented the award for outstanding contributions to the college to Mitchell for her accomplishments during her 19 year tenure as dean.

Philip Rodeheaver of the Garrett College Foundation Board of Directors presented a service award in memory of the late Phyllis Vitez, who served on the board for eight years, to her husband Vaughn and daughter Diane.

Mitchell presented candidates for degrees and certificates that were conferred by Michael. Graduate awards were then announced by Mitchell. Ashley Liller was named outstanding transfer student, and Jonathon Mann outstanding career advancement student. Raili Raud received the award for the highest grade point average and shared the Inspiration award with La Sha L. Anderson. The Leadership award was presented to Amanda Savage. Ashley Liller and Jonathon Mann were named scholar athletes of the year.

MLP Driver Crashes After Falling Asleep

A Mtn Lake Park woman was slightly injured late Friday night when she allegedly fell asleep at the wheel, ran off Fourth Street, and struck a utility pole, according to the Oakland Police Department. Her infant child was not injured in the 11:22 p.m. mishap.

Julia Estelle Riggleman, 22, was traveling south when her 2000 Dodge Stratus hit the utility pole just south of Center Street. She and her 8-week-old child were transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital by the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad. The infant was properly secured in a safety seat, and was not injured.

No charges were filed by Oakland Police.

STEPPING TO ITS OWN BEAT, but always in unison, is the Garrett College Pipes & Drums. A favorite attraction at countless local festivals, parades, and other events, the local Scottish music marching band will mark its 25th anniversary with performances at the McHenry Highland Festival, set for Saturday, June 5, at the Garrett County Fairgrounds. The Pipes & Drums will also participate in the annual Kirkin' o' the Tartans at St. John's Episcopal Church in Deer Park the following morning. See story.

Garrett College President Reviews Plans For Athletic, Recreation Center

President Stephen Herman reviewed Garrett College's plans to build a recreation/community center on Marsh Mountain during the Garrett County commissioners' staff meeting on Tuesday.

Slated to open in 2009, the proposed Garrett College Athletic and Community Recreation Center would be owned and operated by the state's smallest college. The center is just one of several separate projects slated to be built near the Wisp Resort as part of a collaborative effort between the college, Adventure Sports Center International Inc. (ASCI), and Deep Creek Development.

With the college's recreation/community center, ASCI's whitewater-course complex, and DC Development's Wisp expansion and development projects, the three entities are playing separate roles in creating a "Lake Tahoe of the East," according to Dr. Herman. He stressed that the effort was a collaboration, not a partnership, between the three entities. There is no formal or legal arrangement.

At the core of the collaborators' properties is a proposed Alpine village with a Swiss-chalet type of ambiance, noted Herman. Its focus will be on the adventure sports industry with restaurants and retail shops.

The college's recreation center would be built near the village on 4.7 acres of land donated by DC Development. With a stone and wood exterior, the center will match the Alpine Village structures and blend in with the natural surroundings.

The president said the center was about 2/3 the size of West Virginia University's student recreation center. According to its web site, WVU's center is 170,000 square feet.

Plans for Garrett's facility include such amenities as a six-lane competition size pool, spa, sauna, steam room, racquet ball and basketball courts, indoor track, exercise area, warm-water therapy pool, weight-training room, outdoor ice skating rink, and a gym with a 2,500 bleacher-seating capacity.

With a regulation size basketball court and pool, the college and county schools would be able to hold basketball and swimming tournaments at the facility, added Herman.

The center will be built with state participation and through fundraisers, he noted. "Garrett College wants it to open debt free," Herman said. The college would be financially responsible for operating the facility and user fees would be applied toward maintenance costs.

Four college degree programs would be housed at the center: adventure sports, physical education, physical therapy, and recreation. Students would be able to learn in the classroom, get practical experience at the recreation and adventure sports centers, and then go on to jobs, possibly at the Alpine Village complex itself, noted Herman.

"From an educational stand point, it just doesn't get any better than that," he said.

The community would also benefit from the recreation center, by providing residents with affordable, year-round recreation, Herman indicated. "We're excited about that," he said.

The president noted that during winter months, local residents tended to be very inactive. The indoor track, heated therapy pool, and other amenities would provide residents with activities and enable them to pursue more healthy lifestyles.

Garrett County Chamber of Commerce president/CEO Charlie Ross said when he was child growing up in Friendsville, he always wanted a pool. "It's a dream come true," he said about the center.

The commissioners have proposed establishing a Garrett County Department of Recreation, which would be housed at the center and headed by the college, Herman added.

User fees at the center would be tiered, with county residents paying the lowest fee. "I pledge that nobody should be denied access to this facility for want of needs," he said. The president stressed that the college did not have to rely on local user fees to make to the center a reality.

Commissioner Ernie Gregg said the commissioners were also adamant about tiered fees.

Located near the college's center will be the proposed Adventure Sports Center International project. Herman explained that ASCI Inc. was a not-for-profit board of local volunteers whose mission was to promote economic development, increase the county tax base, and provide a public service.

The group plans to construct, own, and operate a recirculating whitewater course with an amphitheater, a whitewater hall of fame, and an adventure sports museum on 550 acres of land donated by DC Development.

More than 30 types of activities are expected to be available at the adventure sports complex, such as Alpine and Nordic skiing, rock climbing, ice skating, kayaking, hiking, and canoeing.

The ASCI board members were very serious about making the activities available to local residents, as well as tourists, said Herman.

DC Development has also donated more than nine acres for ASCI support buildings and facilities, which will be within the context of the Alpine Village, he added.

According to a consulting report by C.B. Richard Ellis, the adventure sports center will create 35 full time and 200 part time/seasonal jobs, with a possible 950 spin-off jobs. It could also generate $6 to $8 million a year in tax revenues for the county, with a possible $122 million annually from spin-off businesses.

Director Rick DeWitt, Garrett County Department of Social Services, said the project had far-reaching implications for his customers. "People need jobs," he said, adding that he would like to be a "partner" in the project to help his customers.

The president stressed that without DC Development, the recreation and adventure sports centers would not be possible. In addition to the land donations, the corporation will supply parking, communications, propane storage, and other supporting infrastructure. It has also pledged $187,000 annually for 10 years to support ASCI, according to Herman.

DC Development is a private, for-profit enterprise which owns the Wisp Resort and is involved in land development projects. According to Herman, during the last two years the corporation has invested $10 million to upgrade the ski resort and increased its payroll by two thirds. The result of which is more tourists visiting and more funds being generated for the county.

The corporation is also planning to construct numerous townhouses near the recreation center, adventure sports complex, and Alpine Village site.

"It's hard to image all the spin-offs that could happen," said Director Jim Hinebaugh, Garrett County Department of Economic Development, about the projects on Marsh Mountain. Basketball camps, day camps, major competitions, and more could be held. "The opportunities are unlimited," he said.

THEY STARTED FROM SCRATCH AT 9 A.M. on Tuesday, and by 7 p.m. that evening, the Glenn "Butch" Sanders family had a brand new barn. Some 75 Amish friends and neighbors converged on the Sanders farm, located along Sunnyside Road, and replaced a barn that was lost to fire in January of last year. The project was nearly postponed when lightning began dancing around the sky as the men were putting the metal roof on the building, but they decided that it was not close enough to pose any great danger. Don't Be Smug...

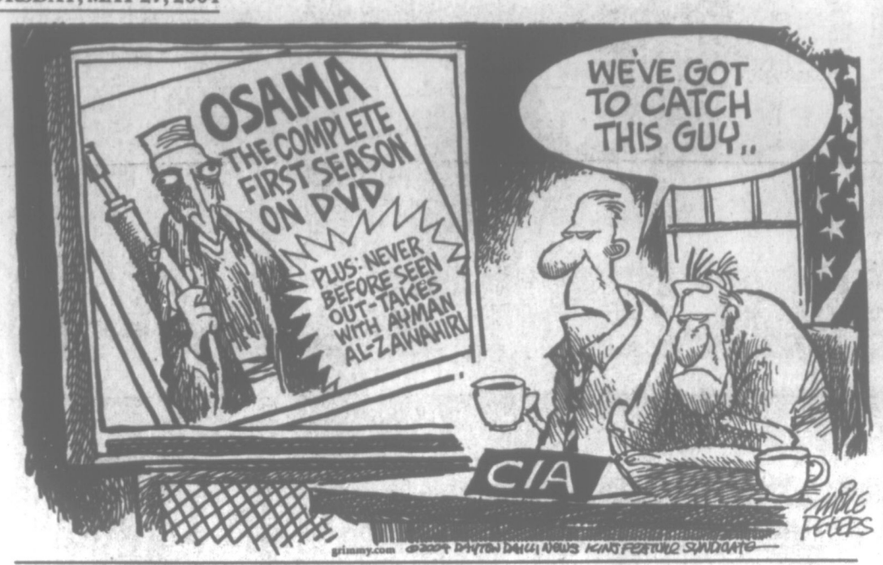
Comedian, actor, educator Bill Cosby caused quite a stir when he was guest speaking last weekend at a gala in Washington commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Brown vs. Board of Education desegregation ruling. He was extremely hard on those of his own race, essentially stating that the failures of blacks in this country are basically their own fault, and not that of America's white citizens. He was highly critical of blacks' not taking full advantage of the educational opportunities that are available to them. He noted their failure to learn how to read, write, and speak proper English; the brokenness of their families; and the extremely high numbers of teen pregnancies, deadbeat dads, children born out of wedlock, and black youths in prison. He pointed out the high level of drug abuse among blacks, and even the distastefulness of how many of them dress. He cited a lack of proper parenting as the root cause of many of the aforementioned ills.

Obviously, Dr. Cosby's words generated a variety of strong reaction, both negative and positive, among the nation's black leaders. But most agreed that, while quite painful, they were truthful.

However, upon hearing/reading Cosby's words, those of us who happen to be white should in no way assume a smug attitude or level any kind of "I-told-you-so" judgment of our fellow black citizens. In fact, one could easily use Cosby's same criticisms to describe the general state of white America. Just look around our own county (where only a handful of blacks reside) and one can find numerous examples of white folk behaving in exactly the same manner. Broken homes, deadbeat dads, teen pregnancy, illegal drug use, failure to take advantage of educational opportunities, going to jail, an inability to speak the language properly,... it's all here, and it's prevalent.

And we wholeheartedly agree with Dr. Cosby's conclusion that a lack of good parenting is the greatest culprit. Teaching our children tolerance and respect, paying attention to them, building their confidence and self-esteem, affording fair and appropriate discipline, providing proper nutrition and health care, loving our spouse, and most importantly, setting a good example of how to behave as an adult human being is the recipe – easy to write; very difficult to fulfill.



Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

This letter is directed to whoever is so cold and heartless enough to steal the plaque from my daughter's grave in the Oakland Cemetery. The words on the plaque are as follows:

"If tears could build a stairway and memories a lane,
I'd walk right up to heaven and bring you back again."

Carrie's grandmother bought that plaque for Carrie, not as a keepsake for anyone else. If you liked it so much, you could have ordered one exactly like it. I would have gladly told you where it came from. You didn't have to steal it from our Carrie.

In my heart, I know Carrie knows who you are. So if you have any heart at all, please give it back to her. And give us back the ability to not worry about her resting in peace.

Carrie's mother and family
Beverly Beitzel

To the Editor:

Traffic crashes are the leading cause of death from ages 2-20. When examining the fatalities, it is apparent that a large number of these deaths could have been prevented if drivers and passengers had simply buckled their safety belts.

Although seat belt use is at a national high of 79 percent, a disproportionate number of those still unbuckled are teenagers and young men in their early 20s. At 69 percent, safety belt use for teens and young adults ages 16-24 continues to lag behind the rest of the population. It's important to note that this is a daytime number, we know that nighttime belt use is much lower among teens and young adults.

For many teens, a driver's license is a ticket to freedom. No more car pools. No more embarrassing parental pick-ups and drop-offs at school. But tragically, a license is also a ticket to an early death for too many teens. So, how do we get this group to buckle up when they think tragedy won't happen to them? Surround them with the strong message, "Click It or Ticket; If you won't buckle up to save your life, then buckle up to save yourself a ticket," and back it up with strong enforcement.

From May 24-June 6, more than 13,000 law enforcement agencies from all 50 states will be cracking down on seat belt scofflaws as they conduct the national Click It or Ticket Mobilization. The message will be delivered to teens through more than 130 million in congressionally-funded, national and state advertising, Internet chat rooms, and public address systems in high school, in addition to enforcement in locations where young people congregate – such as schools and shopping malls.

By buckling up, teens will save more than just a hefty fine; they could save their lives.

To the Editor:

On this upcoming Memorial Day, when you hear Taps played, remember your Oakland Armory. It's a shame to see how easily such a landmark and organization in our community can be closed and guard members be relocated. The closest armory will be Cumberland, and western Maryland once again will be separated from the state in one more way.

The Oakland Armory and guard members play an important role and served our community for years. The National Guard provided local families with supplemental income. Guard members had an opportunity for training, travel, serving their country, education, retirement benefits, and much more. The armory served the community by providing a location for social events, food drives, schooling activities, and college programs. The Guard members were always on standby for emergency snow removal, community construction projects, open house events, and participation in parades and ceremonies.

As a Guard member (now retired), I experienced a sense of pride, camaraderie, patriotism, and service to my community. Future generations are losing a chance to these local opportunities and experiences.

Thank you to all who served and supported the Oakland Armory and Guardsmen.

God Bless!

To the Editor:

While some consider Memorial Day the start of the summer season, many of us know the real kickoff to summer in Garrett County is the McHenry Highland Festival. A celebration of "all things Celtic," the festival celebrates the rich and deep Scottish heritage of our area.

This year's festival, which will be held Saturday, June 5, at the county fairgrounds, is the 17th annual and promises loads of fun and enjoyment for all ages. Visitors will be able to enjoy everything from five bagpipe bands to Scottish country dancers, from athletes competing while dressed in kilts to traditional Scottish reenactments. For the animal lovers, there be a sheep dog demonstration, goat show, Highland cattle, and, new this year, an exciting falconry exhibit and demonstration. Also new for 2004 will the participation of Celtic dogs in the Opening Ceremony Parade, which formally kicks off the day at 11:30 a.m.

You will find children's activities, Irish Jaunting Cart rides, a British car show, and plenty of Scottish clans. Additionally, you'll be able to enjoy musical performances by a variety of Celtic performers, including the full throttle sound of Coyote Run, folksinger Carl Peterson, world-renowned Scottish fiddler Bonnie Rideout, harpist Lynne Peterson, and the exciting Celtic root music of Garrett County's own Wolf Creek Session. All this, plus loads of great food and a wide variety of craft and commercial vendors.

Gates open at 9 a.m. and the fun continues right through the closing ceremony, which begins at 4:30 p.m. Tickets for the festival are $7 if purchased before May 31 by visiting www.highlandfest.info, or they can be purchased at a number of area businesses, including: Gregg's Pharmacy, Arrowhead Market, Humberson Homes, the Fine Arts Gallery, Beachy's Pharmacy, and Flowers by Webers. Advance ticket purchasers will also be eligible to win a large screen projection TV, with the winner announced at the closing ceremony.

In addition, the weekend activities include a lavish and delicious Celtic Gala and Concert at the Wisp Resort, beginning at 6:30 p.m. on Friday, June 4, a St. Andrews at Wisp Golf Tournament on Sunday, June 6, a Kirkin o' the Tartans at St. John's Episcopal Church on Sunday, June 6, and a Ceilidh (a sort of Celtic hoe down) at the Deep Creek Brew Pub on Saturday evening, beginning right after the festival closes.

This celebration and fun would not happen without the generous sponsorship and support of many local and regional businesses and individuals, including Reliable Churchill Distributors, the Deep Creek Brewing Company, Long & Foster Realtors, Don Nemith Builders, Ed & Jean King, Mettiki Coal, Railey Mountain Lake Vacations, Humberson Homes, Mountain Properties Real Estate, The Wisp Resort, and Sincell Publishing.

All in all, it promises to be a wonderful fun-filled kick off to summer here in the beautiful highlands of Western Maryland. Don't miss it!

To the Editor:

If permissible, I would like to share an excerpt of a recently received letter from our son, Sgt. John (Jack) Leuba, who is currently serving in Iraq for the second time, in active duty with the United States Marine Corps. Although it is difficult to remain silent about political views, it is my intention only to give readers another glimpse into the situation in Iraq, from one Marine's viewpoint. Our news media tends to grasp onto one sensational element of a story at a time, resulting in a lack of ability to picture the whole story. So, here is the excerpt, from a son who is loved and respected, and who offers all that he is to a cause ,as he can see it , in its entirety.

Sincerely,
Patty Wells

Dear Mom and Dad,

I thank you for the support you give to the effort of our nation here in Iraq. What I want to impress most is that we are willing to be here. We also need defined goals and objectives, and to be allowed to achieve those goals. The real story of this place is not being told. We are working to secure the future freedom of a nation with our blood and the blood of our brothers. We are steadfast in our resolve. Beyond the wish to bring democracy and freedom to this nation, we are protecting our own nation, our own people, our loved ones. Our presence here drew the enemy to us. It was to their advantage and in a place where they had shelter and support. We gave them the upper hand, but we didn't care. We had to hunt and destroy the insurgents without harming the innocent or destroying their homes, businesses, and/or religious structures. We limited the weapons we could use, and restricted our tactics. We could have leveled the city in a matter of hours, but that was not what we wanted, none of

REMEMBERING TO BE CALVINISTS

Memorial Day is a national holiday for remembering and honoring our nation's war dead and, more generally, all who have worn the uniform and born the arms of our country.

In the past, when someone has said, "We need to ensure that they have not died in vain," part of the implication was that the U.S.A. should prevail in the conflict. It is clear, in that respect, that the 58,000 Americans who died in the Vietnam War did die in vain. We lost that war. Revisionist historians, in this case of conservative stripe, try to claim that in the bigger war, the cold war, the Americans who died in Vietnam did not die in vain. The fact remains that the communists won the Vietnam War, and the communists firmly govern Vietnam today.

There is another issue in the question of "dying in vain:" was our cause just? Nearly 30 years after the fall of Saigon to the communists there is no consensus among Americans in answer to that question.

A third aspect of "dying in vain" is the question: Is America worth dying for?

We have always assumed the affirmative answer to that question. At least in the Civil War, or the War Between the States, as our southern neighbors call it, the answer is not clear. Did the Confederate war dead die in vain? 1) The Confederacy lost the war. 2) Insofar as their cause at least implied the defense of slavery, it was not just. 3) At a very minimum it is arguable that the Confederacy was not worth dying for.

We can also transfer this question to other countries and their war dead. Did the average, patriotic Germans who died defending the Third Reich die in vain? Did the average Russians who died in the armies of Stalinist Soviet Union while fighting those Germans die in vain?

In other words, at what point does a country lose its critical mass of core morality, in which loss it also surrenders the moral right to ask its citizens to die in its wars? Even after such loss, a government may still ask, demand, or coerce its citizens to fight and die in war; it simply no longer has the moral right to do so.

"When do soldiers die in vain?" is a political question, but it can only be answered theologically. Without reference to God there is no morality per se; there are only moral conventions. That is, without God there is no right in and of itself, there is only what we agree to be right or what we agree to be wrong.

Here is a curious thing: The political question, "When do soldiers die in vain?", can also not be answered without a right understanding of human nature. The horns of America's dilemma are this: Are human beings basically good or inherently depraved? The former view is that of the 17th century Dutch theologian Jakobus Arminius. The latter view is that of the 16th century theologian John Calvin.

I, myself, am a fervent Calvinist. I am also convinced that much, perhaps most, of what is wrong with America today arises from the endemic heresy of Arminianism.

For all their differences, President Clinton and President Bush are both Arminians, and both of them have been preaching the false gospel of Arminianism. President Bush shows his Arminian colors when he says, "Americans are good people. We are going to hunt down evildoers." The implication of this refrain is that Americans are fully human. Evildoers are, in some undefined way, less than human. The term "hunt down" is an activity that humans direct toward animals, or people whom we believe have behaved like animals.

Arminianism is feel-good religion, which is why it is so popular. Imagine a presidential debate in which the Arminian candidate declared, "Human beings are basically good," and the Calvinist candidate replied, "Human beings are totally depraved." If the Calvinist hadn't made you so mad, you would feel sorry for him.

Once upon a time in America, there was a group of politicians who campaigned on total depravity, and they won their campaign. They were the framers of the U.S. Constitution. The basic principles of American government (like the separation of powers both among the branches of government and between federal and state governments, and the limitation of executive power) are based upon the belief that human beings are basically depraved. That is to say, if you allow a human being the opportunity to do the wrong thing without any negative consequences, he is likely to do it.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica is not known for its Calvinistic bias. Under the heading, "Federalist, The," those documents written by James Madison and Alexander Hamilton in support of the newly framed Constitution, is this summary: "The authors assumed that the primary political motive of man was self-interest and that men, whether acting individually or collectively, were selfish and only imperfectly rational."

Perhaps someone will claim that that sentence is less than the full-tilt Calvinism to which I adhere. I yield the point, for the sake of argument. Adopt the golden words of the Encyclopaedia. Any other view of human nature is un-American insofar as being American is embodied in the U.S. Constitution.

This claim based upon more than 200 years of experimental evidence in the American Republic: When we claim goodness for our nature, we fall into depraved conduct; when we claim depravity for our nature, we ascend into good conduct. To recognize our depravity is to guard against it; to deny our depravity is to be its captive.

Whether the United States of America shall be worth dying for depends upon the willingness of Americans to return to a right belief in human depravity.

Our Turn to Say, "Thanks, America!"

As an Army solider who just completed a tour of duty in Iraq, serving God and country as a Catholic Army chaplain, side-by-side and along with over 200,000 of our many, many brave Coalition forces, I take the time this American Memorial Day weekend to say 'Thanks" to our American people for your support and prayers on behalf of our women and men who serve in the military.

Why I say thanks to all of you is because we, your military members, have the same values, hopes, and dreams for a more peaceful, kinder, gentler world for all of us to exist and to live within – even while and as we celebrate our ethnic, cultural, and religious diversities. We serve in this voluntary military with honor and at the pleasure and at the sacrifice of our American people and government leaders. Just as the majority of those serving in the military sacrifice much for these higher goals, we know that a great majority of our American citizens also sacrifice in order to support our government, diplomatic, economic, and military efforts to share our world's resources for the greater good of humankind.

Yes, we also, your military, cherish and live the high moral, patriotic values that our country stands for and has lived for throughout many generations. To the many veterans of foreign wars and veterans of past conflicts, we, your military of today, salute you as you have lived and contributed to the American dream of democracy and justice for all. To those fallen heroes of yesteryear and fallen heroes of today's war on terrorism, we, your military of today, stand in pride and in recognition knowing that your actions and sacrifice of life, both homeland and in foreign lands, will create a safer and brighter future for all of our world occupants.

Yes, Americans can and must remain very proud of their military women and men who are living and sacrificing their very lives, so that our world will become more just and secure. We all do this together as a nation – your military, our government, and you, the people, one nation of many nations, under God, indivisible, for liberty and justice with all. We must collectively continue our efforts to build a safer world. Very positive actions and efforts are happening in Iraq and in many other areas of the Middle East. The vast majority of the Middle East populations wants our presence and wants our assistance and protection. Please do not hold back your prayers and your support for our military women and men. We, your military, pledge not only our moral allegiance and actions, but our very lives, to join you in these efforts. Because we know of your expectations, contributions, and standards, we, your military, join you in these collective efforts. We do say, "Thanks, America," for not avoiding nor ignoring the difficult tasks and measures before us as we help our nation and other nations who are in such great need of our shared resources, capabilities, and abilities, to make this world safer for all.

On this Memorial Day weekend, we all say thanks – especially to our loving Creator God, for the opportunity to be responsible stewards in sharing the many gifts we have as a nation. May we all remain faithful to God and to our country.

HIGH WINDS AND RAIN have been wreaking some havoc in several areas of Garrett County over the past week, primarily in the form of downed limbs and trees. One victim of a storm last Friday evening was this grand cherry tree that stood in the front yard of the James and Linda Cooper residence along Fingerboard Road. Mrs. Cooper said that the strong wind uprooted the tree at about 8 p.m. The top of the tree did significant damage to the porch of their house (below). She said that the power lines slowed the fall of the tree, likely saving the house from greater damage. Local volunteer fire department personnel were kept busy that evening as reports of downed trees and lines poured in from many areas of the county.

We can all be winners in this situation. This country is going to straighten itself out, with help. We are hunting down the insurgents and winning the support of the good. If we can handle ourselves properly, stay here and rebuild this country, it is going to be awesome. They will re-write the human condition–which was impossible just a year ago, unthinkable under a dictator's regime. If only we keep our national resolve to do the right thing. We must not be afraid, and we must stay committed.

I think that people deserve to know what the real deal is. These people, these insurgents, do not scare us. They scare old women and children. They are the same people that aided Hussein in subjugating the real people. If we leave now, when we are most needed, they will control this place, and they will multiply. They are not a current high threat (in an international sense), but they will be, if left unchecked.

I love you guys so much and appreciate everything you do. It's uplifting to know that your support is constant and unwaivering. Good stuff.

us. We wanted to save the city, even at the cost of our own lives. We still waved to the children as we were leaving the scene of the car-bombing where two of my friends died and one was severely wounded. Still, there are engagements. I believe that here is where we must be. We are trained to deal with this stress, we have the discipline, we have the mid-level leadership we need to do this right. The only issue is that we must be allowed to do it. The future of this nation, our own, and world stability are at stake, and we must not fail.

Bad For Our Economy
Bad For Our Environment

Multinational energy corporations want to clear-cut some of Western Maryland's most spectacular ridgelines in order to cash in on wind power tax breaks. Here are the facts about the effects of wind power in Western Maryland:

- "Wind factories" will require construction of miles of roads and power lines through some of our most sensitive habitat and recreational areas.
- The small amounts of power created by these turbines will be sold to consumers outside of Garrett County who won't have to live with the noise and visual pollution.
- There are no state or federal siting guidelines to ensure that these facilities are environmentally sound and do not harm significant cultural and ecological resources, endangered species and scenic viewsheds. Only wind power plants that are developed responsibly are environmentally benign.
- Wind power spins, but does not deliver, and will only provide electricity at an efficiency rate of only 25-30%.

FACT: Wind turbines in Thomas, WV, which can be seen day and night from many miles in all directions killed over 3,000 birds and bats last year alone! The wind power advocates projected only one or two deaths per tower per year! Backbone Mountain, the highest in Maryland, is a documented migratory flight path; thousands of birds will be killed every spring and fall. Native birds including hawks, eagles and owls will be threatened daily.

FACT: Property values will drop wherever views are ruined and turbine noise will be heard. Prospective land purchases will disappear due to the presence of the wind farms! Realtors and property owners will both suffer losses, real estate deals have already failed because of the projected Pleasant Valley windfarm.

"To destroy our environment in the process of saving our environment does not make common sense."

WIND FARM DEVELOPMENT WILL:

- Destroy Garrett County's natural beauty and unsurpassed viewshed and alter the ecological and cultural landscape forever.
- Be subsidized with your tax dollars.
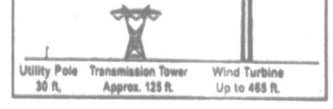
- Reap the benefits of tax credits and lower tax rates compared to other local farms and businesses.
- Negatively effect tourism, which currently brings Garrett County the most annual revenues.
- NOT create significant tax revenue for our local communities or the State of Maryland.
- NOT contribute to local employment opportunities for the long-term.
- Create light & noise pollution with tower strobe lights that are flashing day and night as well as continual noise up to 90 decibels from rotors and mechanical equipment.



FACT: Unless you speak up now, 68-400 foot tall windmills flashing strobe lights day and night will dominate 13 miles of Backbone Mountain's ridgeline from US Route 50 to Mountain Lake Park. The view from both sides of the mountain, day and night, will never be the same! Anyone who can see the mountain will see these 40-story machines.

FACT: Unless YOU ACT NOW, Garrett County will lose its natural scenic vistas, thousands more birds and bats will be killed, property values will drop, and the exploitation will continue.

PLEASE contact the Garrett County Commissioners now at 301-334-8970. Tell them that you do not believe a wind farm atop Backbone Mountain is appropriate for Garrett County. Urge the County Commissioners to enforce the County Plan for Development and to place a moratorium on all wind projects until appropriate and enforceable siting guidelines are developed.

PLEASE contact our Senators now and urge them to add an appropriate siting amendment to the energy bill before voting yes. Encourage them to work with the Senators from Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania to add limits on height and proximity to state parks and national forests.

Md. Arts Council Launches New Grants Program

The Maryland State Arts Council has launched a new grants program called ARTvantage that will foster and support the creativity of Maryland's artists and organizations to engage with communities, explore ways to innovatively serve the citizens of Maryland and expand arts participation to citizens who have limited opportunities to experience the arts.

ARTvantage is funded through the National Endowment for the Arts Challenge America Program. The program will provide awards from $5,000 to $20,000 for the period between July 1, 2004 and June 30, 2005. Completed applications must be submitted by Thursday, June 10, 2004.

Projects eligible for ARTvantage funding include, but are not limited to, community arts/cultural planning or implementation projects, intergenerational community arts projects, arts projects serving at-risk youth, and collaborative arts marketing projects. Also eligible are arts projects in institutional settings such as hospitals, detention centers, nursing facilities and assisted living centers, preservation/presentation projects of underserved art forms, multicultural and/or traditional arts infrastructure development projects, community after-school arts programs, and services for artists to extend participation opportunities for new audiences. Other projects may also fit the grant program criteria.

JWCC SUPPORTS GLAF – Junior Woman's Civic Club member Sandy Zakaluzny is shown presenting the organization's annual donation check to Garrett Lakes Arts Festival (GLAF) board member Mary Callis. The monies are earmarked for GLAF's Children's Arts Fund. JWCC is a social club that raises funds for various local charities. All women are welcome to join. More information is available by e-mailing the group at jwcc@iceweb.net or calling 301-387-5898.

All projects can either be new or existing and will be reviewed for the artistic merit of the project, ability of the applicant to carry out and evaluate the project, project impact and significance, financial feasibility, and program purpose.

Eligible applicants include not-for-profit organizations, including arts organizations and non arts organizations, colleges and universities, units of government, and organizations that are not-for-profit and have received tax exempt status from the U.S. Internal Revenue Service by March 31, 2003. All organizations must be in operation for one full fiscal year at the date of application.

Applications that reflect collaborations between two or more organizations are particularly encouraged, however, only one application per fiscal year is permitted. The ARTvantage program will provide no more than 50 percent of the organization's project budget.

Applicants interested in learning more about the ARTvantage grants program are invited to attend a workshop hosted by the Arts Council. The workshop is set for 4 to 6 p.m. Tuesday, June 1, at the Arts Council offices, 175 W. Ostend Street, Suite E in Baltimore City.

Grant applications may be obtained by calling the Maryland State Arts Council at 410-767-6555 or TDD/TTY 410-333-4519, or by connecting to the MSAC web site at www.msac.org. For more information about the ARTvantage program, persons may contact the program directors Shirley Howard at 410-767-6542 or Bonita Bush at 410-767-6476.

Completed applications must be postmarked on or before the deadline date and mailed to the MSAC office at 175 W. Ostend Street, Suite E, Baltimore, MD 21230. Applications may also be submitted through the web site listed above. Hand-delivered applications will not be accepted.

The mission of the Maryland State Arts Council is to encourage and invest in the advancement of the arts for the people of Maryland. In 2002, the Maryland arts industry contributed more than $898 million to the State's economy and provided more than 16,000 jobs to Maryland residents.

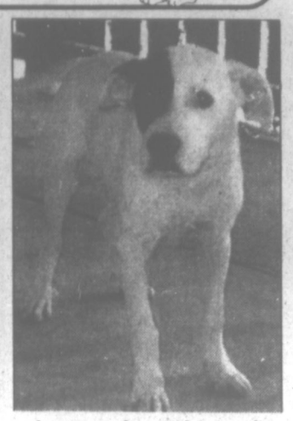
Adorable Adoptables



PRETTY PRECIOUS is a 2-year-old Siamese mix, who was brought to the Garrett County Animal Shelter because her family was moving away. Described as friendly, Precious is used to living inside and is litter-trained. Also available for adoption is Tinkerbell, a 5-month-old female mixed breed. "We couldn't decide what she was, but she sure is nice and has been at the shelter for two weeks since her owner gave her up," said a Humane Society spokesperson. Pictured below is Max, a male collie/husky mix, who was brought in as a stray. He will need to be vaccinated and neutered, and his hurt front paw examined by a veterinarian. "Come meet this furry guy," said the spokesperson. Buddy is a large black Lab mix with long fur. He is especially active, which is why he was given up by his owner. But he is neutered and a good dog; and as one can see, he sat nicely for his photo. There are several cats, neutered and spayed, who are also available for adoption. Last week's large black Lab was adopted, and the beagle and border collie were taken to rescues. For more information, persons may call the animal shelter at 301-334-3553. "Please check Petfinder.com when looking for a pet. It features dogs, cats, farm animals, and small-furry animals," added the spokesperson.
